Amen.

The. iii. collect for ayde against al perils

LYghten our darkenesse we beseche thee, O Lord, and by thy great mercy defende vs from all perils and daungers of this night, for the loue of thy onely sōne our sauiour Jesu christ Amen.

In the feastes of Christmas, Thepiphanie, Easter, Thascencion, Pentecost, and vpon Trinitie Sonday shall be sayed immediately after Benedictus this confessiō of our christiā fayth.

WHosoeuer will be saued: before all thynges it is necessarie that quicunq; vult &c.

he holde the Catholyke fayth.
Whiche fayth, excepte euery one doe kepe holy and vndefiled: without doubt he shall perysshe euerlastingly
And the Catholyke fayth is this: that we worshyp one God in Trinitie, and Trinitie in vnitie.
Neyther confoundyng the persones: nor deuydyng the substaunce.
For there is one person of the father, another of the sonne: and another of the holy goste.
But the Godhead of the father, of the sonne, and of the holy goste, is al one: ỹ glory equal, ỹ matestie coeternall.
Suche as the father is, such is ỹ sone: and suche is the holy goste.
The father vncreate, the sone vncreat: and the holy goste vncreate.
The father incomprehensible, the sone incomprehensible: and the holy goste incomprehensible.
The father eternal, the sonne eternal: and the holy ghoste eternal.
And yet there are not .iii. eternals: but one eternal.
As also there be not .iii. incomprehensibles, nor .iii. vncreated: but one vncreated, & one incomprehensible.
So likewise, the father is almyghtye: the sonne almyghtye, & the holy ghoste almyghtye.
And yet are they not .iii. almightyes: but one almightye.
So the father is God, the sonne God: and the holy ghoste God.
And yet are they not thre gods: but one God.
So likwise the father is Lord, ỹ sonne Lorde: and the holye ghoste Lorde.
And yet not thre lordes: but one Lorde.
For like as we be compelled by the christiã veritie: to acknowledge euery person by him selfe to be God and Lorde: So are we forbydden by the catholike religion: to say there be thre Gods, or thre Lordes.
The father is made of none: neyther created nor begotten.
The sone is of the father alone: not made nor created, but begotten.
The holy goste is of the father, and of ỹ sonne: nether made nor created, nor begotten, but procedinge.
So ther is one father, not .iii. fathers, one sonne, not .iii. sons: one holye goste, not thre holy ghostes.
And in this trinitie, none is afore nor after other: none is greater nor lesse then other.
But the whole thre persons: be coeternal together, and coequal.
So that in al thiges, as it is aforesaid: the vnite in Trinite, and the Trinitie in vnitie, is to be worshypped.
He therefore that will be saued: muste thus thinke of the Trinitie.
Furthermore, it is necessarye to euerlastinge saluacion: that he also beleue ryghtly in ỹ incarnacion of oure lord Jesu Christ
For the right fayth is, that we beleue and confesse: that our Lorde Jesus Christ, the son of god, is God & man.
God of the substaunce of the father, begotten before the worldes: and man of the substaunce of his mother, borne in the worlde.
Perfect God & perfect man: of a reasonable soule, & humane flesh subsistinge Equall to the father, as touchinge hys Godhead: and inferior to the father, touchynge his manhode.
Who although he be God and mã: yet he is not two, but one Christ.
One, not by conuersion of the Godhead into flesh: but by takyng of the manhode into God.
One altogether, not by confusion of substaunce: but by vnitie of person.
For as the reasonable soule and flesh is one man: So God and man is one Christe.
Who suffred for our saluacion: descended into hel, rose againe the third day from the dead.
He ascended into heauen, he sytteth on the ryghthande of the father, God almightie: from whence he shall come to iudge the quicke and dead.
At whose comminge all men shall ryse agayne with theyr bodyes: and shal geue

"geue accompt of their owne workes And they that haue done good, shall goe into lyfe euerlastyng: and they þ haue done euel, into euerlasting fyre.
This is the catholike fayth: which except a man beleue faythfully he cannot be saued.
Glory be the father, and to the sonne:
and to the holy ghost
As it was in the begynnyng, is nowe, and euer shall be: worlde without ende. Amen.

¶ The.i. Chapter.

IN the begynnynge • God created heauē and erth. The erth was voide and emptie, and darknes was vpon the face of the depe, and the spirit of god moued vpō the face of the waters. And God sayd: let there be made lyghte, and there was lyghte made. And God sawe the lyghte that it was good. And God made a dyuysyon betwene the lyghte and darknesse. And GOD called the lyghte, day: and the darcknes called he Night. And the euening and the mornyng was made one daye. And God sayde: let there be a fyrmamēt betwene the waters, & let it make a diuisyon betwene waters & waters. And God made the fyrmament, & set a dyuision betwene the waters which wer vnder the fyrmamēt, and the waters, that wer aboue the firmamēt: And it was so. And God called the fyrmamēt, heauē. The euenynge also and the mornyng was made the seconde day. And God sayd: • let the waters vnder heauen be gathered together into one place, that the dry lande maye be sene. And so it came to passe. And God called the dry lande, Earth: and the gatherig together of waters called he the seas. And God sawe that it was good. And God sayd: let the earth bryng forthe grene herbe, whiche maye engendre sede: & frutfull tree, yeldig frute after his kynd, whose sede maye be in it selfe vpon the erth: And it came so to passe. And the earth brought forth grene herbe, makynge sede after hys kynde: and tree yeldyng frute, whose sede was in it selfe after his kynde. And God sawe that it was good. The euenyng also & the mornyng was made the thirde day. And God sayde: • let there be made lyghtes in the firmamēt of heauen, and let thē make a differēce betwene the day and the nyght: and let them be vnto signes, & vnto appoynted seasons: and vnto daies, & vnto yeres: And • let thē be vnto lyghtes in the fyrmament of heauen: that they may gyue light vpō the erth. And so it came to passe. And GOD made • two great lyghtes: a greater lyghte to rule the daye, and a lesse lyghte to rule the nyght: (And he made) sterres also: And God set theym in the firmamēt of heauē, that they myght gyue light vpon the earth & that they might rule the daye & the night, and to make a differēce betwene the lyght and the darkenesse. And God sawe that it was good. The euening also & the mornynge was made the fourth daye. And God sayde: • let the waters bryg forth moning creatures that hath life and foule that maye flye vpon the earth in the face of the firmament of heauen. And God created great whalles, & euery lyuig and mouyng creature, whyche the waters brought forth after their kynde: and euery fethered foule after their kynde. And God sawe that it was good. And God blessed them, sayng: Growe and encrease, & fil the waters of the sea, & let fetthered foules be multyplyed in the erth. The euening also and the mornyng was made the fifth daye. And God said: let the earth bryng forth liuyng creature after his kind: catel, wormе and beaste of the erth after his kynde: & so it came to passe. And God made the beaste of the erth after his kynde, and catell after theyr kind: & euery thing that creepeth vpō the earth after his kynde. And God sawe that it was good. And God sayde: let vs make mā in our ymage, after our likenes, and let them haue rule of the fyshe of the sea, & foule of the ayre, & catel, and al the erth, & of euery creping thing that creepeth vpon the erth. And so God created man in his owne ymage, in the • ymage of God created he hym, & male & female created he them. And God blessed theim, and God sayde vnto them: Grow and increase, & replenish the erth, & subdue it: & haue • dominion of the fy͏̉ sh of the sea, and foule of the ayre, & of euery lyuyng thing that moueth vpon the erth. And God sayd: beholde: • I haue geue you euery herbe, & sowing sede, whiche is in the vpper face of al the erth: & euery tre in the which is the frute of tre, & that soweth sede, that they maye be meate vnto you. To euery beast of the erth also, & to euery byrde of the ayre, and to euerye suche thyng as creapeth vpon the earth, (wherin is a liuing soule,) I haue gyuē al greneslie of herbe to be meate. And it came so to passe. And God saw euery thing that he had made: • and beholde it was exceading good. The euening also and the mornyng was made the syxte daye.

¶ The.ii. Chapter.

A THe heauēs also & the erth were fynis-shed, & al the hoost of thē. And in the seuēth day god ended his worke which he had made: • In the seuenthe daye also Ex.xx.b. he rested from all his worke, which he had De.iiii.b. made. And God blessed the seuenth daye, & sanctified it, because that in it he had rested from all his worke, whiche God ordeyned to make. These are the generacios of the heauens and of the erth, when they were created: in the daye when the Lorde God made the erth, and the heauens: and euery plante of the felde, before it was in the earth: & euery herbe of the felde, before it grewe. For the Lord God had not caused it to rayne vpon the erth, neyther was there a man to tyl the grounde. And there went vp a myste from of the erth, and watered the whole face of the grounde.

B The Lord God also • shope man, eue Genes. dust from of the grounde, and • breathed xviii.d into his nastrelles the breth of lyfe, & Adā Sap.x.a. was made a lyuynge soule. And the Lorde Ada. Tobi. God planted a garden estward from Edē, viii.b. and there he put man whom he had made.
Edē. Ecclesi. Moreouer oute of the grounde made the xxxiii.d Lorde God to growe, euerye tre that was vi.Cozin. pleasaunt to the syght, and commodyous xv.f. for meate. The • tree of lyfe also, and the • Pisoue. tre of knowlege of good and of euyll, was iii.c. in the myddes of the garden.
Apoc. ii.d And oute of Eden there went forth a riuer to watere the gardē. And from thēce 4. riuers. it was deuided, & became into fower hea-des. The name of one is • Pison: The 7. Ecclesi. same is it that compasseth the whole lande xxiiii.c. of Heuilah, where there is gold: & the gold of the lāde is good: There is also Bedellū, & the Onix stone. The name of the seconde ryuer is Gyhon: the same is it that compasseth the whole lande of Ethiopia. The
2. name of the thyrde riuer is Hydechel, and it 3. goeth towarde the estsyde of Assyria. And 4. the fowrth ryuer is Euphrates.

C The Lorde God also toke Adam, & put a cōmaundemēt hym into the gardyne of Eden, that he myght dresse and kepe it. And the Lorde God cōmaunded Adam, saying: Eatynge, thou shalte eate of euery tre of the garden.
But as touchyng the tree of knowlege of good and euyll, thou shalte not eate of it: Eue, what daye soeuer thou eatest therof thou shalte dye the death. And agayne, the Lorde God sayd: It is not good that Ada should be alone: I wil make him an helpe, whiche may be presente with hym. And so out of the grounde shope the Lorde God euery beaste of the felde, and euerye foule of the ayre, and brought it vnto man: that he myght se how he would call it. For like wyse as man himselfe named euery lyuing thyng, euen so was the name therof. Adam him selfe therefore named the names vnto all catell, and foule of the ayre, and to euer-ry beaste of the felde. And for man founde he not an helpe, that might be presēt with hym. The Lorde God also caused a slumber to fall vpon Adam, and he slept. And he toke one of his ribbes, & closed vp the flesh in stede therof. And the rybbe whiche the Lorde God had taken from man, • made he a woman, and brought her vnto man. And man sayd: This is now bone of my bones, & flesh of my flesh. She shalbe called woman, because she was taken out of manne.
For this cause shal a man leaue his father and his mother, & shalbe ioyned with hys wife: & they • shal become one flesche. And they wer both naked, the mā & hys wife: and were not ashamed.

¶ The. iii. Chapter.

BVt the serpent was subtiller then eue-ry beast of the felde, which the Lord God made: And he sayd vnto the wo-mā: yea, hath the Lord God sayde: ye shall not eate of euery tre of the gardē? And the womā said to the serpēt: we eat of the frute of the tre of the gardē, but as for the frute of the tre which is i the middes of the gar-dē, God hath sayde: ye shall not eate of it, neyther shall ye touche it, lest happlye ye dye. And • the serpent sayde vnto the woman: ye shall not dye the death, but God doeth knowe that the same daye that ye eate therof, your eyes shalbe opened, & ye shalbe euē as goddes, knowyng good and euyll. And so the • woman (seyng that the same tre was good to eate, and lusty to the eyes, and that the same tre was pleasaunte to get wysedome) toke of the frute therof, and dyd eate, and gaue vnto her husbande beyng with her, whiche dyd eate also. And the eyes of them both were opened: & they knewe that they were naked. And they sowed fyg leaues together, and made them selues aperns. And they heard the voice of the Lorde God walckynge in the gardē in the coole of the daye. And Adam and hys wyfe hyd themselues from the presence of the Lord God, among the trees of the garden. And the Lorde God called Adam, and sayd vnto hym: wher art thou? which said: I heard thy voyce in the garden, and was afrayed, because I was naked: and hid my selfe. And he sayde: Who tolde thee that thou wast naked? hast thou not eate of the same tre, concernyng the which I cōmādeded the, that thou shouldst not eate of it?
And Adam said: The woman whom thou gauest to be with me, she gaue me of the tre, & I did eate. And the Lord God sayde vnto the womā: why hast thou done this?

And

And the woman sayde: yonder serpēt begyled me, & I did eate. And the Lorde God sayde vnto the serpent: because thou hast done this, thou art cursed aboue al catell, and aboue euery beast of the felde. Vpon thy belly shalt thou go, & dust shalt thou eate all the dayes of thy lyfe: I wyll also put enmitie betwene the and the woma, betwene thy sede and her sede: • The same shal treade downe thy head, & thou shalt treade vpō his hele. But vnto the woman he said: In multiplyinge, wil I multiplye thy sorowe & thy conceauynge: In sorowe shalt thou bring furth childrē: & thy lust shal perraine to thy husbande, and he shall haue the rule of the. Vnto Adā he said: Because thou hast herkened vnto the voice of thy wyfe, & hast eatē of the tre (cōcernyng the whyche I commaunded the, sayinge: Thou shalte not eate of it) cursed is the groūde for thy sake. In sorow shalt thou eate of it, al the daies of thy lyfe. Thorne also and thistle shal it cause to grow vnto the, and thou shalte eate the herbe of the felde: In the sweate of thy face shalt thou eate breade, til thou be turned againe into the groūde: for out of it wast thou taken, in as much as thou • art dust, & vnto dust shalt thou be turned againe. And Adā called his wyues name Heua, because she was the mother of al liuig. Vnto the same Adam also and to his wyfe did the Lorde God make leetherne garmentes, & clothed thē. And the Lorde God sayde: Beholde, yonder man hath bene euen as one of vs, that he might knowe good and euel. And nowe least haply he put furth his hāde, & take also of the tre of lyfe & eate, & liue for euer. And the Lorde God sente them furth frō the garden of Edē, to dresse the groūde that he was taken out of. And so he droue out man, and at the east side of the garden of Edē, he set Cherubins: & the glistering flame of a shārpynge swerde, to kepe the waye of the tre of lyfe.

Adā knew Heua his wyfe: who cōceauig, did beare Cain, sayinge: I haue gotte • a mā of the Lord. And she proceadig furth, brought furthe hys brother Habell: & Habell was a keper of shepe. But Cain was a tiller of the groūde. And in processe of daies it cāe to passe, that Cain brought of the frute of the groūde an oblacion vnto the Lord. Habel also brought of the firstliges of his shepe, & of the fat therof. And the Lorde had respect vnto • Habel, & to his oblaciō. But vnto Cain & to his offring he had no respect. For the whiche cause Cain was exceding wroth, & his countenāce abated. And the Lorde sayde vnto Cain: why art thou wroth, and why is thy countenaunce abated: if thou do wel, shal there not be a promociō? And yf thou dost not wel, lieth not thy synne in the dores? Vnto the also pertaineth the lust therof, & thou shalt haue dominiō ouer it. And Cain spake vnto Habel his brother, (let vs go furthe.) And it fortuned • whē they were in the felde, Cain rose vp against Habel his brother, and slue him. And the Lord said vnto Cain: Where is Habel thy brother? Which said: I wot not: Am I my brothers keper? And he said: what hast thou done? • The voyce of thy brothers bloude crieth vnto me out of the groūde: and now art thou cursed from the erth, which hath opened her mouth, to receaue thy brothers bloude from thy hād. If thou tyl the groūde, it shall not proceade to yelde vnto the her strengthe. • Fugitiue, & a bacabounde shalt thou be in the erth. And Cain said vnto the Lord: My • iniquitie is more, then that it may be forgeuen: Beholde, thou hast caste me out this daye from the vpper face of the erth, and from thy face shal I be hid: Fugitiue also and a bagabounde shal I be in the erth. And it shall cum to passe: euery one that fyndeth me, shall slaye me. And the Lord said vnto him: (it shal not be so) yea, but whosoeuer slayeth Cain, it shalbe auenged seuen folde. And the Lorde set a marke vpon Cain, lest any mā fyndynge him, should kyll him. And Cain went out from the presence of the Lord, and dwelte in the lāde of Nod eastwarde frō Eden. Cain also knew his wyfe, which cōceaued and beare Henoch: and buildig a citie, he called the name of the same citie after the name of his sonne Henoch. Vnto the same Henoch was borne Irad. Irad begat Mehuiael, and Mehuiael begat Methusael. Methusael begat Lamech. And Lamech toke vnto him two wyues: The name of the one was Ada, & the name of the other was Zilla. And Ada begat Jabel, whyche was the Father of such as dwel in the tētes, & of such as haue catel. His brothers name was Thubal, which was the father of such as hādle harpe & orgon. And Zilla also begat Thubalcain, which wroughte cōningly euery craft of brasse and of yrō. The syster of Thubalcain, was Naema. And Lamech said vnto his wyues, Ada, & Zilla. Heare my voyce ye wyues of Lamech, herken vnto my speche: I haue slayne a man to the wounding of my selfe, & a ponge mā, to mine owne punishmēt. And all the dayes of Jared were nyne hundreth and lixtye and two yeres: And he died. Henoch liued lyxtie and fyue yeres, and begat Methuselah. And Henoch • walked with God after he begat Methuselah, thze hundreth yeres, and begat sonnes and doughters. And all the dayes of Henoch were thze hundreth lixtye and fyue yeres. AND it came to passe, that mā began to be multiplied in the vpper face of the erth, & there were doughters borne vnto thē. The sōnes of god also saw the doughters of mē that they were faire, & they toke them wiues from among al that they had chosen. in the tenth moneth, and in the fyrst daye of the same moneth, were the toppes of the mountaynes sene. ¶ The. xi. Chapter.

ALl the whole erth was of one lāguage and lyke ſpech. And it happened whā they wēt forth frō the eaſt, they foūde a plaine in the lāde of Sinhar, & there they abode. And they ſayd euery one to his neyghbour. Come, let vs prepare bricke, & burne them in the fire. And they had bricke for ſtone, and ſlyme had they in ſtede of mozter. And they ſayde: Goo to, let vs build vs a citie & a tower, whoſe top may reache vnto heauen: and let vs make vs a name, leſt happely we be ſcatred abzod ito the vp-per face of the whole earth. But the Lozde came downe, to ſe the citie & tower which the childzē of men builded. And the Lozde ſayd: Beholde, the people is one, and they haue al one language, and this they begin to do, neither wyll it be reſtrayned frō thā, what ſo euer they haue ymagyned to doe. Come on, let vs goe downe, and confounde their lāguage, that euery one perceaue not his neyghboures ſpeach. And ſo the Lozde ſcatred them frome that place into the vp-per face of all the earth. And they left of to builde the citie. And therfoze is the name of it called * Babell, bycauſe the Lozde dyd there confounde the language of all the earthe. And from thence dyd the Lozde

And Sem lyued (after he begat Arphachsad) fyue hundreth yeares, and begat sons and doughters. Arphachsad lyued fyue & thirty yeres, and begat Selah. And Arphachsad lyued (after he begat Selah) foure hundreth and thre yeares, and begat sons and doughters. Selah lyued thirtie yeares, & begat Eber. And Selah lyued (after he begat Eber) foure hundreth and thre yeres, and begat sonnes and doughters. Eber lyued foure and thirtie yeres, and begat Peleg: And Eber lyued (after he begat Peleg) foure hundreth and thirty yeres, & begat sonnes and doughters: Peleg lyued thirty yeres and begat Reu: And Peleg lyued (after he begat Reu) two hundreth & nyne yeares, and begat sonnes and doughters. And Haran died in the presence of Terah his father, in the lande of his nativitie, that is in Ur of the Chaldees: Abram & Nahor tooke them wyues: The name of Abrams wyfe was Sarai, and the name of Nahors wife was Milca, the doughter of Haran the father of Milca, & the father of Jisca. But Sarai was baren, & had no childe. And Terah toke Abram his son, and Lot the sonne of Haran, his sones sonne, & Sara, his doughter in lawe, his son Abrams wyfe: and they departed together fro Ur of the Chaldees, that they might go into the lande of Canaan, and they came vnto Haran, and dwelt there: And the dayes of Terah, were two hundreth and fiue yeres, and Terah dyed in Haran.

AND the Lord sayd vnto Abram: get the out of thy countrey, & out of thy nation, & from thy fathers house vnto a lande that I shal shew the. And I wil make of the a greate people, & wyll bleste the, and make thy name greate, that thou mayest be euen a blessinge. I wyl also bleste them that bleste the, and curse them that curse the: and in the all kynredes of the earth be blessed. And so Abram departed euen as the Lorde spake vnto him, and Lot went with him. And Abram was seuentie & fiue yeres olde, when he departed out of Haran. And Abram toke Sarai hys wife, and Lot his brothers sonne, & al their substaunce that they had in possession: and the soules that they had begotte in Haran: And they departed, that they might come into the land of Chanaan: And into the lande of Chanaan they came. Abram passed thorowe the lande vnto the place of Sichem, and vnto the playne of Moreh: And the Cananyte was then in the land. And the Lord apeared vnto Abram, & sayd: Vnto thy sede wyll I geue this lande. And there builded he an aulter vnto the Lord, euen where he had apeared vnto hi. And removing thence vnto a mountayne that was eastward fro Bethel, he pitched his tent: having Bethel on the West syde, & Hai on the East. And he buildynge an aulter vnto the Lord, dyd call on the name of the Lord. And Abram went forth going and departyng toward the Southe. But there was a dearthe in that lande, and therefore went Abram downe into Egipt, that he might soiourne there, for there was a sore derth in the land. And it happened whe he was come nere to entre into Egipt, he sayde vnto Sarai hys wyfe: Beholde, I knowe that thou arte a faire woman to loke vpon: therfore shal it come to passe, that when the Egipcians se the, they shall saye: She is hys wife. And they shall kyll me, but they shall saue the alyue. Saye (I pray the) that thou art my sister, that I may fare wel for thy sake: & that my soule maye liue thorow thy occasion. And so it happened, whe Abram was come into Egipte, the Egiptians beheld the woma for she was very faire. The princes also of Pharao sawe her, and commended her before Pharao, and the woma was taken into Pharaos house. And he truely entreated Abram well for her sake, and he had sheepe and oxen, and he alles, men seruauntes and mayde seruauntes, she alles, and camels. And the Lorde smote Pharao and his house with great plages, because of Sarai Abrams wife. And Pharao calling Abram, sayde: Why halte thou done thys vnto me? Why dyddest thou not tell me, that she was thy wyfe? Nowe therfore beholde, there is thy wife, take her, & go thy waye: And Pharao gaue the men cõmaundement, concerninge him: & they cõuayed hym forthe, & hys wyfe, & all that he had

AND so Abrā gat him vp out of Egipt, he & his wife, and al that he had, & Lot with hym, toward the south: & Abrā was very rich, in catel in syluer & golde. And he went forth on his iourney fro the south toward Bethel, vnto the place where his tent had bene at the begynning, betwene Bethel and Hai, euen vnto the place of the aulter which he had made there at the first: and there Abram called on the name of the Lorde. Lot also which went with Abram, had shepe, catel and tentes, and the lande was not able to receaue them that they might dwell together: For the substaunce of their riches was great, and they could not dwell together. And there fell a stryfe betwene the herdmen of Abrams catel, and the herdmen of Lots catell. Moreouer the Chananites and the Pherezites dwelled at that time in the lād. Then sayde Abram vnto Lot: Let there be no strife (I praye the) betwene thee & me, and betwene my herdmen and thyne, for we be brethren. Is not all the whole lāde before the? Departe I praye the fro me. yf thou wylt take the left hande, I will go to the right: or yf thou departe to the right hande, I wyll go to the lefte. And so Lot lyfte vp his eyes, beheld al the cōtrie of Iordane, which was a plenteous cōtrie of water euery where, before the Lorde destroyed Sodome & Gomorra: euen as the garden of the Lord, like the lande of Egipt as thou comest vnto Zoar. Then Lot chose all the playne contrye of Iordane, & toke hys iourney from the east: and so departed the one brother frō the other. Abram dwelled in the lande of Chanaan. And Lot abode in the cities of the playne, and tented vntil Sodome. But the men of Sodome were wicked, & exceding sinners before the Lord. And the Lorde sayde vnto Abrā, after that Lot was departed frō him: Lyft vp thyne eyes nowe, & looke from the place where thou art northwarde, southward, eastward and westwarde, for all the lande whyche thou seest, wyl I geue vnto the and to thy sede for euer. And I wyll make thy sede, as the dust of the earth: so that yf a man can numbre the dust of the earth, thē shall thy sede also be numbred. Aryse and walke about in the lande, after the length of it, and after the bredth therof: for I wyll geue it vnto the. Then Abrā takig downe his tēt, came and dwelled in the oke grouе of Mamre, namely in Ebron, and builded there an altar vnto the Lorde.

The.xiiii. Chapter.

AND it chaūced in the dayes of Amraphael kinge of Sinehar, Arioch king of Ellasar, Kedorlaomor king of Elam, & Thideal kyng of the nations, & they made warre with Bera king of Sodome, & with Birsa kinge of Gomorra, & with Sineab king of Adama, & with Semeabar kig of Zeboi & with the kig of Bela: the same is Zoar. All these were ioyned together in the dale of Zyddym, where the salt Sea is. For twelue yeare were they subiect to kynge Kedorlaomor, and in the thyrtene yeare rebelled: But in the fourtene yeare came Kedorlaomor & the kynges that were with him, and smote the giātes in Astaroth Karnaim, & the Suzims in Ham, and the Emims in the playne of Kariathim & the Horims in mount Seir, vnto the plaine of Pharā, which bordreth vpon the wildernesse. And the returning, came to En Mispat, whyche is Cades, and smote al the countrey of the Amalechites, & also the Amorites that dwelt in Hazezō Thamar. And there went out the kyng of Sodome and the kyng of Gomorra, & the kyng of Adama, and the kyng of Zeboim, and the kyng of Bela, which is Zoar. And they stroke batel with them in the dale of Ziddim, that is to say, with Kedorlaomor the kyng of Elā, and with Thideal kyng of the Nacions, & with Amraphael kig of Synhar. And wyth Arioch kyng of Ellasar: foure kynges agaynste fyue. And the dale of Siddym was full of slyme pyttes. And the kynge of Sodome and Gomorra fled, and fell there: And they that remayned, fled to the mountayne. And they taken all the goodes of Sodome and Gomorra, and all theyr vytalles, wente theyr waye. And they carryed awaye Lot also Abrams brothers sonne, and his goodes (for he dwelled at Sodom) and departed. And there came one that had escaped, and tolde Abram the Hebrewe which dwelled in the oke grouе of Mamre the Amorite, brother of Eshol and brother of Aner, whiche were cōfederate with Abrā. Who hō Abram heard that his brother was taken, he harnessed his fresly younge men borne in hys owne house, three hundred & eyghtene, and folowed on them vntyll Dan. And he was set in aray vpō them by nyght, he and his seruauntes, and smote them, and pursued them vnto Hoba (whiche lyeth on the left hande of Damascus) & recouered all the goodes, and also brought agayne hys brother Lot, and hys goodes, the women also and the people. After that he retourned agayne from the slaughter of Kedorlaomor & of the kinges that were with him, came the kyng of Sodome forth to mete hym in the playne valey, which is the kinges dale. And Melchisedech kyng of Salem brought forth bread and wyne: for he was

was the Priest of the moste hyghest God, and blessed him, sayinge: Blessed be Abram vnto the high God, possessor of heauen and earth. And blessed be the high God which hathe delyuered thyne enemyes into thyne hande. And Abram gaue hym tythes of all. And the kynge of Sodome sayde vnto Abram: Geue me the soules, and take the goodes to thy selfe. And Abram answered the kynge of Sodome: I haue lyfte vp my hande vnto the Lorde the hye God possessor of heauen and earthe, that I wyll not take of all that is thyne so muche as a threde or shoulachet, lest thou shuldest say: I haue made Abram ryche: Saue onelye that which the yonge men haue eaten, and the partes of the men whiche wente wyth me, Aner, Escholl, and Mamre, which shal take their partes.

AFter these thinges were done, the worde of the Lord came vnto Abram in a visiō, saying: feare not Abrā, I am thy defence, & thy reward shalbe exceading great. And Abrā said: Lord god what wylt thou geue me, when I go childlesse, and the childe of the stewardshyppe of my house is this Eleazar of Damasco? And Abram sayd: Se, to me thou hast geuen no sede: Lo, a lad borne in my house is myne heyre. And beholde, the worde of the Lorde came vnto hym, sayinge: He shall not be thyne heyre, but one that shall come out of thyne owne bodye shalbe thyne heyre. And he brought hym out, and sayd: loke by vnto heauen, and tell the * starres, yf thou be able to numbre them. And he sayde vnto hym: * euen so shall thy sede be. And Abram * beleued the Lorde, and that counted he to him for righteousnes. And again he sayde vnto hym: I am the Lorde that brought the out of Ur of the Chaldees, to geue the this lande, and that thou myghtest possesse it. And he sayde: Lorde God, whereby shall I knowe that I shall possesse it? He answered vnto hym: * take an heyfer of three yeare olde, and a she Goate of thre yeare olde, and a thre yeare olde ram, a turtledoue also and a yonge pygeon. He toke therefore al these vnto hym, and deuided them in the myddes, and layde euery pece, one agaynste another. But the foules deuyded he not. And when the birdes fell on the carcasses, Abram droue them awaye. And when the Sunne was downe there fell a slomber vpon Abram. And lo, a darcke and great feare fell vpon hym. And he sayde vnto Abram: knowe this of a surety, that thy * sede shalbe a straunger in a lande that perteyneth not vnto them. And shal serue them, and they shal entreat them euell. * iiii. hundred yeares. But the nacyon whome they shall serue, wyll I iudge. And afterwarde shall they come out with great substaunce. And thou shalt go with thy fathers in peace, & shalt be buryed in a good olde age. But in the fourth generacion they shall come hyther agayne: for the wyckednes of the Amorites is not yet full. And it came to passe that when the Sunne was downe, there was a darke cloude: behold, ther was a smoking fornace, and a fyrebrande goinge betwene the sayde peces. In that same daye the Lord made a couenaunt with Abrā saying: vnto thy * sede haue I geuen thys lande, frome the ryuer of Egypte, euen vnto the great ryuer, the ryuer of Euphrates, the Kenites, the Kenizites, and the Cadmonytes, the Hethites, and the Pherezites, and the Giaūtes, the Amorytes also, and the Cananites, the Gergosites, & the Jebusites

And Sarai said vnto Abrā: behold, * the Lord hath restrayned me, that I cā not beare. * I pray the go in vnto my mayde, peraduenture I may be edified by her. And Abram obeyed the voyce of Sarai. And Sarai Abrams wyfe toke Hagar her mayd the Egyptian (after Abram had dwelled ten yeare in the lande of Canaan) and gaue her to her husbande Abram to be hys wyfe. Whiche when he wente in vnto Agar, she conceaued. And whē she saw that she had cōceaued, her maistres was dispised in her eyes. And Sarai sayde vnto Abram: Thou doest me wronge: I haue geuen my mayde into thy bosome. Whiche seynge that she hath conceaued, I am dispised in her eyes, the Lorde iudge betwene me and the. But Abram sayde to Sarai: beholde, thy mayde is in thy hande, do with her as it pleaseth the. And when Sarai fared foule with her, she fled frome the face of her. And the Angel of the Lorde founde her beside a fountaine of water in the wyldernesse: euen by the wel that is in the waye to Sur. And he sayde: Hagar Sarais mayde, whence comest thou, and whyther wylte thou go? She sayd: I flee frome the face of my maistresse Sarai. And the Angell of the Lorde sayde vnto her: Retourne to thy maystresse agayne, and submyt thy selfe vnder her handes. And agayne, the angell of the Lorde sayde vnto her: In encreasynge I wyll encrease thy sede, and it shall not be numbred for multytude. And the men sayde vnto Lot: yf thou haue here yet anye sonne in lawe, oz sonnes, oz doughters, oz what so euer thou hast in the citye, bring it out of this place: foz we must destroye this place because the crie of thē is great * before the face of God: foz the Lord hath sent vs to destroy it. And Lot wēt out & spake vnto his sons in law, which maried his doughters, saying: stād vp: get you out of this place, foz the Lorde wyl ouerthrowe this cytie. But he semed as though he had mocked, vnto his sons in law. And whā the morning arose, the āgels caused Lot to spede him, sayinge: * Stande vp, take thy wyfe & thy two doughters at hād, lest thou perishe in the synne of the citie. And as he prolonged the tyme, the men caughte both hym, hys wyfe, and hys two doughters by the handes, the Lorde being mercyfull vnto hym: and they broughte hym forth and set hym wythout the cytye. It fortuned when they had brought them out, he sayde: Saue thy lyfe, and loke not behynde the, neither tarye thou in al thys playne contre. Saue thy selfe in the mountayne, lest thou perysche. And Lot sayd vnto thē: Oh nay Lorde: beholde, thy seruāte hath founde grace in thy sight, & thou hast magnifyed thy mercy, whyche thou haste shewed vnto me i saupng my lyfe. Behold, I can not be saued in the mountayne, lest some mischaunce fall vpon me and I dye: Behold, here is a cytye by to fle vnto, euen yonder lytle one: Oh let me be saued there: is it not a litle one, and my soule shal liue? And he sayd to hym: See, I haue receaued thy request, as concerning this thyng, that I wyll not ouerthrowe thys cityc foz the, whiche thou hast spoken. Haste the, and be saued there, foz I can do nothynge tyl thou be come thither. And therefoze the name of the citie is called Zoar. And the sunne was now risen vpon the earth, whē Lot was entred ito Zoar. Thē the Lorde rained vpon * Sodome & Gomozra, brimston & fire frō the Lord out of heauen: & ouerthrew those cities and all the region, & all that dwelled in the cities, and all that grewe vpon the earth. But Lots wyfe loked behynde her, and was turned into a pyller of sale. Abraham rysinge vp early, got hym to the place where he stode before the presence of God, and lokinge towarde Sodome & Gomozra, and towarde al the land of that contrye, he loked: and behold, the smoke of the cōtreye arose as the smoke of a fornace. And it happened that when God destroyed the cityes of that region he thought vpon Abraham, and sent Lot * out frome the middes of the ouerthrowing, whē he ouerthrew the cities where Lot dwelled. And Lot departed oute of Zoar, and dwelled in the mountaynes with his .ii. doughters, foz he feared to tary in Zoar, but dwelled in a caue, he & hys .ii. doughters. And the elder sayde vnto the yonger: our father is olde, and there is not a man in the earth to come in vnto vs after the maner of al the worlde. Come, we wyll make our father drōkē with wine and lye with him, that we may saue sede of our father. And so they made their father drōken with wine that night. * And the elder doughter went & laye with her father. And he perceaued it not neither whē she lai doune, nether whē she rose vp. And on the morow it happened that the elder sayde vnto the yonger: behold, yester night lay I with my father. Let vs make him drōkē with wine this night also, & go thou & lye with hym, that we mai raise vp sted of our father. And they made their father drōkē wyth wyne that night also, and the younger arose and lay with him. And he perceaued it not: nether when she laye downe, nether whē she rose vp. Thus were both the doughters of Lot wyth chylde by their father. And the elder bare a son, & called hys name Moab. The same is the father of the Moabites vnto thys daye. And the yonger bare a son also, and called his name Ben Ammi. The same is the father of the chyldren of Ammon vnto thys daye.

And Abimelech called Abraham & sayd vnto him: what haste thou done vnto vs, and what haue I offended the that thou hast brought on me and on my kyngdome so great a syn? Thou hast done deedes vnto me that ought not to be done. And Abimelech sayde vnto Abrahā: what sawest thou that thou hast done this thyng? Abraham answered. For I sayde: surelye the feare of God is not in this place, & they shal slaye me for my wifes sake: yet in very deed she is my sister, for she is the doughter of my father: thoughe she be not the doughter of my mother: and she became my wyfe. And after God caused me to wander oute of my fathers house, I sayde vnto her: • Thys kyndnesse shalt thou shewe vnto me in al places where we come, that thou say of me: he is my brother. Then toke Abimelech shepe and oxen, men seruauntes & women seruauntes, and gaue them vnto Abraham, and delyuered him Sara his wife agayne. And Abimelech sayde: Beholde, my lande lieth before the, dwel where it pleaseth the best. But vnto Sara he sayde: See, I haue geuen thy brother a thousand peces of siluer: beholde, it shalbe a couerynge of thyne eyes, vnto all that are with thee, & thus with all was she reproued. And so Abrahā prayed vnto God, & God healed Abymelech & his wyfe, and hys maydens, & they bare chyldren. ¶ The. xxi. Chapter.

THe Lord visited Sara as he had sayd: & dyd vnto her • accordyng as he had promysed. For Sara was with child, and bare Abrahā a son in his olde age, euē the same season whiche the Lorde had appointed him. And Abraham called his sonnes name that was borne vnto him, which Sara • bare him, Isaac: And Abraham • circūcised Isaac his sonne, when he was viii. dayes olde: as God commaūded hym. And Abraham was an hūdreth yeare old, when hys sonne Isaac was borne vnto hym. But Sara sayde: God hathe made me a laughynge stocke: so that all that heare, will laughe at me. She sayde also: Who would haue sayde vnto Abrahā, that Sara should haue geuē chyldren sucke? for I haue borne hym a son in hys olde age. The childe grewe, & was wened: and Abraham made a greate feaste, the same daye that Isaac was wened. Sara sawe also the sonne of Hagar the Egiptiā (which she had born vnto Abraham) to be a mocker, wherefore she sayde vnto Abraham: • Putte awaye this bōdmayde & her sonne: For the sonne of thys bondewoman shall not be heyre wyth my son Isaac: and thys sayinge was very greuous in Abrahams syght, because of hys sonne. And God sayde vnto Abraham: let it not be greuous in thy syght, because of the lad, and of thy bondmayd: All that Sara hath sayde vnto thee, heare her voyce: for • in Isaac shall thy seed be called. Moze ouer of the sonne of the bondwoman wyl I make a naciō: because he is thy • seed. And so Abrahā arose vp early in the morninge, & tooke breade, and a bottell of water, & gaue it vnto Hagar, puttynge it on her shoulder with the lad also, and sent her awaye: who departyng, wandred vp & downe in the wyldernes of Beer Saba. And the water was spente in the bottel, & she cast the lad vnder a bushe, & went and sat on the other syde a great way, as it were a bowe shote of: for she sayde: I wyll not se the death of the chylde. And she syttynge downe on the other syde, lyfte vp her voyce and wept. And God heard the voyce of the chylde. And the angell of God called Hagar, out of heauen, and said vnto her: what ayleth the Hagar: Feare not, for God hath heard the voyce of the chylde, where he lyeth. Aryse, and lyfte vp the lad, and take hym in thy hande, for I wyl make of hym a great people. • And god opened her eyes: and she sawe • a wel of water. And she wēt and filled the bottel with water, and gaue the boy drike. And God was with the lad, and he greewe & dwelte in the wyldernesse, and became an archer. And he dwelt in the wyldernesse of Pharan. And hys mother got hym a wife out of the lande of Egipte. And it chaunced the same season that Abimelech & Phicol hys chiefe captayne spake vnto Abraham, saying: • God is with the in all that thou doest. And nowe therefore sweare vnto me eyē here by God, that thou wilt not hurt me nor my chyldren, nor my childrēs childre: but that thou shalte deale with me & the countreye where thou haste bene a straunger, accordyng vnto the kindnes that I haue shewed the. • And Abrahā sayd: I wyl sweare. And Abrahā rebuked Abimelech for a • wel of water, which Abimelechs seruauntes had violentlye taken awaye. And Abimelch sayde: I wote not who hath done this thige. Also thou toldest

And Abimelech said vnto Abzahā: what meane these.vii. ewe lambes which thou hast set by themselues? He answered: For these vii. lambes shalt thou take of my hande, that they may be a witnes vnto me, that I haue digged this well. Wherefore the place is called Beer Seba, because that there they swore both of thē. Thus made they a bonde together at Beer Seba. And Abimelech & Phicol his chiefe captayne rose vp, and turned againe vnto the lād of the Philistines. And Abzahā plāted a wod in Beer Seba, & called there on the name of the Lord, the euerlastynge God, & so gouerned in the Philistines lād a lōg seasō.

AFter these sayinges it happened that God dyd * proue Abzahā, & said vnto him: Abzaham? Whiche answered: here am I. And he sayde: take thy onely sonne Isahac whom thou louest, and get the vnto the lāde Moria, and sacrifice him there for a sacrifice vpon one of the mountaynes, which I wil shewe the. Than Abzaham rose vp early in the morynge, & sadled his asse, and toke two of his yonge men with him, & Isahac hys sonne: and cloue wod for the sacrifice, and rose vp & got him to the place which God had appointed him. The thirde day Abzaham lift vp his eyes, and sawe the place a far of, and said vnto his yonge mē: byde here with the asse, I & the lad wil go yonder & worshippe, & come againe vnto you. And Abzaham toke the wod of the sacrifice and layde it vpō Isahac his sonne: but he him selfe toke fyre in his hād & a knieffe. And they wēt both of them together. Ths spake Isahac vnto Abzaham his father, & said: My father, & And he answered: here am I my sonne. He said: Se here is fyre and wod, but where is the sheepe for sacrifice? Abzaham answered: my sonne, God wil prouyde him a sheepe for sacrifice. And so they went both together. And whē they cāe vnto the place which god had shewed him, Abzaham made an aulter there, and dzessed the wod, and bounde Isahac hys sonne, and * laide him on the aulter, aboue vpon the wod. And Abzaham stretchynge forth his hande, toke the knife to haue killed his sonne. And the angell of the Lorde called vnto him from heaue, saying: Abzaham, Abzaham: And he said: here am I. And he sayde, laye not thy hande vpō the childe, neither do any thing at al vnto him: for now I know that thou feareste god, * & hast for my sake not spared thine only son. And Abzaham lyfringe vp his eyes, loked about: & behold, there was a rāme caught by the hornes in a thicket. And he went & toke the rāme & offred him vp for a sacrifice in the steade of his sonne. And Abzahā called the name of the place, the Lord wil see. As it is said this daye: in the mounte wil the Lord be sene. And the angel of the Lord cryed vnto Abzaham frō heauen the seconde time, & said: * by my selfe haue I swoze (saith the Lord) because thou haste done this thinge, and hast not spared thy onely sonne: that in blessinge I will blesse the, and in multiplyinge I will multiplye thy seed as the starres of heauen, & as the sande which is vpon the sea syde. And thy seed shall possesse the gate of his enemies. * And in thy seed shal al the nacions of the erth be blessed, because thou haste hearde my voice. So turned Abzahā againe vnto his yonge men, and they rose vp and went together to Beer Seba: And Abzaham dwelt at Beer Seba. And it chaūsed after these thinges, that one told Abzahā, sayig: Beholde, * Milcha, she hathe also borne childrē vnto thy brother Nachor: * Hus his eldest sōne, & * Buz his brother, & Emuel the father of the Sirians, & Chesed, & Hazo, & Pildas, & Jedlaph, & Bethuel. And Bethuel begat Rebecca. These.viii. did Milcha beare to Nachor Abzahās brother. And his cōcubine called Rhuma, she bare also Tebah, and Gahan, Thaas and Mahaca. ¶ The.xxiii. Chapter.

But the seruaunt sayd vnto hym: peradventure the woman wyll not agree to come wyth me vnto thys lande: shall I bryng thy sonne agayne vnto the lande whyche thou cammest oute of? To whome Abraham answered: beware that thou bryngest not my sonne thyther agayne. And made hys camels to lye downe wythout the cytye by a wels syde of water, at euen: about the tyme, that women come out to drawe water. And he sayde: Lorde GOD of my master Abraham, sende me good spede this daye, and shewe mercye vnto my master Abraham. F Gen.23.b & 24.xxiiii.a
And I put the earyng vpon her face, and the bracelets vpon her handes. And I bowed my self, and wor̄hypped the Lord, and blessed the Lorde God of my mayster Abraham, whyche had brought me the ryght waye, to take my masters brothers doughter vnto hys sonne. Nowe also, yf ye wil deale mercyfully and truly with my mayster, tell me: and yf not, tell me also that I maye tourne me to the right hande or to the lefte. Than answered Laban, and Bathuel, sayinge: Thys sayinge is proceded euen out of the LORDE: we can not therfore saye vnto the, eyther good or bad: beholde, Rebecca is before thee, take her and go, that she may be thy masters sonnes wyfe, euen as God hath sayde.
Laba & Bathuel

And whan Abrahams seruaunte heard theyr wordes, he wor̄hypped the Lorde flat vpon the erth. And the seruaunte toke forth Jewelles of syluer, and Jewelles of golde, and raymente, and gaue theym to Rebecca. And vnto her brother, and to her mother, he gaue gyftes: and they dyd eate and drinke, both he and the men that were with hym, and tarryed all nyght. And when they rose vp in the morning, he sayd: let me departe vnto my master. Her brother and her mother answered: let the damsell abyde with vs a whyle, and let be but euen ten dayes, and than shal she go. He sayde G vnto theym: hynder me not: beholde, the Lorde hath prospered my iourney. Sende me awaye therfore, that I maye go vnto my master. And they sayde: we wyll call the damsell, and enquire at her mouthe.
Laudes Deo.
And they called forth Rebecca, and sayde vnto her: wylte thou go with this man? And ſhe anſwered: I wyll go. So they let Rebecca theyr ſiſter go, and her nurſe, and Abrahams ſeruaunte, and his men. And they bleſſed Rebecca, and ſayde vnto her: Thou arte oure ſyſter, growe vnto thouſande thouſandes, * and thy ſeed poſſeſſe the gate of their enemies. And Rebecca aroſe, and her damſels, and ſet them vpon the camels, and wente theyr waye after the man. And the ſeruaunte toke Rebecca, and went his waye. And Iſahac was commynge from the way of the well of the * lyuinge & ſeynge me: for he dwelt in the ſouthe countrey, and Iſahac was gone out to pray in the felde at the euentide. And he lyfte vp his eyes and ſawe the camels commynge. And Rebecca lyft vp her eyes: and when ſhe ſawe Iſahac, ſhe lighted of the camell, and ſayde vnto the ſeruaunte: what man is thys that commeth walkynge againſte vs in the felde? And the ſeruaunt ſaide: it is my maſter. Therfore ſhe toke her cloke, and put it aboute her: And the ſeruaunte tolde Iſahac all thynges that he had done. And Iſahac brought her into his mother Saras tent, and toke Rebecca, and ſhe became hys wyfe, and he loued her: and ſo Iſahac receaued comforte after his mother.

My father shal peraduenture fele me, and I shal seme vnto him as though I went aboute to begyle him, and so shal he bring a curse vpō me, and not a blessynge: & hys mother sayde vnto hym: vpon me be thy curse my sonne, onely heare my voyce, and go and

Jacob no chyldzen, she enuyed her syster, and sayde vnto Jacob: Geue me chyldzen, oz els I am but deade. And Jacob was wzothe wyth Rahell, sayinge: Am I in GODDES steade, whiche hepeth from thee, the frute of thy wombe? Then she sayd: here is my mayde Bilha, go in vnto her, and she shall beare vpon my lap, * that I may be encreased by Gen.16.a

a sonne. Then sayde Rahell. GOD hathe geuen sentence on my syde, and hathe also heard my voyce and hath geuē me a sonne.
Therfore called she him Dan. And Silha Rahels mayde conceaued agayne, and bare Jacob another sonne. And Rahell sayde: wyth Godlye wrestelynges haue Leas mayde bare Jacob a sonne. Than sayd Lea, Good lucke: and called his name Gad. And Silpha Leas mayde bare Ja-am I, for the doughters wyl call me blessed. And called his name, Aster. And Ruben wente oute in the dayes of the wheare harueste, and founde Mandragoras in the feldes, and broughte them vnto his mother Lea. Than sayde Rahell, to Lea: geue me of thy sonnes mandragoras. To whom Lea answered: Is it not ynoughe that thou hast taken awaye my husbande, but wouldest take awaye my sonnes mandragoras also? Than sayde Rahel: wel, let hym slepe with the this nyght, for thy son-nes mandragoras. And Jacob came frome the feldes at euen, and Lea wente oute to mete him, and sayde: come in to me, for I haue bought the with my sonnes mandra-

And God hearde Lea, that she conceaued and bare vnto Jacob the .v. sonne. Than sayde Lea: God hath geuen me a reward, because I gaue my maydē to my husbād, and she called him Jlachar. And Lea conceaued yet agayne, & bare Jacob the sixte me with a good dowrye. Nowe wyll my husbande dwell with me, bycause I haue borne him .vi. sonnes: and called his name Zabulon. After that she bare a doughter and called her name Dyna. And GOD remembred Rahel, he heard her, and made her fruteffull: so that she conceaued and bare a sonne, and sayde: God hathe taken away my rebuke. And she called his name Joseph, sayinge: The Lorde geue me yet another sonne. And as sone as Rahell had borne Joseph, Jacob sayde to Laban: sende me away that I may go vnto mine owne place and contrey, geue me my wyues and my children for whom I haue serued thee, and let me go: for thou knowest what ser-

But he said vnto him: thou knowest what but lytle that thou haddest before I came, and now it is encreased into a multytude:

and the Lord hath blessed the for my sake.
But nowe when shal I make prouysiō for thou wylt do thys one thynge for me, and then wyl I turne againe & fede thy shepe, the shepe that are spotted, and of dyuers for me to morowe, and shall come for my rewarde before thy face: and euerye one that is not speckled and partye among the goates, and blacke amonge the shepe, the same shall be lefte with me. And Laban sayde: Go to, would God it mighte be accordynge to thy saying. Therefore he toke out the same daye the he goates that were partye & of dyuerse colour, and all the shee goates that were spotted and party coloured, and all that had whyte in theym, and all the blacke amonge the shepe, and put them in the keppyng of hys sonnes, and set thre dayes iourney betwyxt hym selfe and Jacob. And so Jacob kepte the rest of La-bans shepe. Jacob toke roddes of grene popular, of Hasell, and of the Chestenut trees, and pylled whyte strakes in theym, and made the whyte appere in the roddes.

[But they that were whole: remayned grene: & thus was it made a partyable coloure.] And put the roddes which he had pylled, euē before the shepe, in the gutters & watering troughes, whē the shepe came to dryncke: that they should conceaue whē they came to dryncke. And the shepe conceaued before the roddes, and broughte forth lambes straked, spotted, and partye.
And Jacob parted the lambes, and turned the faces of the shepe towarde the spotted thynges, and towarde all maner of black, that was amonge the shepe of Laban: namely, puttynge his owne flockes by them selfe, and not puttyng them with Labans shepe. And it fortuned that in euerye rammyng tyme of the stronger shepe, Jacob layed the rodes before the eyes of the shepe in the gutters: namelye, that he myght make them conceaue before the rod des. But when the shepe were feble, he put them not in. And so the febler were Laman increaſed exceadyngly, & had a great ſlocke, maide ſeruauntes & mā ſeruauntes, camels, and alles.

And he wente before them and * fell on gen. 19.a

And he lyfte vp hys eyes, and sawe the belonge vnto the.] And he answered: they are the children which God hath geuen thy and theyr children, and dyd theyr obey-and dyd their obeysaunce. And laste of all came Joseph and Rahel, and did their o-

I maye fynde grace in the syghte of my Lorde. And Esau sayde: I haue ynoughe knowest, that the children are tender, and the ewes and kine with yong vnder myne but euen one daye, all the sheepe wil dye.

Oh let my Lorde go before his seruaunte,

So Esau went his way againe that same D cob heard that he had defyled Dyna hys doughter, hys sonnes beynge wyth their catell in the felde, and he helde his peace, vntyll they were come. And Hemor the father of Sichem wente oute vnto Jacob, to commen with hym. And when the sonheardе it, it greued them: And they were not a lytle wrothe, because he had wrought riages with vs: and geue your doughters vnto vs, and take oure doughters vnto you: and ye shall dwell with vs, and the lande shall be before you, dwell and doe therein And Sychem sayde vnto her fasonnes of Jacob answered to Sichem and Hemor his father talkynge amonge them selues deceitfullye, because he had defiled Dina their syster, and they sayde vnto them: we can not doe thys thinge, that we

But in this wyll we consent vnto you: If ye wyll be as we be, and all the men chyl-sed Hemor and Sychem hys sonne. And the younge man deferred not for to doe the thinge, bycause he had a luste to Jacobs doughter: he was also moste set by of all that were in his fathers house. Then He-mor and Sichem his sonne wente vnto the gate of their cytie and communed wyth and theyr substaunce and al their cattell

For they wyll dwell with vs.
And vnto Hemor and Sichem his sonne herkened all that wente oute of the gate were circumcised, whatsoeuer went oute at the gates of hys cytye. And it happened the thyrde daye (when it was paynfull to them) .ii. of the sonnes of Jacob, Simeon and Leui, Dinas brethren, toke ether of the hys + swerd and went into the citie boldly, and slewe al that was male, and slewe also Ge.49.a Hemor & Sichem his sonne with the edge Judi.9.a of the swearde: and toke Dina oute of Sy-chems house, and went their way. And the sonnes of Jacob commynge vpon the dead, spoyled the cytye, because they had defyled their sister: and toke their shepe, oxen and their asses, & whatsoeuer was in the citie & also in the feldes. And all their goodes and all their children, & their wyues toke they captiue, and made hauocke of all that was in the house. But Jacob sayde to Simeon and Leuy: ye haue troubled me, and made me stincke before the inhabytoures of the lād, before the Chananite, & the Pherezite: And I beynge fewe in numbre, they shall gather them selues together agaynste me, and slaye me, and so shall I and my house be destroyed. And they answered: shoulde they deal with our sister as with an whore?

¶ The.xxxv.Chapter.

AND God sayde vnto Jacob, aryse, and get the vp to Bethel, and dwell A there. And make there an aulter vnto God, that appeared vnto the + when Ge.28.c. thou fleddest frome the face of Esau thy brother. Then sayd Jacob vnto hys house-holde and to all that were with hym: put awaye the straunge + Goddes that are amonge you, & be cleane, and chaunge your Ge.31.c. garmentes, for we wyll rise and goe vp to Bethell: & wil make an aulter there, vnto God, whiche + heard me in the daye of my tribulation, and was with me in the waye Ge.28.b which I went. And they gaue vnto Jacob all the straunge Goddes whiche they had in their handes, & al their earinges whyche were were in their eares: & Jacob hid thē vnder an oke which was by Sichem. And when they departed, the feare of God fell vpon the cities that were rounde about thē. And they did not folowe after the sonnes of Jacob. So came Jacob to Luza whiche is in 16 the lande of Canaan: The same is Bethel, he and all the people that was with hym.

And he buil ded there an aulter, and called the place: The God of Bethell: Bycause that God apeared vnto him there, when he Ge.24.g fled frō the face of his brother. But * De-dora Rebeccas nourse, died: and was buried beneth Bethel vnder an oke and the name

And god apeared vnto * Jacob agayne after he came out of Mesopotamia, & blessed hym, and God sayde vnto hym: Thy name is Jacob: Notwithstanding thou shalt be Gen.32.f no more called * Jacob, but Jsraell shal be

And God sayde vnto him: * I am God al-Ge.17.a. mightie, growe and multiplye, people, & a multitude of people shall spryng of the: yea, Mat.i.a * kynges shall spynge out of thy loines.
And the lande which I gaue Abraham and Jsaac, vnto I geue vnto thee, and vnto thy seed after thee, wyl I geue that lande also.
And so God departed vp frome him in the place where he had talked with him. And Jacob set vp a marke in the place where he talked with him: euen a mark of stone, and powred drincke offringe theron, & powred also oyle thereon, & Jacob called the name C of the place where God spake with hym, * Bethel. And they departed from Bethel, the house and when he was but a felde breeth frome of God. Ephrath, Rahel began to trauel: and in trauelig, she was in perill. And it happened as she was in paynes of her labour, the midwife sayde vnto her: feare not, for thys sonne is thyne also. Thus as her soule was a departinge, that she * must die, she called i.Ch.4.d his name. Bē Ony: (the son of my sorowe) But hys father called hym Ben Jamin.
(The sonne of the right hande.) And thus died Rahel and was buried in the way to Ephrath, which is Bethlehē. And Jacob set vp a stone vpon her graue, which is called Rahels graue stone vnto thys daye.
And Jsraell went thence, and pitched vp micth.4.c his tente beyonde the * tower of Eder. And it chaunced as Jsraell dwelte in the lande, Ge.49.a that Ruben went vp and lay * with Bilha D his fathers concubine: & it came to Jsraels eare. The sons of Jacob were. xii. in nūbre: The sonnes of Lea, Ruben Jacobs eldest sonne, and Simeon, Leui, Juda, Jsachar, and Zabulon. The sonnes of Rahell, Joseph & Ben Jamin. The sonnes of Bilha Rahels mayde: Dan & Nepthali. The son-nes of Silpha Leas mayde, Gad and Aser.
These are the sons of Jacob, whiche were borne him i Mesopotamia. And so Jacob came vnto Jsaac hys father to Mamre, vnto Kiriath Arba, which is Hebrō: where Abraham and Jsaac soiourned as straun-gers. And the dayes of Jsaac were an hun-dreth and. lxxx. yeres: and Jsaac fell sycke and dyed, and was putte vnto hys people being olde and full of dayes. And hys sōs nes Esau and Jacob buryed hym.

IAcob dwelt in the lande wherein hys father was a straunger, euen in the lande of Canaan. These are the generacions of Jacob: whē Joseph was.xbii. yere, he kept shepe with hys brethren: And the lad was with the sonnes of Bilha & wyth the sonnes of Zilpha his fathers wyues. And he brought vnto their father an euyl sayinge of them. But Israell loued Joseph moore then al his chyldren, because he begat hym in hys olde age: and he made hym a coate of manye coloures. And when his brethren sawe that their father loued hym moore then all hys brethren, they hated hym, & could not speake praceably vnto hym. Moreouer when Joseph * hadde dreamed a Ge.13.b. dreame, he tolde it hys brethren, whyche hated hym yet the mooze. And he sayde vnto them: Heare, I pray you this dreame whyche I haue dreamed: Behold, we were byndynge sheues in the felde: And loe, my sheffe arose, and stode vp right, and youres stode rounde about, and made obeysaunce to my sheffe. To whom his brethren sayde: shalt thou be oure kynge in dede? Or shalt thou in dede haue dominion ouer vs? And they hated hym yet the mooze, because of hys dreames and of hys woordes. And he dreamed yet another dreame, and tolde it his brethren, sayinge: Beholde, I haue had one dreame mooze: Me thought the sunne and the Moone, and. xi. starres made obeysaunce to me. And whē he had told it vnto his father and his brethren, his father reproued hym, and sayde vnto hym: What is this dreame whyche thou haste dreamed? Shal I and thy mother, and thy brethren come to fall on the grounde before thee? And his brethren hated hym, * but his fa- Lue.ii.g ther noted the sayinge. Hys brethren also went to kepe theyr fathers shepe in Sychem, and Israell sayde vnto Joseph: Doe not thy brethren kepe in Sychem: Come, and I wyl sende the to them. He answered * here am I, And he sayde vnto hym: Goe, 1.reg.3.a and see whether it be well wyth thy brethren and the shepe and brynge me woorde agayne. And so he sent hym out of the vale of Hebron, and he went to Sichem. And a certayne man founde hym, and beholde he was wandrynge oute of his waye in the felde, and the man asked hym: what seekest thou? He answered: I seke my brethren, tell me I praye the where they kepe shepe. And the manne sayde: they are departed hence, for I hearde theym saye: let vs goe vnto Dothan. Thus went Joseph after his brethren, and founde them in Dothan. And when they sawe hym afarre of before he came at the, they toke counsell agaynste hym, for to slay hym. For one sayde to another: Behold, thys * dreamer commeth: come nowe therefore and let vs slay hym, and caste him into some pytte, and we wyll saye a wycked beast hathe deuoured hym, and we shall se what wil come of his dreames. When Ruben hearde that, he ridde him oute of their handes, and sayde: we wyll not kyll hym. And Ruben said moreouer vnto theym: shede not hys * bloud, but caste hym into thys pyt that is in the wyldernesse, and laye no hande vpon him, (Thus he sayde.) Namely, that he myght ryd him oute of theyr handes, and delyuer hym to hys father agayne. And it happened that when Joseph was come vnto his brethren, they strypte him oute of his coate, his partie coloured coate that was vpō hym, and they toke him and caste him into an emptye pyt: wherein was no water. And they sat theym downe to eate bread: And as they lyft vp theyr eyes and loked aboute, there came a companye of Jsmaelites frome Gilead, and theyr camels laden wyth spicerye, baulme, and myrre, and were goynge downe to carye it into Egipte. And Juda sayde vnto hys brethren: what auayleth it yf we slepe oure brother, and kepe his bloud secrete? come an and lette vs * sell hym to the Jsmaelites, and let not oure handes be vpon him: for he is our brother and oure flesshe: and his brethren were contente. Than as the Madianites, marchaunte men passed by: they drewe and lyfte Joseph oute of the pytte, and solde hym vnto the Jsmaelytes for twentie peces of syluer. And they brought him into Egypte. And when Ruben came agayne vnto the pyt and founde not Joseph there, he rent hys clothes and wente agayne vnto hys brethren, sayynge: the ladde is not ponder, and whyther shall I go? And they toke Josephs coate, and kylled a goate, and dypped the coate in the bloud: And they sent that partye coloured coate: and brought it vnto their father, and sayde: This haue we founde: se whether it be thy sonnes coate or no. And he knewe it, sayynge: it is my sonnes coate, a wycked beaste hath * deuoured him: Joseph is rēt in peces. And Jacob rent his clothes, and put sacke clothe aboute hys loynes, and sorowed for his sonne a longe season. But all hys sonnes and all hys doughters rose vp to cōfort him. Neuertheless, he would not be cōforted, but said: I wyll go downe into the graue vnto my sonne, mournyng. And thus his father wepte for him. And the Madianites * solde him in Egipt, vnto Putiphar a lorde of Pharaos, and hys chiefe stewarde.

IT fortuned at that tyme, that Judas wente downe from hys brethren, and gat hym to a man called Hira of Odollam: and there he sawe the doughter of a manne called * Sua, a Canaanite. And he toke her, and went in to her. And she conceaued and bare a sonne, and called hys name Er. And she conceaued agayne, and bare a sonne, and called hym Onan. And she conceaued again, and bare yet a sonne, whom she called Sela: and he was at Chesyb when she bare hym. And Juda gaue Er hys eldest sonne a wyfe, whose name was Thamar. And Er Judas eldest sonne was wycked in the syghte of the Lorde: and the Lorde slue him. And Judas sayde vnto Onan: go in to thy brothers wife, and mary her, that thou maiest * styre vp sede vnto thy brother. And whō Onan perceaued that the sede shoulde not be hys, therefore when he were in to hys brothers wyfe, he spylled it on the groūde: and gaue not sede vnto hys brother. And the thynge whyche he dyd, displeased the Lorde: wherefore he slue hym also. Than sayde Juda to Thamar his doughter in lawe, remayne a wydowe at thy fathers house, tyll Sela my sonne be growen: for he sayde: leste peraduenture he dye also, as his brethren dyd. And Thamar wente & dwelte in her fathers house. And in processe of tyme, the doughter of Sua Judas wyfe, dyed. Then Juda when he had lefte mourning, went vnto his shepe shereers to Thymnath, he and his frende Hira of Odollam. And one tolde Thamar, sayynge: beholde, thy father in lawe goeth vp to Thymnath, to * shere hys shepe. And she put her wydowes garmentes off from her, and couered her with a cloke, and delgised her selfe: and sat her downe in a common place whyche is by the hye wayes syde to Thimnath, for because she saw that Sela was growen, and she was not geuen vnto hym to wyfe. When Juda sawe her, he thought at had bene an whore, because she had couered her face. And he turned to her vnto the waye, and sayde: come I praye

the, let me lye with the, for he knewe not that it was his doughter in lawe. And ſhe answered: what wylt thou gene me, for to lye with me? Than sayde he: I wil sende the a kyd from the flocke. She said. Thā geue me a pledge tyll thou sende it. He sayde, what pledge shal I gene the. She answered: thy signet, thy bracelet, and thy staffe that is in thy hande. And he gaue it her, and lay by her, & she was with childe by him. And she gat her vp, and went and put her mantel from her, and put on her wydowes rayment e. And Judas sente the kyd by his frende of Odollam, for to receaue his pledge againe from the wyfes hande: But he founde her not. Thā asked he the men of the same place, saying: where is the whore that sat openlye by the waye syde? They answered: there was no whore here. He came therfore to Juda agayne, and sayde vnto hym: I can not fynde her, and also the men of the place sayde, that there was no whore there. And Juda said, let her take it to her, lest we be shamed. Beholde I sent the kyd, and thou hast not founde her. And it came to passe that after. iii. monethes, one tolde Juda, saying: Thamar thy doughter in law hath played the whore, and with playing the whore is become great with childe. And Juda sayd: bringe her forth, that she may be brente. And when they brought her forth, she sēt to her father in lawe, sayinge: by the man vnto whom these thinges pertayne, am I with childe: And said also, loke whose are this seale, bracelet, and this staffe. And Juda knew them, and saide: she hath bene more ryghteous than I, because I gaue her not to Sela my sonne. And he lay with her nomore. It fortuned when tyme was come that she shoulde be delyuered, beholde, there was. ii. twinnes in her wombe. And it fortuned that whan she trauailed, the one put out his hande, & the mydwyfe toke & bounde a red threde about it, saying: this is come out fyrst. And it chaūsed, that he plucked his hande backe againe, & beholde his brother came out. And she sayde: wherfore haste thou rente a rente vpō the? and called hys name, Pharez. Afterwarde came oute his brother that had the red threde aboute his hāde, and his name was called Zarah.

Joseph was brought vnto Egypte, and Putiphar * a Lorde of Pharaos (and his cheefe ſtewarde an Egiptiā) bought him of the Ismaelites, which had brought him thither. And God was with Joseph, & he became a luckie mā, continuinge in the house of his master the Egipcian. And his * master saw that God was with him, & that God made all that he did to prosper in hys hande. And Joseph founde grace in his masters sight, & serued him. And made him rular of his house, and put all that he had in his hāde. And it fortuned from the tyme that he had made him rular ouer his house, & ouer all that he had, the Lorde * blessed the Egipcians house for Josephs sake: and the blessynge of the Lorde was vpon al that he had in the house, and in the felde. And therfore he left all that he had in Josephs hande, & loked vpon nothynge that was with him, saue only on the bread whiche he did eate. And Joseph was a * goodly persone & a wel fauored. And it fortuned after this, that his masters wife cast her eyes vpon Joseph, and said: come lye with me. But he refused, and sayde to his masters wife: Beholde, my master woteth not what he hathe in the house with me, and hath commytted all that he hathe to my hande. There is no man greater in the house than I, neither hath he kept any thing from me, but onely the, because thou arte hys wyfe. Howe than can I do this greate wickednes, & sin against God? And after thys maner spake she to Joseph daye by daye: but he harkened not vnto her, to slepe nere her: or to be in her companye. And it fortuned on a certayne conuenient day, that Joseph entred into the house, to do hys busynes: & there was none of the houshold by, in the house. And she caught him by the garmēt, sayig: come slepe with me. And he lefte his garment in her hande and fled, and got him oute. And it chaunsed when she saw that he had left his garment in her hande, and was fled out. (And she not regarded) she called vnto the men of her house, and tolde them, sayinge: See, he hath brought in an Hebrew vnto vs to do vs shame: for he came in to me, for to haue slept with me: and I began to crye with a loude voyce. And when he hearde that I lyft vp my voyce and cried, he lefte his garment with me, and fled awaye, and got him out. And she laied vp his garmēt by her: vntil her Lord came home. And she tolde him with these wordes, saying: This Hebrues seruaūt which thou hast brought vnto vs, came in to me to do me shame, but as soone as I lyft vp my voyce & cried, he lefte hys garmente with me, & fled oute. When his master (beynge to lyght of credence) hearde these wordes of his wyfe, whiche she tolde him, sayinge: after thys maner dyd thy seruaunte to me, he waxed wrothe. And the master toke Joseph & put him in * prison, euen into the place where

And the keper of the prison committed to Josephs hande, al the prisoners that wer in the prisō house. And whatsoeuer was done there, that dyd he. And the keper of the prison loked vnto nothyng that was vnder his hād, seyng that the Lord was with hym. For whatsoeuer he dyd, the Lorde made it to prosspere.

AND it chaunced after this, that the butler of the kynge of Egypte and his baker had offended theyr lord the king of Egipt. And Pharao was angry against his two officers: against the chiefe butler & the chiefe baker: & put theym in warde in his chiefe stewardes house: euen in the prison and place where Joseph was bownd. And the chiefe steward gaue Joseph a charge with them, & he serued them. And they cōtinued a ceason in warde. And they dreamed either of them in one night: both the butler and the baker of the kynge of Egipte, whiche were bounde in the prison house, either of them his dreame: & eche mānes dreame of a sondry interpretaciō. Whō Joseph came in vnto thē in the morning, & loked vpō thē: beholde, they were sad. And he asked Pharaos officers that were with him in his masters warde, sayynge: wherefore loke ye so sadlye to daye? They answered hym: we haue dreamed a dreame, and haue no man to declare it. And Joseph sayde vnto theym: Do not interpretinges belong to God? yet tell me. And the chiefe butler tolde hys dreame to Joseph, and sayde vnto hym: In my dreame me thoughte there stode a vyne before me, and in the vine were thre braunches, & it was as though it budded, & her blossoms shote furth: and the grapes thereof ware rype. And I had Pharaos cup in my hande and tooke of the grapes, and wronge theim into Pharaos cup, and deliuered Pharaos cup into hys hande. And Joseph sayde vnto hym: this is the interpretacyon of it. The thre braunches are thre dayes: for within thre dayes shal Pharao lift vp thine head, and restore thee vnto thyne offyce agayne: and thou shalt delyuer Pharaos cup into his hande, after the olde maner, wherein thou wast wont to geue hym dryncke. But yf thou thincke on me with the, whē thou arte in good case, shewe mercye (I praye thee) vnto me: and make mencyon of me to Pharao, and bryngе me out of this house. For I was stolen oute of the lande of the Hebrues, & here also haue I done nothyng at all, wherefore they should haue put me into this dongeon. When the chiefe baker sawe that the interpretacyon was good, he sayde vnto Joseph: me thoughte also in my dreame, that I had three wicker basshettes on my heade. And in the vppermost basket: there was of all maner bakemeates for Pharao. And the birdes did eate them out of the basket that was vpon my heade.

And Joseph answered and sayde: this is the interpretacyon therof. The .iii. basketes are three dayes, for thys daye three dayes shall Pharao take thy head from thee, and shall hange the on a tree, and the brydes shall eat the fleshe from the. And it came to passe the thirde daye whiche was Pharaos * byrthe daye, that he made a feaste vnto all his seruauntes. And he lyfted vp the heade of the chiefe butler, & of the chiefe baker among his seruauntes. And restored the chiefe butler vnto his butler hyppe agayne: which also reched the cup into Pharaos hāde: but he hanged the chiefe baker: euen as Joseph had interpreted vnto thē. Neyther did the chiefe butler remēbre Joseph, but forgat hym. Mark. vi. a

AND it fortuned after .ii. yeres that Pharao dreamed: & behold, he stode by a riuers syde, & there came oute of the riuer seuen goodly kine & fat fleshed, & fed in a medowe: & seuen other kine came vp after theym out of the ryuer, euil fauored, and leane fleshed, and stode by the other kyne vpon the brynche of the ryuer. And the euyll fauoured and leane fleshed kyne dyd eate vp the seuen well fauoured and fate kyne: and Pharao awoke. And he slepte agayne, and dreamed the seconde tyme. And beholde, seuen eares of corne grewe vpon one stalcke, ranche & goodly: and agayne seuē thinne eares blasted with the east winde sprang vp after them: & the seuen thinne eares deuoured the seuē rāche and full eares: and Pharao awaked: and se, it was a dreame. And when the morninge came his spirite was troubled. And he sent and called for all the sothe sayers of Egypte, and all the wyse men thereof, and Pharao tolde them hys dreame: but there was none of theym that coulde interprete it vnto Pharao. Thā spake the chiefe butler vnto Pharao, sayynge: I do remembre my fautes this daye. Pharao beynge angry with his seruauntes, put in warde in the chiefe stewardes house, bothe me, and the chiefe baker. And we dreamed both of vs in one nyght, and eche mannes dreame of sondrye interpretacyō. And there was with vs a yõge mã, an Hebrue bozne, seruaũt vnto the cheef Steward: To whõ whã we tolde them, he declared our dzeames to vs accozdynge to ether of our dzeames. And as he declared them vnto vs, euẽ so it came to passe. For he restozed me to myne office agayne, & hanged him. Pharao sente therfoze, and called Joseph: and pl. cliii. b they brought him hastely out of ✦ pzyson And he shaued hym selfe, and chaunged his rayment, & came in to Pharao. And Pharao sayde vnto Joseph: I haue sene a dzeame, and no man can interpretate it, and I haue heard saye of the, that assoone as thou hearest a dzeame, thou cãst interpretate it. Joseph answered Pharao, sayinge: Not I, but God shall geue Pharao an answer of peace. And Pharao sayde vnto Joseph: in my dzeame me thought I stode by a ryuers syde, & there came out of the ryuer seuen fat fleshed, and well fauozed kyne, & fed in the meddowe. And then seuẽ other kyne came vp after them, pooze and verye euell fauozed, and leane fleshed: suche as I neuer sawe in all this lande of Egypte, they were so euell fauored. And they seuen leane and euel fauozed kyne did eat vp the first seuẽ fat kine. And when they had eaten them vp, a mã couldc not perceaue that they had eaten the: but they were stil as euel fauozed as they were at the begynninge: & I awoke. And I sawe agayne in my dzeame, and beholde seuen eares sprange oute of one stalke, full and fayze: & seuen other eares againe, withered thin, & blasted with the east winde, sprãge vp after them: & the thin eares deuoured the seuen good eares. And I haue tolde it vnto the sothe sayers, but there was nomã that couldc tel, what it meaneth. And Joseph answered Pharao: bothe Pharaos dzeames are one, and God hathe shewed Pharao what he is about to do. The seuen good kin are seuen yeres: and the seuen good eares are seuen yeres also, and it is but one dzeame. Lykewyse, the seuen thin and euel fauoured kin that came out after them, are seuen yeres: & the seuen empeye, b and blasted eares, shalbe seuen yeres of hunger. This whiche I haue said vnto Pharao is it that God is about to do: and sheweth it vnto Pharao. Beholde there come seuen yere of greate plenteousnes throughe oute all the lande of Egypte. And againe, there shalarise after thẽ, seuẽ yeres of hunger. And all the plẽteousnes shalbe forgotten in the lande of Egypte, and the hunger shall consume the lande: nether shall the plenteousnes be knowne in the lande, by reason of that hunger that shall come after, for it shalbe exceadynge great. And as concerninge that the dzeame was doubled vnto Pharao the seconde tyme, beholde, the thing is certainly pzepared of God, & God will shortly bring it to passe. Nowe therefoze, let Pharao pzouide for a man of vnderstandynge and wysedome, and let him ouer the lande of Egypte: And let Pharao do this alsb, that he make officers ouer the lande, and take vp the fyfth parte of the lande of Egypte, in the seuen plenteous yeres, and let them gather all the foode of these good yeres that come, & laye vp corne vnder the hãde of Pharao, that there maye be foode in the Cities, and there let them kepe it: that there maye be founde in store in the lãde, against the seuen yeares of hunger, which shall come in the lande of Egipte: that the lande perysshe not throwe hunger. And the saying pleased Pharao & al his seruaũtes. Then sayde Pharao vnto his seruaũtes: where shal we fynde suche a man as thys is, in whõ is the spirit of God? And Pharao sayde vnto Joseph: for as muche as God hath shewed the all this, there is no mã of vnderstandynge or of wysedõe lyke vnto the. And he toke of his synge from his hãde, & put it vpon Josephs hãde, and arayed hym in clothe of rayne, and put a golden cheyne about his necke, and let him vpõ the best charet that he had, saue one. And they cryed before hym a lowde the kyte: & Pharao made him ruler ouer all the lãde of Egypte. And Pharao sayd vnto Joseph: I am Pha- f raõ, wythout the shal no man lyfte vp his hande or foote in all the lande of Egypte. And he called Josephs name Zaphnath 7. Salvatoris mundi. Paena. And he gaue hym to wyfe Asnath the doughter of Putiphar, priest of On. Than went Joseph abzode in the lande of Egypte. And he was thirty yere olde whõ he stode before Pharao kynge of Egypte. And Joseph departynge from the presence of Pharao, went throw out all the lande of Egypte. And in the seuen plenteous yeares they made stores, and gathered vp all the foode of the seuen plenteous yeares whiche were in the lande of Egypte, and layed vp the same in the cities. The foode of the feldes that grewe rounde aboute euery citye, layed he vp in the same. And Joseph lapde vp corne in store, lyke vnto the sande of the sea, in multytude oute of measure, vntyl he lefte nomb̃ynge: For it was without numbre. And vnto Joseph

And the derth was thorow out all the lande. And Joseph opened all that was in the cytes, and solde vnto the Egipcians. For the hunger waxed sore in all the lande of Egypte. And all countreys came to Egypte to Joseph for to bye corne: because that the hunger was sore in all landes.

For lo, it is euen in my sacke. And their hert fayled them: and they were astonyed, & sayde one to another: why hath God dealt thus with vs. And they came vnto Jacob their father vnto the lande of Canaan, and tolde hym all that had happened theym, sayinge: The man euen the Lorde of the lande spake roughly to vs, and toke vs for spyes of the countrey. and bryng the man a present, a litle of double money in youre hande: and the mo-gene you mercye in the sighte of the man, tooke they the present and twyse so muche more money in their hande, with Ben Jamen shall dyne with me at noone. And the that came in oure sackes mouthes at the fyrste time, are we brought in, that he may pycke a quarell with vs, and to laye some thynge to oure charge, and to bringe vs in they to the man that was the ruler ouer G Josephs house, and communed with hym at the dore of the house, and sayde: Oh fell flate on the groūde before him: And he welcomed thē curteously, saying: is youre of, in good healthe? and is he yet alyue?

they answered: thy seruaunt our father is in good health, and is yet alyue. And they bowed downe theyr heades, and made obeysaunce. And he lyfrynge vp his eyes, beheldē hys brother Ben Jamin, his mo-they prepared for him by hym selfe, and for them by them selues, & for the Egyptians whiche dyd eat wyth hym, by them selues: because the Egyptiās may not eat breade with the Hebrues, for that is an abhomination vnto the Egyptiās. And they sate before hym: the eldest accordynge vnto the age, and the yongest accordynge vnto his youth: and the men merueled among e thē selues. And they broughte rewardes vnto them from before hym: but Ben Jamins parte was fyue tymes so muche as any of theyrs. And they dronkynge, were drōke beholde, they are in the lande of Gosan.

And Joseph toke of the hyndmoste of hys brethren: euen fyue men, and presented thē vnto Pharao. And Pharao sayde vnto his brethren: what is youre occupation? And they answered Pharao: thy shepeherdes are thy seruauntes, both we and also oure fa-enyll haue the dayes of my lyfe bene, and haue not attayned vnto the yeres of the lyfe of my fathers, in the dayes of theyr pylgrimages. And Jacob blessed Pharao and went out from him. And Joseph prepared dwellynges for his father, and hys brethren, and gaue them possessions in the lande of Egypt, in the best of the lãde: euẽ in the lande of Rameses, as Pharao had commaunded. And Joseph made prouision for his father, his brethren, and all his fathers houlde wyth breade, euen C as younge chyldren are fed. There was no breade in all the lande, for the derthe was exceadynge sore: so that the lande of Egypte and the lande of Canaan, were famyshed by the reason of the derthe. And Joseph brought together al the money that was founde in the lãde of Egypte and of Canaan, for the corne whiche they boughte: & he layde vp the money in Pharaos house. When money fayled in the lande of Egypte and of Canaan, all the Egyptcians came vnto Joseph, & sayde: geue vs breade: wherfore sufferest thou vs to dye before the whan our money is spent?

D Than sayde Joseph: brynge your catell, and I wyll geue you for your catell, yf ye be withoute money. And they brought their catel vnto Joseph: And Joseph gaue them breade for horses & shepe, & oxen, and asses, & fed them with breade for all theyr catel that yere. But when that yere was ended, they came vnto him the nexte yere, and sayde vnto him: we wyll not hyde it from my Lorde howe that oure money is spente, my Lorde also had oure catell and beastes, nether is there oughte lefte in the syght of my Lorde, but euen oure bodyes and our landes. Wherfore letteste thou vs dye before thyne eyes, and the lande to go to nought? bye vs & our lãdes for breade: and bothe we & our landes wil be bounde to Pharao. Onely geue vs seed, that we may lyue and not dye, and that the lande go not to waste. And so Joseph bought all E the lande of Egypt for Pharao. For the Egyptcians solde euery man his lande because the derth was sore vpon them: and so the lande became Pharaos. And he appoynted the people vnto the cities, from one syde of Egypte vnto the other: onely the lande of the Prestes boughte he not. For the prestes had an ordinance of Pharao, that they should eat that which was appointed vnto them: which Pharao had geuen them, wherfore they solde not theyr landes. Then Joseph sayde vnto the folke: beholde I haue boughte you thys daye & your lãde for Pharao. Take there breade and sede, and sowe the lande. And of the encreasse, ye shal geue the fyfte parte vnto Pharao, and fower partes shalbe youre owne, for the seed of the felde and for you, F and them of youre housholdes, & for youre children to eat. And they answered: Thou hast saued our lines. Let vs fynde grace in the syght of my Lord, and we wil be Pharaos seruauntes. And Joseph made it a lawe ouer the lande of Egypte vnto this daye: that Pharao shoulde haue the fyfte parte, except the lãde of the Prestes only, whiche was not Pharaos. And Israell dwelt in Egipt: euẽ in the cõtrey of Gosan. And they had their possessiõs therin, & grew & multiplyed erceadgẽly. Moreouer Jacob lyued in the lande of Egypte. xvii. yeres, so that the whole age of Jacob was an hũdred & xlvii. yere. Whẽ the time

And he answered: I wil do as thou haste sayde. And he sayde: * swere vnto me, and gen.25.b he swore vnto hym. And Israel worshypped towarde the beddes heade.

After these deades it happened, that a messaũger said vnto Joseph: thy father is sycke. And he toke with him his two sõnes Manasses & Ephraim. Then toke Joſeph them both: Ephraim with his ryght hande towarde Iſraels left hande, and Manaſſes with his left hande, towarde Iſraels right hande, and brought them vnto him. And Iſrael ſtretched oute his right hand, and laide it vpon Ephraims head, whiche was the yonger, and his lefte hande vpon Manaſſes heade, guyding hys hādes wyſely, for Manaſſes was the elder. A gen.18.a MOses kept the shepe of * Jethro his father in lawe, preest of Madian: & he droue the flocke to the backe syde of the desert, & came to the mountayne of god, Ex.14.a. Horeb. * And the angel of the Lorde apeared vnto hi in a flame of fire out of the mid-Act.vii.d des of a buche. And he loked, and beholde, the buch burned with fire, & the buch was not consumed. Therefore Moses sayde: I wyl go now, and se thys great sight, howe it commeth that the buch burned not. And when the Lorde sawe that he came for to see, God called vnto hym oute of the mydes of the buch, and sayde: Moses, Moses.
B He answered: here am I. And he sayde: Josu.5.b * come not hither. Put thy shooes of thy fete: for the place whereon thou standest, is holye grounde. And he sayde: * I am the mat.22.c God of thy father, the GOD of Abraham, mar.12.c the GOD of Isahac, & the God of Jacob.
Luc.xx.e And Moses hyd hys face, for he was afrayde to looke vpon GOD. And the Lorde sayde: I haue suerlye sene the trouble of my Ex.22.c people, which are in Egipt, & * haue heard Ecc.21.a their crie frō the face of their taskmasters. For I knowe their sorowes, and am come C downe to delyuer them oute of the hande of the Egiptians: And to bryng them out of that lande, vnto a good lande & a large: and vnto a lande that floweth wyth milck and honye: euen vnto the place of the Cananites and Hethites, and Amorites, and Pherezites, and Heuites, and of the Jebusytes. Nowe therfore, the complaynte of the chyldren of Israell is come vnto me, and I haue also sene the oppressyon wherwith the Egipcyans oppresse them. Come thou therefore, and I wyll sende thee vnto Pharao, that thou mayest bryng my people the children of Israel out of Egipt. And Jud.vii.c Moses sayde vnto God: * what am I to go D vnto Pharao, and to bryng the children of Israel out of Egipt? And he answered: I wyll be wyth the. And this shal be a token vnto thee, that I haue sente thee: after that thou haste broughte the people oute of Egypt, ye shall serue God vpon thys mountayne. And Moses sayde vnto GOD: beholde, when I come vnto the chyldren of Israell, I shall saye: vnto them: the God of your fathers hathe sent me vnto you: and yf they saye vnto me, what is hys name, what answere shall I make the? And God answered Moses: I am that I am: and he sayde: thys shalt thou say vnto the children of Israell: I am, hath sente me vnto you. And God spake further vnto Moses: thus shalt thou say vnto the chyldren of Israel:
E * the Lorde God of your fathers, the God Hebr.xi.e of Abraham, the GOD of Isahac, and the GOD of Jacob, hathe sente me vnto you: this is my name for euer, and thys is my memoryall vnto generacion and generacio. Go & gather the elders of Israel together, and thou shalt saye vnto them: the Lorde God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isahac, and the GOD of Jacob, appeared vnto me, and sayde: In dilygyng haue I dilyged you, and know that which D is done to you in Egypt. And I haue said:
F I wyll bryng you out of the trybulacion of Egipt, vnto the lande of the Cananites and Hethites, and Amorites, and Pherezites, and Heuites, and Jebusytes: euen vnto a land that floweth with milcke and honye. And when they heare thy voyce, then go: bothe thou and the elders of Israell, shall go vnto the kyng of Egipt, and saye vnto him: The Lorde God of the Hebrewes hath mette wyth vs: and now wyl we go therfore .iii. dayes iourney into the wyldernesse, and do sacryfice vnto the Lord G our God. And I am sure, that the kinge of Egypte wyll not lette you go, no not in a myghtye hande: and I wyll stretche oute myne hande and smyte Egypte with al my wonders whiche I wyll do in the myddes thereof. And after that, he wyll let you Exo.xi.a go. And * I wyll get thys people fauour in the syght of the Egyptians: so that whē ye go, ye shal not go emptie: but a wife shal borow of her neighbour, & of her that sojourneth in her house, iewelles of syluer & of golde, & rayment. And ye shall put them on youre sonnes & doughters, & shal robbe the Egiptians.

A MOses answered & sayd: Se, they will not beleue me, nor herke vnto my voyce, but wyll say: the Lorde hath not appeared vnto the. And the Lorde said vnto him: what is that which is in thy hand? he answered, a rod. And he said: Cast it on the grounde. And he caste it on the grounde, & it became a serpente. And Moses fled frō the sight of it. And the Lorde sayd vnto Moses: put forth thine hande & take it by the tayle. And therefore he put forth hys hande and caught it, and it became a rod in his hande. For thys thynge (sayeth he) shall they beleue thee, that the Lorde God of their fathers, the GOD of Abraham, the God of Isahac, & the God B of Jacob, hath appeared vnto the. And the Lord sayde furthermore vnto him: thrust thine hand into thy bosome. And he thrust hys hande into hys bosome. And when he toke it out agayne, behold, hys hand was leperous euen as snow. And he sayde: put thyne hande into thy bosome againe. And he put his hande into his bosome agayne, and plucked it out of hys bosome: And behold, it was tourned agayne as his other fleache. Therefore yf they wyll not beleue the, neyther heare the voyce of the fyrste token, per wyl they beleue for the voyce of the seconde token. But and yf they wyll not beleue the two signes, neither herken C vnto thy voyce, thou shalte take of the water of the riuer, and powre it vpon the drie land. And the water which thou takest out of the riuer, shal turne to blonde vpon the drie land. Moses sayde vnto the Lorde: oh my Lorde, I am not eloquent from yesterdaye and yestredaye, and namely sence thou hast spoken vnto thy seruaunt: but I am slowe mouthed & slowe tongued. And D the Lorde sayd vnto him: who hathe made mans mouthe, or who hathe made the dum or the deafe, the seinge or the blinde? Haue not I the Lorde? Therfore * I wyl be with Mat.x. c thy mouth, and teach the what thou shalt saye. He sayde: Oh my Lorde, sende I praye the by the hande of hym whom thou wylte sende. And the Lorde was angrye wyth Moses, and sayde: Doe not I know Aaron thy brother the Leuite, that he can speake? For lo, he commeth furth to mete the: And when he seyth thee, he wyl be glad in hys hearte. Therefore thou shalte speake vnto him, and put these wordes in hys mouthe, and I wyl be with thy mouthe, & wyth his mouth, and wyl teach you what ye oughte to do. And he shall be thy spokesman vnto the people: he also shall be to thee in steade of a mouthe, and thou shalte be to hym in steade of God: and thou shalt take this rod in thy hand, wherwith thou shalt do miracles. Therfore Moses went and returned to Jethro his father in lawe agayne, and sayde vnto him: I wil goe nowe, and turne E agayne vnto my brethren which are in Egypte, & see whether they be yet alyue. And Jethro sayde to Moses: goe in peace. And the Lorde sayd vnto Moses in Madian: go mat.ii.d and returne agayne into Egypt, * for they are dead which went about to kyl thee. And Moses toke his wife, and his sonnes, and put them on an asse, and went agayne to Egipt, and Moses tooke the rod of God in his hande. And the Lorde sayde vnto Moses: when thou arte entred and come into Egipt agayne, se that thou do al these wonders before Pharao, which I haue put in thy hande: but I wyll holde * his heart, F and he shal not let the people go. And thou Exo.x.d shalte saye vnto Pharao, thus sayeth the Lorde: Israell is myne eldest sonne, and I haue sayde vnto thee, that thou shouldest let my sonne go, that he maye serue me. And thou wouldest not let hym go: behold, Ex.xii.e. I wyll * slay thyne eldest sonne. And it chaunced by the way in the ynne, that the Lorde mete hym, and would haue kylled him. And Zephora * tooke a stone, and cut Josu.v.d away the foreskin of her sonne, and fell at his fete and sayde: a bloudy husbande arte thou vnto me: Then let he hym goe. And she sayde a bloudye husbande, because of the circumcision. Then sayde the Lorde vnto Aaron: go mete Moses in the wildernes. And he went & met him in the mount G of God, and kissed hym. And Moses tolde Aaron all the wordes of the Lorde, whiche had sent him, and all the tokens whiche he had charged him with al. So went Moses and Aaron, and gathered all the elders of the children of Israel. And Aaron tolde all the wordes, which the Lord had spoken vnto Moses, & dyd the miracles in the syghte of the people. & the people beleued. And whē they heard that the lord had visited the children of Israel, & had loked vpō their tribulacis, they bowed their hed, & worshipped.

MOses & Aaron wente afterwarde, & A told Pharao, thus saieth the Lord god of Israel: let my people go, that they may kepe holy day vnto me i the wyl- Job.xxv.b dernes. And Pharao said: who * is the lord, that I that I shoulde heare his voyce, & let Israel go, I knowe not the Lorde, neither wyl I let Israell goe. And they sayde: the God of the Hebrewes hath met wyth vs: And therefore wyl we goe .iii. dayes iourney into the desert and sacrifice vnto the Lorde oure God: lest there happen vnto vs, either pestilence or swerde. Then sayd the kynge of Egipt vnto them: wherefore do ye (Moses and Aaron) let the people frō their worke? get you vnto youre laboure. And Pharao sayd furthermore: beholde, there is muche people nowe in the lande, and ye make thē leaue their worcke. And Pharao cōmaunded the same daye vnto the taskemaisters, whiche were amonge the people, and vnto the officers sayinge: ye shall geue the people no more straw, to make bricke with al, (as ye dyd in tyme passed,) lette them goe and gather them strawe them selues, and the numbre of bricke which they wer wont to make in tyme passed, laye vnto theyr charges also: and minishe nothyng therof. For they be ydle, & therefore crye, sayinge: we wyl go and do sacrifice vnto oure God. They muste haue more worcke layed vpon them, that they may laboure therein, and not regarde vayne woordes. Then wente the taskemaisters of the people and the officers oute: and tolde the people. Thus sayeth Pharao: I wyll geue you no more strawe, goe youre selues and gather you straw where you can find it, yet shal none of your laboure be minished. And so were the people scatred abrode throwe out all the lande of Egipte, for to gather stubble in steade of strawe. And the taskemaisters hasted them forwarde, sayinge: fulfyl your C woorcke daye by daye, euen as yf ye had strawe. And the officers of the chyldren of Israel whiche Pharaos taskemaisters had set ouer them, were beaten. And they sayd vnto them: wherefore haue ye not fulfylled youre taske in makyng bricke, both yesterday and to daye, as wel as in tymes past? The officers also of the chyldren of Israell, came and complayned vnto Pharao, sayinge: wherefore dealest thou thus with thy seruauntes: There is no strawe geuen vnto thy seruauntes, and they saye vnto vs: make bricke. And thy seruauntes are beaten, and thy people is foule entreared. He sayde: ydle are ye, ydle, and therefore ye saye: We wyll goe and doe sacrifyce vnto the Lorde. Goe therefore nowe D and woorcke, and there shall no strawe be geuen you, and yet shall ye delyuer the whole tale of bricke. And the officers of the children of Israell dyd wyth heuynes loke on them that sayde: ye shall mynyshe nothynge of your dayly makinge of bricke.

And they met Moses and Aaron, whiche stode in their waye, as they came out from Pharao, & sayde vnto them: The Lorde loke vpon you, & iudge you, whiche hathe made the sauoure of vs stynche in the eyes of Pharao, and in the eyes of hys seruauntes: and haue put a swearde in their hande to sle vs. Moses retourned vnto the Lorde, and sayde: Lorde, wherefore haste thou dealte cruelly with this people, and wherefore haste thou sente me? For sence I came to Pharao to speake in thy name, he hathe fared foule with this folke, and yet thou haste not delyuered thy people at all. Then the Lorde sayde vnto Moses: Nowe shalt thou see, what I wyl doe vnto Pharao, for in a myghtye hande shall he let them goe, and * in a myghtye hande Ex.13.b shal he dryue them out of hys lande.

And I haue also hearde the groninge of the chyldren of Israel, whom the Egiptians kepe in bondage, and haue remembred my couenaunt. Wherefore saye vnto the children of Israell: I am the Lorde. I wyll bringe you oute from the burdens of the Egyptians, & wyll rydde you oute of their bondage, & wyll delyuer you in a stretched oute arme, & in great iudgmentes. And I wil take you for my people, and wyll be vnto you a GOD. And ye shal B

And wyll bryng you vnto the lande concerninge the which I did lyfte vp my hande to geue it vnto Abraham, Isahac and Iacob, and wyl geue it vnto you for a possession: Euen vnto the Lorde. And Moses tolde the chyldren of Israell euen so: But they herkened not vnto Moses, for anguysche of spirite, & for cruel bōdage. C
The Lorde spake vnto Moses, sayinge: Goe in, & speake vnto Pharao kynge of Egipte, that he let the chyldren of Israell go out of hys lande. And Moses spake before the Lorde, saying: beholde, the childrē of Israell herken not vnto me: Howe then shall Pharao heare me: whiche am of vncircūcised lyppes? And the Lord spake vnto Moses & vnto Aaron, and gaue them a charge vnto the children of Israel, and vnto Pharao kynge of Egypte to bryng the chyldren of Israell oute the lande of Egypte.

commaunded thee, & Aaron thy brother shal speake vnto Pharao, that he sende the of Egipt, in great iudgementes, & the Egyptians shall know that I am the Lord, when I stretche forthe my hande vpon Egipt, and bring out the children of Israell frome amonge theym. Moses and Aaron 15 did as the Lorde commaunded them. eue so dyd they. Moses was: lxxx. yeare olde, and Aaron. lxxiiii. when they spake vnto Pharao. And the Lorde spake vnto Moses and Aaron, saying: if Pharao speake vnto you, sayinge: shewe a wondre, thou shalte saye vnto Aaron: take thy rodde and cast it before Pharao, that it maye be a serpent.

Then wente Moses and Aaron in vnto Pharao, and dyd euen as the Lorde hadde commaunded. And Aaron caste forth hys 1. rod before Pharao & before his seruātes, Exo.4.a. * and it turned to a serpent.
Than Pharao called for the wyse menne, and * enchaunters: and those wyse menne 2.Ti.3.b of Egypte dyd in lyke maner wyth theyr sorcerye. For they caste downe euerye man hys rod, and they turned to serpentes: but Aarons rod dyd eate vp theyr roddes: and Pharaos hearte was hardened, so that he herkened not vnto them, euen as the Lorde had sayde. The Lorde also sayde vnto Moses: Pharaos hearte is hardened, he C refuseth to let the people go: Get thee vnto Pharao in the mornynge, loe, he wyll come vnto the water, and thou shalt stande vpon the eyuers brynche agaynst he come, and the rod whiche tourned to a serpente, shalte thou take in thyne hande. And thou shalte saye vnto hym: the Lorde God of the Hebrues hath sent me vnto the, saying:
* let my people go, that they maye serue Exo.8.a. me in the wildernesse: And behold, hitherto thou wouldest not heare. Thus sayeth the Lorde: In this thou shalt knowe that I am the Lorde. Beholde, I wyll smyte (wyth the staffe that is in myne hande) the water that is in the riuer, and it shal turne 2. to blood. And the fi she that is in the ryuer shall dye, and the riuer shall stincke: and it shall greue the Egypcyans to dryncke of the water of the ryuer. And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, saye vnto Aaron: take thy staffe, and stretch out thine hande ouer the waters of Egypt, ouer their streames, ouer theyr ryuers & pondes, and all pooles of water whiche they haue, that they may be bloude: and that there maye be bloude thorowoute all the lande of Egypte: bothe in vessels of woode and also of stone. And Moses and Aaron dyd euen as the Lorde commaunded. And he lyfte vp the staffe, and smote the waters that were in the ryuer, in the sight of Pharao, and in the sight

of his seruauntes: And all the water that Psa.78.c was in the riuer, tourned into bloude. And the ryuer stanke: & the Egiptyans coulde not dzinke of the waters of the ryuer.

And there was blouze thozowe out all the lande of Egypte. And the enchaunters of Egipte dyd lykewise with their sozcerys, Exo.4.d and he harvened Pharaos hearte: Neither & vii.a. dyd he harken vnto them * as the Lozde had sayde: And Pharao tourned him selfe, and wente agayne into his houfe, and set not his heart therunto. And the Egiptiās dygged rounde about the ryuer for water to dzincke, for they couide not dzincke of the water of the riuer. And it continued a weke after that the Lozde had smytten the ryuer.

¶ The.viii. Chapter.

A Exo.7.c 9 a.10.a THe Lozd spake vnto Moses: go vnto Pharao & tel hi, thus saieth the lozd:
* let my people go that they may ser-ue me. yf thou wilt not let the go: beholde, I wyll smite all thy bozder with frogges.
And the ryuer shall scrall with frogges, which shal go vp & come into thine houfe, and into thy pzeuye chamber, where thou slepest, and vpon thy bedde, and into the houfe of thy seruauntes, and vpon thy people, and into thyne ouens, and vpon 3 thy meates. And the frogges shall come Psl.78.e vpon thee and on thy people, and vpon all thy seruauntes. * And the Lozd spake vnto Moses: saye vnto Aaron: Stretche forth thyne hād with thy rod ouer the streames, ouer the riuers, and ouer the ponds, that thou mayest bzinge vp frogges vpon the lande of Egypte. And Aaron stretched hys hande ouer the waters of Egypte, and M 2. the frogges came vp, and couered the land of Egipt. And the sozcerers dyd lykewyse with their sozcerye, and bzought frogges vp vpon the lande of Egypte. Then Pharaoa called for Moses and Aaron, and sayd: 3.re.13.b * Praye ye vnto the Lozde that he maye Exo.11.f take away the frogges from me, and from and.12.e my people: and I wyll let the people goe, Acte.8.d that they may do sacrifice vnto the Lozde.
C And Moses sayde vnto Pharao: Retoyse thou ouer me, and appoynte when I shall pzaye for the and for thy seruauntes, and for thy people, to dziue awaye the frogges from thee, and thy houses, and that they maye remayne but in the ryuer onelye. He sayde: To mozowe. And he sayde: Euen as thou haste sayde, that thou mayest knowe that there is none lyke vnto the Lozde oure God. And so the frogges shall de-D parte from the and from thy houses, from thy seruauntes and from thy people, and shall remayne in the ryuer onelye. Moses and Aaron wente oute from Pharao: And Moses cried vnto the Lozde vpon the ap-poyntment of frogges, which he had made vnto Pharao. And the Lozde dyd accordynge to the sayinge of Moses. And the frogges dyed oute of the houses, out of the courtes and feldes. And they gathered them together vpon heapes, and the lande stanke of them. But when Pharao sawe that he had reste geuen hym, he hardened his hearte, and herdened not vnto them, as the Lozde had sayde. And the Lozde sayde vnto Moses: say vnto Aaron, stretch oute thy rodde and smite the dufte of the F lande, that it maye turne to lise thozowout all the lande of Egypte. And they dyd so.
And Aaron stretched oute hys hande, and with hys rodde he smote the dufte of the earthe, whiche tourned to lyse in men and M 3. beast, so that all the dufte of the lande tour-ned to lise, thozowoute all the lande of E-gipte. And the enchaunters assayed lykewise with their enchauntmentes to bringe forth lyse: But they couldenot. And the lyse were both vpon men and beastes. Thē sayde the enchaunters vnto Pharao: It is the finger of GOD. And Pharaos hearte remayned obstinate, and he harkened not vnto them, euen * as the Lozde had sayde. Ex.vii.a And the Lozd sayde vnto Moses: Ryse vp earlye in the mornynge, and stande before Pharao, for he wyll come forthe vnto the water, and thou shalt say vnto hym: thus sayeth the Lozde: Let my people goe, that they may serue me: Els, yf thou wylte not let my people goe: beholde, I wyl sende all maner of flyes bothe vpon thee and thy seruauntes, and thy people, and into thy houses. And the houses of the Egyptians shall be full of flies, & the grounde wherein F they are. And the lande of * Goshen where Ge.47.b my people are, wyll I cause to be wonder-fulin that daye: So that there shall no flyes be ther: Whereby thou shalte knowe that I am the Lozde in the myddes of the earth. And I wyll put a diuision betwene my people and thyne. And euen to mozow 4. M shall thys myracle be done. And the Lozde dyd euen so: & there came noysome flyes in to the houfe of Pharao, & in to hys seruauntes houses, & into all the lande of Egypt: & the lād was corrupt with these flies.
And Pharao called for Moses & Aaron, & sayde: Goe & doe sacrifice vnto youre GOD in the land. And Moses answered:
It is not mete that we doe so.
For then we must offer vnto the Lozd our God, that whiche is an abhominacion vnto the Egiptyans. But & yf we sacrifyce that whiche is an abhominacion vnto the Egiptians before their eyes, shoulde they not not stone vs? we wyll go thre dayes iourney into the deserte, and sacrifyce vnto the Exo.iii.c Lorde oure God+as he hath commaunded vs: And Pharao sayde: I wyll let you go G that ye maye sacrifyce vnto the Lorde your God in the wyldernesse: but go not farre awaye, praye for me. And Moses sayde, beholde, I wyll go oute from thee, & praye vnto the Lorde, that the flyes maye depart from Pharao, and frome hys seruauntes, & from his people to morowe: But let Pharao from henceforthe deceaue nomore, that he wyll not let the people go to sacrifyce vnto the Lorde. And Moses went out from Pharao, & prayed vnto the Lorde. And the Lorde dyd accordyng to the saying of Moses: & the flyes departed from Pharao, and from his seruauntes, & from hys people, & there remayned not one. And Pharao hardened his hert euen then also, & dyd not let the people go.

A THe Lord said vnto Moses: go in vnto Pharao, & thou shalte tell hym: thus saith the Lorde God of the Ebrues: Exo.8.c +let my people go, that they may serue me. If thou wylt not let them go, & wilt holde them stylle, beholde the hande of the Lorde is vpon the flocke whiche is in the feld: for vpon horses, asses, camels, oxen and sheepe, there shalbe a mightie great moraine. And the Lorde wyll do wonderfullye betwene the beastes of Israell and the beastes of Egypte: so that there shall nothyng dye of all that pertayneth to the chyldren of Israell. And the Lorde appoynted a tyme, saying: to morow the Lord shal fynish this worde in the lande. And the Lorde dyd it on the morow, and all the catell of Egypte dyed: but of the catell of the chyldren of Israell dyed not one. And Pharao sente, & beholde, there was not one of the catell of the Israelytes dead. And the hearte of

And the Lorde sayde vnto Moses and Aaron: take youre handes full of asshes out of the fornace, and Moses shal sprynckle it vp into the ayre, in the syght of Pharao, and it shall turne to dust in all the lande of Egypte: that there maye be swellynge sores, with blaynes, both on man and beast thorowoute all the lande of Egypte. And they toke asshes oute of the fornace, and stoode before Pharao, and Moses sprynkled it vp into the ayre: And there were sores with blaynes both in man and in beastes: and the sorcerers coulde not stande before Moses, because of the blaynes, for there were botches vpon the enchaunters, and vpon all the Egypcians. And the Lorde hardened the herte of Pharao, and he harkened not vnto them + as the Lorde had sayde vnto Moses. And the Lorde sayde vnto Moses: ryse vp early in the mornynge, and stande before Pharao, and thou shalte tell hym: thus sayeth the Lorde God of the Ebrues: * Lette my people go, that they maye serue me: or els I wyl at thys time send all my plages vpō thyne herte, and vpon thy seruauntes, and on thy people, that thou mayest knowe, that there is none lyke me in all the earth. Yet thou exaltest thy selfe agaynst my people, that thou wilt not let them go: beholde, to morowe thys tyme I wyll sende downe a myghtye great hayle: euen suche a one as was not in Egipt, sens it was grounded vnto this time. Moses sayde vnto hym: alone as I am oute of the cytye, I wyll spreade abrode my handes vnto the LORDE, and the thunder shall cease, neyther shall there be any more hayle: that thou mayest knowe howe that the earth is the LORDES. But I knowe that thou and thy seruauntes yet feare not the face of the LORDE GOD. And so the flaxe and the barley were smytten: for the barley was shot vp, and the flaxe was boulled: but the wheate and the rye were not smytten: for they were late sowen. And Moses went oute of the cytye frome Pharao, and spreade abrode his handes vnto the LORDE: and the thunder and hayle ceased, neyther rayned it vpon the earth. And when Pharao sawe that the rayne and the hayle, and thunder were ceased, he synned agayne: and hardened his herte, he and his seruauntes. And the hearte of Pharao was hardened: neither would he let the children of Israell goe, as the LORDE had sayde, by the hande of Moses.

Exo.iiii.f

AND the LORDE sayd vnto Moses: go in vnto Pharao: for * I haue hardened his hert, & the herte of his seruaũtes, that I might put these my signes a mõgest thẽ: & that thou tell in the audyence of thy sonne, and of thy sonnes sonne, what thynges I haue done in Egipt, & the miracles which I haue done among them: that ye maye knowe how that I am the LORDE. And so Moses and Aaron came vnto Pharao, and sayde vnto hym: Thus sayeth the LORDE God of the Hebrues: how long shal it be or thou wylt submit thy self vnto me? * Let my people goe, that they maye serue me, or els, yf thou do refuse and wylt not let my people go, beholde, to morowe wyll I bryng grashoppers into thy coastes, and they shall couer the face of the earthe, that it cannot be sene: and they shall eat the residue whiche remayneth vnto you: and is escaped frome the hayle: and they shall eate euery greene tree that beareth you frute in the felde: and they shall fyll thy houses, and all thy seruauntes houses, and the houses of all the Egyptians, after suche a maner, as neither thy fathers, nor thy fathers fathers haue sene, sence the tyme they were vpon the earth vnto thys daye. And he turned hymselfe about, and went oute frõ Pharao. And Pharaos seruauntes sayde vnto hym: Howe longe shall he be a slaunder vnto vs? Let the men goe, that they maye serue the LORDE their God: knowest thou not that Egypte is destroyed? And Moses and Aaron were brought agayne vnto Pharao, and he sayd vnto theym: Go, and serue the LORDE youre GOD. Who are they that shall goe? And Moses answered: we wyll goe wyth oure yong, and wyth our olde: yea, and with our sonnes and wyth our doughters, and with our shepe, and wyth our oxen we must go. For we must holde a feaste vnto the LORDE. And he sayde vnto theym: let it be so. The LORDE be wyth you. When I let you goe, and youre chyldren also, take hede, for ye haue some myschefe in hande. Naye, not so: but go they that are men and serue the LORDE: for that was youre desyre. And they thrust them out of Pharaos presence. And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Stretch oute thyne hande ouer the lande of Egypte for grashoppers, that they maye come vpon the lande of Egypt, and eate all the herbes of the lande, and all that the hayle lefte behynde. And Moses stretched forthe hys rod ouer the lãde of Egypte: and the LORDE brought an east wynde vpon the lande all that daye, and all that nyghte. And in the morynge, the east wynde * brought the grashoppers, and the grashoppers went vp ouer all the lande of Egypte: and rested in all quarters of Egypte verye greuously. Before them were there no such grashoppers, neyther after theym shall be: for they couered all the face of the earthe: so that the lande was darcke. And they dyd eate all the herbes of the lande, and all the fruytes of the trees, and what so euer the hayle hadde lefte: there was no grene thynges left in the trees and herbes of the felde throwe all the lande of Egipte.

Therfore Pharao called for Moses and Aaron in haste, and sayde: I haue synned agaynst the LORDE youre God, and agaynste you: And nowe forgeue me my synne only this once: and * praye vnto the LORDE youre God, that he may take away from me thys death onelye. And Moses wente oute from Pharao, and prayed vnto the LORDE: And the LORDE turned a mightye stronge weste wynde, and it toke away the grashoppers, and cast thẽ into the reade sea, so that there was not one grashopper in all the coast of Egypte. And the LORDE * hardened Pharaos hearte, so that he wolde not let the chyldren of Israell goe. And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Stretche out thy hande vnto heauen, that there maye be vpon the lande of Egypte darcknes, whiche may be felt. And Moses stretched forthe his hande vnto heauen, and there was * thycke darcknesse vpon all the lande of Egypte thre dayes longe: no manne sawe another, neyther rose vp frome the place where he was by the space of three dayes: but all the chyldren of Israell had lyghte where they dwelled. And Pharao called for Moses and sayde: go, and serue the Lorde, onely 6 let your shepe and your oxen abyde, & let youre children go with you. And Moses sayde: thou muste geue vs also offerynges and burnte offeringes for to sacrifice vnto the Lorde our God: oure catell also shall go with vs, and there shall not one hoffe be left behynde: for therof must we take to serue the Lorde oure God. Nether do we knowe what we shall offer vnto the Lord, vntyll we come thyther. But the Lorde hardened Pharaos hearte: and he wolde not let them go. And Pharao sayde vnto him: get the fro me, & take hede to thy selfe, and se my face nomore. For when soeuer thou commest in my syght, thou shalt dye. And Moses sayde: Let it be as thou haste sayd. I wil se thy face nomore.

And the clowden pyller that was before the face of them, began to stande behynde them, and came betwene the hoste of the Egiptians, and the hoste of Israel. It was also a darke cloude, and gaue lyghte by nyghte: & al the night longe the one came not at the other. And Moses stretched furthe his hande ouer the sea: and the Lorde caryed awaye the sea by a verye stronge Easte wynde all that nyghte, and made the sea drye lande, and the waters were deuyded. And the childrē F of Israel wente oute into the myddest of the sea, vpon the drye grounde. And the waters were a wall vnto thē, on the right hande, and on theyr lefte hande. And the Egyptcians folowed and went in after thē to the myddest of the sea euen all Pharaos horses, his charets, & hys horsemen. And in the mornynge watche, the Lorde * loked vnto the hoste of the Egyptcians Iudi.9.a out of the fyrye and clowdye pyller: and troubled the hoste of the Egipcians, and toke of his charet wheles and caryed them awaye violently. So that the Egipcians sayde: Let vs flee from the face of Israel: for the Lorde fyghteth for them agaynst the Egipcians. And the Lord said vnto Moses, stretche out thyne hande ouer the sea that the waters maye come agayne vpon the Egyptcian, vpon hys charettes, and vpon his horsemen. And Moses stret- 6 ched furth hys hande ouer the sea, and it came againe to his course early in the morynge: & the Egyptcians fled agaynst it. And the * Lorde ouerthrew the Egipcias Sap.5.b in the myddest of the sea: and the water returned and couered the charets and the horsemen, & all the hoste of Pharao that came into the sea after them, so that there remayned not one of them. But the childrē of Israel walked vpon drie lande Exai.51.b thorowe the myddest of the sea: and the waters were a walle vnto thē on the right 1.Mac. hande of them, and on the lefte. * Thus iiii.a the Lorde delyuered Israell the selfe same daye oute of the hande of the Egyptcians: and Israel sawe the Egyptcians deade vpon the sea syde. And Israel sawe that myghtye power whyche the Lord shewed pf.105.b vpon the Egyptcians: * and the people feared the Lorde, and beleued the Lorde, and his seruaunte Moses.

THen Moses and the childrē of Israel A sange this songe vnto the Lorde, and † sayde: * I wyl synge vnto the Lord: Exo.15.b for he hath triumphed gloriously, the horse & him that rode vpon him, hathe he ouerthrowne in the sea. * The Lorde is my Esa.xii.a strength & prayse, & he is become my salua- pfa.118.c cion. He is my God, and I wyll glorifye hym: my fathers God, and I wyll exalte him. The Lorde is a man of warre. The Lorde is hys name. Pharaos charets and hys hoste hathe he caste into the sea. His chosen captaines also are drowned in the red sea, the depe waters haue couered them: they sunke to the botome as a stone. Thy ryghte hande Lorde, is become glorious in power: thy ryghte hande Lord hathe all to dashed the enemye. And in thy great glory thou hast ouerthrowē thē that rose vp against the: thou sentest furth thy wrath which consumed thē euen as stubbel. Thorow the winde of thy nastrels the water gathered together, the studdy stoode stil as an heape, & the depe water congeled together in the hert of the sea. The enemy B said: I wil folow on them: I wil ouertake them, I wyl deuyde the spoyle, I wyll la-tyst ye my lafe vpon them, I wyl draw my swearde, myne hande shall destroy theym.

Thou blewedst wyth thy wynde, the sea couered thē: they sāke as lead in the mighty waters. Who is lyke vnto the O Lorde among goddes? who is lyke the, so glorious in holynes, fearful in prayses, shewing wō ders? Thou stretchedest out thy right hād, the earth swalowed theym. Thou in thy mercy hast caryed this people whiche thou delyueredst: and haste brought them in thy strength vnto thy holy habitaciō. The na-cios heard & wer afrayed, sorow came vpō the Philistines. Thē the dukes of the Edo mites were amased, & the myghtiest of the Moabites, tremblyng came vpō thē: al the inhabiters of Canaā, waxed faynt herted.
C Let feare and dread fall vpon them in the greatnes of thyne arme, let them be as styll as a stone, tyll the people passe thorowe, O lord: while thi s people passe thorow which thou hast gotten. Thou shalt bryng them in, & plant them in the mountayne of thine enherytaunce: the place Lorde which thou haste made for to dwell in the sanctuarye, O Lorde, which thy handes haue prepared.
The Lorde shal raygne euer & alway. For Pharaos horse went in with his charets & horsmē into the sea, and the Lorde broughte the waters of the sea vpon theym. But the chyldren of Israell wente on dry lande in Exo.15.a And Mir Jam sange before them: * Synge broughte Israell from the red sea, and they went out into the wildernesse of Sur. And they went thre dayes longe in the wyldernesse, and founde no waters. And whā they came to Mara, they coulde not drynke of the waters of Mara: for they were bytter: therefore the name of the place was called, people murmured agaynst Moses, sayyng:

all the children of Israell: at euen ye shall are not agaynst vs, but agaynst the Lord.

And Moses spake vnto Aaron: Saye vnto all the companye of the chyldren of Israell, come forth before the Lorde: for he hathe hearde youre grudgynges. And as Aaron spake vnto the whole multitude of the chil

Lorde spake vnto Moses, sayinge: I haue

And Moses sayd vnto them: this is the breade whiche the Lorde hathe geuen you to eat. This is the word which the Lord hath cõmaunded: gather it euery man for himselfe to eat: a gomerfull for a man, accordinge to the numbre of you: and take euery man for them which are in hys tente. And the children of Israel dyd euen so: and gathered sum more, sum lesse: and 2.Cor.8.c when they did mete it with a gomer * vnto him that had gathered much, remained nothynge ouer, & vnto hym that had gathered lytle, was there no lacke: euery man gathered sufficiẽt for his eatige. And Moses sayd vnto thẽ: Se that no mã let ought

And they gathered it all mornynges, euery man for hys eatynge. And assone as the heate of the sunne came, it melted. And the syxte daye they gathered twyse so muche breade, two gomers for one man: and all the rulers of the multitude came and tolde Moses. He sayd vnto thẽ: this is that which the Lord hath sayd: to morow is the rest of the holye Sabboth vnto the Lorde: bake that which ye wyl bake, and seeth that ye wil seeth: & that whiche remayneth, laye it vp tyll the mornynge. And they layde it vp tyl the mor-

Syxe dayes shall ye gather it: and in the seuenth daye which is the Sabboth, there shalbe none. Notwithstãdynge, there went out some of the people in the seuenth daye for to gather, & they founde none. And the Lorde sayde vnto Moses: howe longe refuse ye to kepe my commaundementes & my lawes? Se, the Lorde hath geuen you a Sabboth, therfore he geueth you the sixte day breade for two dayes. Bide therfore euery man at home, & let no man go out of hys place the seuenth daye. And the people rested the seuenth daye. And the house of Israel cal-

And Moses sayde: this is that whyche the Lorde cõmãdeth, fil a gomer of it, whiche may be kepte for your children after you: that they maye se the breade wherewith I haue fed you in wildernesse, whẽ I brought you out of the lãde of Egypt. And Moses

Thẽ came Amalech and fought with Israel in Raphidim. And Moses sayde vnto Josua: chose vs out men, & go fyghte wyth Amaleche: And to morowe I wil stande on the top of the hyl, and the rod of God shalbe in my hande. Josua did as Moses bad hym, and fought with Amalech. And Mo- D

The Lorde is he that worketh myracles for me. For he sayde: the hande is on the seate of GOD, the Lorde wyl haue warre with Amaleth, from generacion to generacyon.

The name of the other was Eliesar: for the God of my father (sayde he) was myne helpe, and deliuered me from the swearde of Pharao. And Iethro Moses father in lawe came wyth hys two sonnes, and hys wyfe, vnto Moses into the wylderuelle: where he abode by the mounte of God. And he sayde vnto Moses: I thy father in lawe Iethro, am come to the, and thy wife also, and her

And Moses tolde hys father in lawe all that the Lorde had done vnto Pharao, and to the Egypcyans for Israelles sake: and all the trauayle that had happened them by the waye, and howe the Lorde deliuered theym. And Iethro reioyced ouer all the goodnesse which the LORDE had done to Israell, and because he had delyuered theym out of the hande of the Egypcyans. Iethro sayde: blessed be the Lorde whyche hathe delyuered you out of the hande of the Egypcyans, and out of the hande of Pharao: whyche hathe also delyuered hys people from the captyuytye of the Egypcyans. Nowe I know that the Lorde is greater then all godes: for in the thynge whereby they dealte cruelly with them, are they them selues perished. And Iethro Moses father in lawe, offered burntofferynges, and sacrifices vnto God.

And Aaron, and all the elders of Israell, came to eate breade wyth Moses father in lawe before God. And it chaunced on the

And whan Moses father in lawe sawe all that he dyd vnto the people, he sayd: what is thys that thou doest vnto the people? Why syttest thou thy selfe alone, and all the people stande about the from morynge vnto euen? And Moses sayde vnto hys father in lawe: because the people come vnto me, to seke counsell of God: When they haue a matter, they come vnto me, and I iudge betwene euery man and his neighboure: and shewe theym the ordynaunces of God, and hys lawes. And Moses father in lawe sayde vnto him: it is not well that thou doest.

And they iudged the people at al seasōs, but brought the harde causes vnto Moses: & iudged all smal matters them selues. And Moses let his father in lawe departe, & he went into his owne lande.

Go downe: charge the people, that they of them perysshe. And let the preestes also

Moses sayde vnto the Lorde: the people

THys thynge also shalt thou doe vnto them, when thou + halowest them to be my Priestes. Thou shalte take a calfe, euen a younge ore, and two rammes that are wythoute blemyshe, and vnleuened breade, and cakes of swete breade, tempered with oyle, & wafers of swete breede anoynted with oyle (of wheten floure shalt thou make them) and put them in a maunde, and bringe theim in the maunde with the calfe & the two rammes. And bring Aaron and hys sonnes vnto the dore of the tabernacle of witnes, and wache them with water, and take the garmentes, and put vpon Aaron: The strayte cote, the tunicle of the Ephod, and the Ephod, and the brestlappe: and gyrde them to hym wyth the brodred gyrdle which is in the Ephod. And put the mitre vpon his head: And put the holye crowne vpon the mytre. Then shalte thou take the anoyntinge oyle, and powre it vpõ hys his heade, & annoynte hym. And bryng his sonnes, and put albes vpon them, and girde them with girdels, aswell Aaron as his sonnes. And put the mitres on thē, and the priestes office shalbe theyrs for a perpetual lawe. And thou shalt fyl the handes of Aaron and of his sonnes: and bryng the calf before the tabernacle of witnes. * And Aaron and his sonnes shal put their handes vpō the heade of the calfe, & thou shalt kyll him before the Lorde, by the dore of the tabernacle of witnes. And take of the bloude of the calfe and put it vpō the hornes of the aulter with thy finger: & powre all the bloude beside the botome of the aulter: * and take all the fat that couered the unwardes, and the kall that is on the liuer, and the two kidneys, and the fat that is vpon them: and burne thē vpō the aulter: But the flesh of the calfe, & his skyn, and his doūge shalt thou burne with fier, without the host. It is a sin offerig. Thou shalt also take one ram, and Aaron & hys sonnes shall put their handes vpon the heade of the ram, & when thou hast slayne the ram, thou shalt take his bloude, and sprinkle it rounde about vpon the aulter, and cut the rāme in pieces, & wash the inwardes of hym, and his legges, & put thē vnto the pieces and vnto his heade: & then burne the whole rāme vpō the aulter for a burnt offerynge vnto the Lorde, and for a swete sauoure & a sacryfice vnto the Lord. * And take the other ram, and Aaron and his sonnes shal put their handes vpō hys heade. Then shalt thou kil him, & take of hys bloude, and put it vpon the tip of the right ear of Aaron, and of his sonnes, and vpō the thumbe of their right hādes, and vpon the great too of their right fote, and sprinkle the bloude vpō the aulter rounde about. And thou shalt take of the bloude that is vpon the aulter, and of the anoyntynge oyle, and sprinkel it vpon Aarō and his bestimentes, and vpon his sonnes, and vpon their garmentes with him. And he shalbe halowed, and hys clothes, and hys sonnes, and theyr clothes with him. * And thou shalt take the fat of the ram, and his rumpe, and the fat that coureth the inwardes, and the kall of the lyuer, and the two kidneys, and the fat that is vpon thē, & the righte shoulder: for that ram is a ful offerynge: & a symnel of breade, and a cake of oyle breade, & a wafer out of the basket of swete breade that is before the Lorde: and put all vpon the handes of Aarō, and on the handes of his sonnes: and waue thē for a waue offerynge before the Lord. And agayne, thou shalt take it frō of their hādes, & burne it vpō the aulter for a burnt offerynge, to be a sauour of swetnes before ye Lord: For it is a sacrifice vnto the lord.

* And thou shalt take the brest of the ram of Aarons consecracion, and waue it for a waueofferinge before the Lord: & it shalbe thy parte. And thou shalt sactifie the brest of the waueofferynge: and the shoulder of the heueofferige, which is waued & heued vp of the ram of the consecracion, for Aaron & for his sonnes. And it shalbe Aarons and his sonnes by a statute for euer, of the childrē of Israel: for it is an heueofferinge: Euen an heueofferynge of the chyldren of Israel, & of their peaceoffrynges. Theyr heueofferinges is the Lordes. And the holy garmentes of Aaron shalbe hys sonnes after him, to be anoynted therin: and to fil theyr handes therin. And that sonne that is preest in hys stede after hym, shall put them on seuen dayes: when he commeth into the tabernacle of wytnes, to minyster in the holy place. * And thou shalte take the ram of the consecracion and seeth his flesche in an holy place. And Aarō and his sonnes shall eate the flesh of the ram, and the breade that is in the basket, euen by the dore of the tabernacle of wytnes: and they shall eate them, because the attonemente was made therwith, to fil their handes, & to consecrate them: but a straūger shal not eate thereof, because they are holy. And yf ought of the flesh of the consecracion of the breade remayne vnto the morynge, thou shalte burne it with fyre, and it shal not be eaten, because it is holye. Therfore shalt thou do vnto Aaron and his sonnes, euen so, accordynge to all thynges which I haue commaunded thee: seuen dayes shalte thou fyll their handes, and offer euerye daye a calfe for a sin offerynge, for to reconcyle withal: that thou mayest clense the aultar when thou reconcilest vpon it, and thou shalte anoynt it, to sanctifye it. Seuen dayes thou shalt reconcile vpon the aulter, and sanctifie it, and it shalbe as an aulter most holy. Euery one that toucheth the aulter, let him be holy. * This is that which thou shalt offer vpō the aulter: euen two lambes of one yeare olde, day by day continually: the one thou shalt offer in the mornynge, & the other at euē. And with the one lambe a tenth deale of floure myngled with the fowerth parte of an hin of beate oyle, & the fowerth part of an hin of wine, for a dayntie offerynge. And the other lābe thou shalt offer at euē, and shalt do therto accordynge to the meate offerynge & dayntie offerynge in the mornynge: to be an odour of a swete sauoure and a sacrifice vnto the Lord. Al that dyd heue vp an oblacion of golde & brasse, & brought an heue offrige vnto the Lord. And al men with whom was founde Sethim wod for any maner worke of the ministraciõ, brought it. And all the women that were wise harted, did spin with their handes, & brought the spunne worke both of yelow sylke, purple, scharlet, and whyte sylke. And al the wemẽ whom their owne heart moued, span goates heere wyselye.

And the lordes brought Onix stones, and stones to be set in the Ephod, and in the brestlap, and spice, and oyle for light, and for the anoyntynge oyle, and for the swete cense. And the children of Israel brought a willynge offrynge vnto the Lord, both men and wemen, as many as had willyng heartes to bring, for all maner of workes whiche the Lorde had commaunded to be made, by the handes of Moses. And Moses sayde vnto the chyldren of Israell, beExo.31.a holde, + the Lorde hathe called by name Bezaleel the sonne of Uri, the sonne of Hur of the trybe of Juda, and hath fylled him with the spirit of God, in wysedome and vnderstandinge, in knowledge, & in al maner worke, to fynde oute curious workes which are made in golde, syluer and brasse. In the craft of stones, to set thẽ: & in caruynge of wood to make anye maner of subtile worke. And he hath put in his hert that he maye teache: bothe he and Aholiab the sonne of Ahisamach of the trybe of Dan. And Moses called Bezaleel, Aholiab, and al the wyse herted men, and suche as the Lorde had geuen wysedome vnto, and as many as theyr hartes couraged to come vnto that worke to worke at. And they receaued of Moses all the presente, whyche the childrẽ of Israel had brought for the worke of the seruyce of the Sanctuarye, to make it. And beside that they brought gyftes vnto it euery daye in the mornynge. And all the wyse men that wrought all the holye worke, came euery man from hys worke whiche they made, and spake vnto Moses, sayinge: the people bringe to much, and more thẽ inough, for the seruyce & worke whiche the Lord hathe commaunded to be made. And then Moses gaue a commaundement, and they caused it to be proclamed throwoute the hoste, sayinge: se that nether man nor woman prepare anye more worke for the present of the Sanctuarye: & so the people were forbydden to bringe: for the stuffe they had, was sufficient for all the worke, to make it, and to muche. * All the wyse Exo.26.a

The length of a borde was ten cubytes, the breadthe one cubite and a halfe. One borde had two fete, wherby they were ioyned one to another. And thus made he for all the bordes of the tabernacle. And he made. xx. bordes for the south syde of the habitacion, and. xl. sockettes of syluer vnder the. xx. bordes, two sockettes vnder one borde, for hys two fete, and two soc-

And towarde the west ende of the tabernacle. (That is to saye, at that ende of the tabernacle whiche enclineth toward the sea.) He made syxe bordes, and two other bordes made he in the corners of the habytacyon, for ether syde, and they were ioyned close beneth and aboue wyth a clampe, and thus they dyd to bothe the corners. And there were eyghte bordes, and sixtene sockettes of syluer, vnder euery borde two sockettes. And he made barres of Sethim woode, fyue for the bordes of the Tabernacle in the one syde: and fyue for the bordes of the Tabernacle in the other syde, and fyue barres for the bordes of the habitacion in the west ende. (Toward the sea.) And he made the myddest barre to shoote thorowe the bordes: euen from the one ende to the other, and ouerlayde the bordes wyth golde, and made ringes of golde to thrust the barres thorowe, and couered the barres with gold. And he made an hāgyng of yelowe sylcke, purple, skarlet and whyte twyned sylcke, euen of pyctures made he it of brodred worcke. And made therunto fower pyllers of Sethim woode, and ouerlayde theym wyth golde. Their knoppes were also of golde, and he caste for theym fower sockettes of syluer. And he made an hangynge for the tabernacle doore: of yelow sylcke, purple, skarlet, and with white twyned sylcke of nedle worck. And the fyue pyllers of it wyth theyr knoppes, and ouerlayde the knoppes of them & the whopes with golde. Theyr fyue sockettes also were of brasse.

And he couered it wyth pure golde, both the toppe and the sydes therof rounde about, and the hornes of it, and made vnto it a crowne of golde rounde aboute. And he made two ringes of golde for it, euen vnder the crowne thereof in the two corners of it, and in the two sydes therof to put barres in, for to beare it wythall: and made the barres of Sethym wood, and ouerlayde them wyth gold. And he made the holye anoyntynge oyle, and the swet pure incēs after the apotecaries craft.

And he made vnto it hornes in the foure corners of it, procedyng out of it, and he ouerlayde it wyth brasse. And he made all the vessels of the aulter: the cauldrons, houels, balyns, fleshhokes & colepannes. Al the vessels therof made he of brasse. And he made a brasen gredyron of networke vnto the alter, rounde about alow beneth vnto the middes of the aulter, and caste foure ynges of brasse, for the foure endes of the gredyrō, to put barres in. And he made the barres of Sethim wood, and couered them with brasse, and put the barres into the ynges in the. iiii. corners of the alter, to beare it wythall, and made the alter holow with in the bordes. And he made the lauer of brasse, and the fote of it also of brasse, in the syght of them that dyd watche at the doze of the tabernacle of witnesse. And he made the courte on the Southside, and the hangynges of the courte were of whyte twyned sylke, hauing an hūdred cubites. Theyr pilers were twenty, and theyr brasen sockets twenty. But the knoppes of the pilers, and their whopes were of syluer. And on the northsyde, the hangynges were an hūdred cubites. Their pilers were twentie, & their sockets of brasse, twenty. And toward the eastside, were hāgynges of. l. cubites: the hāgynges of the one syde of the gate were. xv. cubites long, with thre pillers, & thre sockets. And of the other side of the court gate were hangynges also of. xv. cubites longe, with thre C pyllers and thre sockettes. All the hangynges of the court round about, were of whit twyned silcke: but the sockettes of the pylers wer of brasse: & the knoppes & the whopes of the pillers were of siluer, and the couerynge of the heades was of siluer, and al the pillers of the court were whoped about wyth syluer. And the hangyng of the gate of the court was nedle worke, of yelow silck purple, scarlet & whit twined silke. xx. cubites longe, and fyue in the bredth, ouer against the hangynges of the courte. And they. iiii. pyllers were foure, and their. iiii. sockettes of brasse, and the knoppes of siluer, and the heades ouerlayed with syluer, and whoped about with siluer, and all the pinnes of the Tabernacle, and of the courte rounde aboute, were of brasse. This is the summe of the habitacion of witnesse, as it was counted accordyng to the commaūdement of Moses, for the office of the Leuites by the hande of Ithamar, sonne to Aaron the preest. And Bezaleel the sonne of Uri the sonne of Hur of the tribe of Juda, made all that the Lorde commaunded Moses, and wyth hym was Aholiab sonne of Ahisamach, of the tribe of Dan, a connynge grauer and a worcker of nedle worcke in yelowe sylcke, purple, scarlet. & D white twyned silcke. All the gold that was occupied for al the worke of the holye place was the golde of the waueofferynge, euen xxix. hundred weyght, and seuen hundred and. xxx. sicles, accordyng to the sicle of the Ex.30.b Sanctuary. + And the summe of siluer that came of the multitude, was. b. thoze hundred weyght, and a thousande seuen hundred and. lxxb. sycles after the sycle of the Sanctuary. AND of the yelowe sylcke, purple and A scarlet, they made the vestimētes of ministracio to do seruice in the holy place, & made the holy garmentes for Aarō, as the Lord cōmaūded Moses. And he made the Ephod of golde, yelowe sylcke, purple, scarlet, & whit twined silcke. And they dyd beat the gold into thinne plates, & cut it into wiers: to worke it in the yelow silke, purple scarlet, and in the fine white, with broidred worke. And they made two sides for it, to close them vp by the two edges. And they broidrynge of the gyrdle that was vpon it, was of the same stuffe, and after the same worke: of gold, yelow silke purple, scarlet, and twined white sylke, as the Lord commaunded Moses. And they wrought Onix 15 stones closed in ouches of golde, and grauen as signetes are grauē with the names of the children of Israell, and put them on the shoulders of the Ephod, that they shoulde be stones for a remēbraunce of the children of Israel, as the Lorde commaunded Moses. And he made the breastlappe of connynge worke, and lyke the worke of the Ephod: Euen of golde, yelowe sylke, purple, scarlet, and twined white sylke. It

And the. xii. stones were grauen as signetes with the names of the children of Israell: euerye stone with hys name, according to the. xii. trybes. And they made vpon the breastlappe, two fastning cheynes of wrethen worke & pure golde. And they made two hokes of golde, and two golde rynges, and put the two rynges in the two corners of the breastlappe. And they putte the two cheines of golde i the two rynges, in the corners of the breastlappe: And the two endes of the two cheynes they fastened in the two hokes, and put them on the shoulders of the Ephod vpō the fore fronte of it. And they made two ringes of golde, and putte them on the two corners of the breastlap vpon the edge of it, why: he was on the inside by the Ephod. And they made two golden rynges, and put them on the two sydes of the Ephod, beneth on the forsyde of it, and ouer agaynſt hys felowe, a boue vpon the broidrynge of the Ephod, and they strayned the breastlappe by hys rynges vnto the rynges of the Ephod, with a lace of yelowe silke: that it might be vpon the broidring of the Ephod, and that C the breastlappe shoulde not be lowsed frome of the Ephod: As the Lorde commaunded Moses. And he made the tunicle vnto the Ephod of wouen worke, altogether of yelowe silke, and there was a hole in the middest of the tunicle, as the coler of a parrlet, with a bonde rounde about the coler, that it should not rente. And in the tunicle they made hemmes with pomgranetes, of yelowe silke, purple, scarlet, and whyte twined silke. And they made lycle belles of pure golde, and put them amonge the pomgranetes rounde aboute vpon the edge of the tunicle: A bell and a pomgranate, a bel and a pomgranate rounde about the hemmes of the tunycle to ministre in, as the Lord commaunded Moses. And they made coates of fine whyte wouen worke for Aaron and his sonnes, and a mytre of fyne white, and goodly bonnetes of fyne whyte, and lynnen breches of twined white, and a gyrdle of twyned whyte, yelowe sylke, purple and scarlet: Euen of nedle worke, as the Lorde commaunded Moses. And they made the plate for the holy crowne of F fine golde, and wrote vpon it with grauen worke, the holynes of the Lorde: and tyed vnto it a lace of yelowe sylke to fasten it an hye vpon the mytre, as the Lorde commaunded Moses. Thus was all the worke of the habytacyon and of the Tabernacle of wytnesse fynyshed. And the chyldren of Israell dyd accordynge to all that the Lorde had commaunded Moses: euen so did they. And they brought the habitacion vnto Moses: The tent and all hys apparell, burtones, boordes, barres, pyllers and socketes, the couerynge of rams skinnes redde, and the couerynge of raȝus skinnes, and the hanginge vayle, the arcke of witnesse and the barres thereof, and the mercyseate: The table and all the vessels therof, and the shewbread: The pure candlestycke, with the lampes thereof: Euen with the lampes to be prepared, and al the vessels thereof, and the oyle for lyght: The S golden aulter, and the anoynting oyle, and the swete cence, and the hangynge of the tabernacle dooze, and the brasen aulter with his gredyren of brasse, his barres and al hys vessels, the lauer and hys foote: The hangynges of the courte wyth hys pyllers and socketes: the hanginge to the courte gate, and hys pynnes and coardes, and all the vessell of the seruyce of the habytacyon for the tabernacle of wytnesse: The mynistrynge vestimentes to serue in the holy place, and the holye vestimentes for Aaron the prieste, and hys sonnes raymentes to ministre in: accordynge to all that the Lorde commaunded Moses: Euen so the chyldren of Israell made all the worke.
And Moses behelde all the worke, and see, they had done it euen as the Lorde commaunded: euen so had they done, and Moses blessed them.

The. xl. Chapter.

And it shall come to passe that when he hathe synned in one of these thinges, he shall confesse that he hath synned in that thing. Therfore shall he bring his trespace offeringe vnto the Lorde, for his synne which he hath synned. A female frō the flocke, a lambe or a she goate for a synneofferinge. And he shal bring them vnto the preiste, which shal offre the synneoffring fyrst, and wrynge the neche a sundre of it, but pluckе it not cleane of. And he shall sprinkle of the bloud of the synneofferinge vpon the syde of the aulter: and the rest of the bloude shall he powre by the bottome of the aulter: for it is a synneoffringe. therof, and burne it vpon the alter, to be a sacrifyce for the Lord, it is a synneoffring. And the priest shall make an attonemente for hym as touching his sinne that he hath synned in one of these, and it shall be forgeuen. And the remnaũt shalbe the priestes, as a meatoffryng. And the Lorde spake vnto Moyses, sayinge: If a soule trespace, and synne thorowe ignorannce in thynges that are consecrated vnto the Lorde, let hym bringe for hys trespace vnto the Lorde a rãme without blemish out of the flockes, Ex.xxx.b valued in money at two cycles after the *sicle of the sanctuary, that it may be for a trespaceofferynge. And he shal make amendes for the harme that he hath done in the holy thing, and let him put the fyfth parte more therto, and gene it vnto the preest. And the priest shall make an attonemente for hym wyth the rãme that is for the trespace, and it shalbe forgeuen him. If a soule synne, and commytte any of these thynges which are forbidden to be done by the commaundementes of the Lorde: and wyste it not, and hath offended, he shall beare his synne, and shal bryng a rãme without blemyshe, oute of the flocke that is estemed to be worth a trespaceoffring, vnto the priest. And the priest shall make an attonemente for him cõcerninge his ignorannce, wherin he erred and was not ware, and it shall be forgeuen hym. Thys is the trespaceofferynge, whiche he offred vnto the Lord for that trespace.

A AND the Lorde spake vnto Moses, saying: yf a soule sinne and trespace agaynst the Lorde, and denye vnto hys neyghbour that which was taken him to kepe, or that was put into hys handes, or doth violent robbery or wrong vnto his neighbour, or if he haue founde that which was lost, and denieth it, and sweareth falsely, vpõ what so euer thing it be that a mã doeth, & synneth therin: If he haue so synned or trespassed, he shal restore again that he toke violently away, or the wrõg which he dyd, or that which was delyuered hym to kepe, or the lost thyng which he founde, and all that aboute whyche he hath swoorne falselye, he shall restore it agayne in the whole summe, and shall adde the fifth part more thereto, and gene it vnto hym to whom it pertayneth the same daye that he offreth for hys trespasse, and let him bringe for his trespace vnto the Lorde, a ramme wythout blemishe out of the flocke (that is B estemed worthe a trespace offrynge) vnto the preeste. And the preest shall make an attonement for hym, before the Lorde, and it shall be forgeuen him, what soeuer thing it be that he hath done & trespassed therin. And the Lord spake vnto Moyses saying: commaunde Aaron and his sonnes saying: this is the lawe of the burntofferinge.

*The burntoffering shalbe vpõ the harth Ex.29.g of the aulter al night vnto the mornynge, and the fyre shal be kyndled on the aulter. And the Priest shall put on hys *lynnen Ex.28.g albe, and his lynnen breches vpõ his flesh, and take awaye the ashes, vpon the whych the fyre consumed the burntsacrifice in the alter, and he shall putte theym beside the alter, and put of hys rayment, and put on other, and carye the ashes oute wythoute the hoaste vnto a cleane place. The fyre vpon the alter shal burne styll, and neuer be putte out. But the Priest shall laye wood on it euerye daye in the mornynge, and putte the burntsacrifice vpon it, and he shall burne theron the fat of the peaceofferynges. The fyre shall euer burne vpon the alter, and neuer goo out. *Thys Nu.15.a is the lawe of the meatofferinge: whyche Leui.2.a Aarons sonnes shall bryng before the *Minha Lorde, euen before the aulter: and one of them shall take his handfull of the floure of the meatofferinge, and of the ople, and all the franckencens whyche is vpon the meatofferinge, and shall burne it vnto a remembraunce vpon the aulter for a swete sauoure, euen a memorial of it vnto the Lorde. And of the reste thereof, shall Aaron and hys sonnes eate: vnleuened shall it be eaten in the holye place: euen in the courte of the Tabernacle of wytnesse they shall eate it. It shall not be baken wyth leuen. I haue geuen it vnto theim for theyr porcyon of my sacrifyces. It is moste holy, as is the synneoffering and trespasseofferinge. All the males among the chyldren of Aaron shal eate of it: It shalbe a statute for euer in your generations, concerninge the sacrifice of the Lord: let euery one that toucheth it, be holy. And the Lord spake vnto Moyses, sayinge: this is the offeringe of Aaron and of his sonnes, which they shall offre vnto the Lord in the daye whẽ he is annoynted: the tenthe parte of an Epha of floure, for a meatoffering perpetuall: halfe in the mornynge and halfe at nyght: In the fryeng pan it shalbe made wyth ople And when it is fryed, thou shalt bringe it in, & the bakenofferinges of this oblation munsed small, shalte thou offre for a swete sauoure vnto the Lorde. And the Priest of his sonnes that is anoynted in hys steade shall offer it: It is the Lordes duetye for euer, it shalbe burnte al togeather. For e- D uerye meatoffringe that is made for the Priest, shall be burnte all togeather, and shall not be eaten. And the Lorde spake

And no synne offeringe, whose blond is brought into the tabernacle of wytnesse to reconcyle wyth al in the holy place, shalbe eaten: but shalbe burnt in the fyre.

A THys is the law of trespasse offring: it is moost holye. In the place where they kyll the burnteofferinge, shall they kyll the trespasseoffringe also, and hys blonde shall he sprynckle rounde aboute vppon the aulter. All the fatte there of shall they offre: the roumpe and the fat thereof that couereth the inwardes, and the two kydneyes, and the fatte that is on theym, and vppon the loynes: and the aboundaunce that is on the lyuer, shalte thou take awaye wyth the kydneyes, and the Prieste shall burne thē vpon the alter, to be a sacrifyce vnto the Lorde: for it is a trespasse offeringe. All the males amonge the Priestes shall eate therof in the holye place, for it is moost holy. As the synneofferinge is, so is the trespasseoffringe, one lawe serueth for bothe, and it shall be the Priestes that reconcyleth therwyth. And the Priest that offereth any mans burntoffringe, shall haue the skinne of the burntoffringe which he hath offred. And all the meatoffring that is baken in the ouen and that is dressed vpon the gredyeren, and in the fryeng panne, shalbe the Priestes that offereth it. And euery meatoffering that is mingled wyth oyle and that is dry, shall pertayne vnto all the sonnes of Aaron, and one shall haue as muche as another.

B This is the law of the peaceoffring, whan it is offred vnto the Lorde. If he offer it to geue thankes, he shall bringe vnto his thankeoffring swete cakes mingled wyth oyle, & swete wafers anoynted wyth oyle, and cakes mingled with oyle of fine floure fryed. He shall bringe hys offeringe vpon cakes of leuended bread for hys peaceofferinges to geue thankes: and of all the sacrifyce he shal offre one for an heue offring vnto the Lorde, and it shalbe the Priestes that sprinckled the blond of the peaceofferynges. And the flesh of the thankoffring in hys peaceofferinges shall be eaten the same daye that it is offered. And lette hym laye vp nothinge of it vntyll the morowe. But yf he offre his sacrifice by reason of a bowe, or of his owne frewyl, it shalbe eatē the same daye that he offreth his sacrifyce. And yf ought remayne vntyl the morowe, it maye be eaten: but as muche of the offered flesche as remayneth vnto the thyrde daye, shalbe burnt wyth fyre. And yf anye of the flesche of hys peaceofferinges be eaten in the thyrde daye, then shall he that offereth it, obtayne no fauour, neither shall it be rekened vnto hym, but shalbe an abhommation. Therfore the soule that eateth of it shall beare hys synne. And the flesh that toucheth any vncleane thyng, shall not be eaten, but burnte wyth fyre: & all that be cleane, shall eate the flesche. But yf any soule eate of the flesche of the peace offeringe that pertayneth vnto the Lorde haunge hys vnclennesse vpon him: the same soule shall perysche from amonge hys people. Moreouer, the soule that doeth touche any vncleane thinge, that is of the vnclennes of man: or of any vnclene beast, or any abhomination that is vnclene: and then eate of the flesh of the peaceoffringe whyche pertayneth vnto the Lorde, that soule shall perysche from hys people. And the Lorde spake vnto Moyses, sayinge: speake vnto the chyldē of Israel, and say: * ye shall eate no maner fatte of oxen, of Leui. 3. a

This is the anoyntynge of Aaron, and the anoyntinge of hys sonnes in the sacrifices of the Lorde, in the daye when he offred them to be priestes vnto the Lorde. And these be the sacrifices which the Lorde commaunded to be geuen them (in the daye of their anoyntynge) of the childzen of Israel, by a statute for euer in theyr generacions. This is the lawe of the burntoffeynge and of the meatoffringe, and of the sacrifyce for synne and trespalle, for consecracion and for the peaceoffringe: which the Lorde commaunded Moses in the mounte of Sinai, when he commaunded the childzē of Israel to offre their sacrifices vnto the Lord in the wildernesse of Sinai.

The.viii.Chapter.

A Ex.28.a AND the Lorde spake vnto Moses sayinge: take *Aaron and his sonnes with hym, and the vestures and the annoyntynge oyle, and a ponge ore for synne, and two rammes, and a basket with swete breade: and gather thou all the congregacion together vnto the doze of the tabernacle of wytnesse. And Moses dyd as the Lorde comaunded him, and the people were gathered together vnto the doze of the tabernacle of wytnesse. And Moses sayde vnto the congregacion: this is the thyng which the Lorde commaunded to be done. And Moses brought Aaron and his sonnes, and washed them with water, and put vpon him the albe, and gyrded him with a gyrdle, and put vpon him the tunicle, (of yalow silke) and gyue the Ephod theron, which he gyrded with the broderde girdel that was in the Ephode, and bounde it vnto hym therwith. And he put the brestlappe therto, and put in the brestlappe Urim and Thumin. And he put the mitre vpon his heade, B and put vpon the mytre (euen vpon the forefronte of his face) the golden plate of the holye crowne, as the Lorde commaun-

And he powred of the anoyntynge oyle vpon Aarons heade, and anoynted him, to sanctifye hym. And Moses brought Aarons sonnes, and put albes vpon them, and gyrded them with gyrdels, and put bonettes vpon their heades: C as the Lorde commaunded Moses. * And Ex.29.a he brought the pōg ore for synne. And Aaron and his sonnes put theyr hādes vpon the heade of the yonge ore that was for synne. And Moses slewe hym, and toke of the bloude, which he put vpon the hornes of the alter rounde about with his finger, and purified it, and powred the bloud vnto the botome of the alter, and sanctifyed it, and reconcyled it. And he toke all the fat that was vpon the inwardes, and the abundaunce of the lyuer, and the two kidneyes, and theyr fat, and Moses burned it vpon the alter. But the yonge ore and his hide, his flesh and his donge, he burnt with fyre wythout the hoost as the Lorde commaunded Moses. And he brought D the ram for the burntoffringe, and Aaron and his sonnes put theyr hades vpon the heade of the ram, which Moses kylled, and sprynled the bloude vpon the alter rounde aboute, and Moses cut the ram in peces and burnte the heade, the peces & the fat, and washed the inwardes and the legges in water, and Moses burnte the ram euery whyt vpon the alter, for a burnt sacrifice that it might be a swete sauoure, & an offring vnto the Lorde, as the Lorde commaunded Moses. * And he brought the Exo.29.c other ram, namely the ram of consecration (of the priestes) and Aaron and his sonnes put theyr handes vpon the heade of the ram: which Moses slewe, and toke of the bloude of it, and put it vpon the typpe of Aarons right eare, & vpon the thombe of his ryght hande, and vpon the greate E too of his right fote. And Moses brought Aarons sonnes, and put of the bloude of the ram vpon the typpe of the right eare of them, and vpon the thombes of their right handes, and vpon the great tooes of theyr ryght fote, and Moses sprinkled the bloud vpō the alter rounde aboute. * And he toke Ex.29.d the fat and the roumpe, and all the fat that was vpon the inwardes, and the aboundaunce of the lyuer, and the.ii. kydneyes with their fat, and the right shoulder. And out of the basket of swete breade that was before the lord, he toke one swete cake of oyled breade, and one wafer, and put them on the fat & vpō the right shoulder: and put all together vpon Aarōs handes, and vpon his sonnes handes, and we-

And Moses toke of the anoyntynge oyle, & of the blonde whiche was vpon the alter, and sprynkled it vpon Aaron and vpon his testimentes, vpō his sonnes and on his sonnes testimentes with him, and sanctified Aaron, his vestures and his sonnes, and his sonnes vestures with him. A And it fortuned that in the eyghte daye, Moses called Aaron and hys sonnes, & the elders of Israel: and beaſtes, that ſhall ye eate. Neuertheles, theſe ſhall ye not eate, of theym that chawe cud, & deuideth the hoofes, as is the camell, whiche chaweth cud, but he deuydeth not the hooſe, therfore is he vncleane vnto you, euen ſo the conye, whiche chaweth the cud, but deuideth not the hooſe: he is vncleane to you. And the hare, thoughe he chaweth the cudde, yet becauſe he deuydeth not the hooſe, he is therfore vncleane to you. And againe, the ſwyne, thoughe he deuyde the hooſe into two clawes, yet he chaweth not the cudde. He is vncleane to you. Of theire fleſh ſhal ye not eate, & theyr carkaſſes ſhal ye not touche, but let them be vncleane to you. 9 Theſe ſhall ye eate of all that are in the waters: whatſoeuer hathe fynnes and ſkales in the waters, ſeas and ryuers, that ſhall ye eate. And all that haue not fynnes and ſkales, in the ſea and ryuers, of al that moue and lyue in the waters, let theym be abhominacion vnto you: ye ſhall not eate of their fleſhe, but abhoare theyr carkaſſes.

Let all that haue no fynnes nor ſkales i the waters, be abhompnable vnto you. C Theſe are they whiche ye ſhal abhoare among the foules, and that oughte not to be eaten, for they are an abhompnacyon. The egle, the gochaunde, & the cormoraunt, the vultur & the hite after his kinde, and all rauēs after their kind, the eſtriche, the night crow, the hockowe, and the owle after his kynde, the kaleō, the ſtorcke, the great oule, the backe, the pellicane, the pye, the herō, the Jaye after his kynde, the lapwyng: & the ſwalow.
Let all foules that crepe and goe vpon all foure, be an abhominacyon vnto you.

D yet these maye ye eate, of euerye creppnge thynge that hath wynges, & go vpon foure fete: euen thoste that haue knees aboue vp on theyr feete, to lepe wythall vpon the erth, euen these of them ye maye eate, * the Arbe after his kynde: the ‡ Selaam after hys kynde: the * Hargoll after hys kind, and the ‡ Hagab after his kinde. All other foules that mone and haue foure fete, shall be abhomynacyon vnto you. In suche ye be vncleane, and whosoeuer toucheth the carkas of them, shall be vncleane vnto the euen: and whosoeuer beareth the carkasse of theym, shall wasshe hys clothes, and be

E vncleane vntyll euen. And euery beast that hathe hoofe, and deuydeth it not into two clawes, nor chaweth cud, suche are vnclene vnto you: euerye one that toucheth them, shall be vncleane. And what soeuer goeth vpon his handes among all maner beastes that go on all foure fete, suche are vncleane vnto you: and who so doeth touche theyr carkasse * shal be vncleane vntyl the euen. And he that beareth the carkasse of theym, shall wasshe hys clothes, and be vncleane vntyll the euen, for suche are vncleane vnto you. And let these also be vncleane to you amonge the thynges that crepe vpon the earth, the weasell, and the mouse, and the toade, after theyr kynde, the hedgehogge, the stellion, the lacerte, the snayle, and the molle: these are vncleane to you amonge all that crepe: who so euer doeth touche theym when they be deade, shall be vncleane vntyll the euen. And what soeuer any of the dead carkasses of them doeth fall vpon, shall be vncleane: whether it be vessell of woode, or rayment, or skynne, or bagge, or whatsoeuer vessel it be that anye wurke is wrought in. And it must be plunged in the water, and it shalbee vncleane vntyll the euen, and so shall it bee clensed.

F All maner of erthen vessell wherinto anye of them falleth, shall be vncleane, with all that therin is: and * it shall be broken. All maner meate also that is vsed to be eaten, if any suche water come vpon it, it shalbe vncleane. And al maner of drynke that is vsed to be dronk in al maner such vessels, shalbe vncleane. And euerye thynge that theyr carkasse falleth vpon, shall be vncleane: Whether it be ouen or kettell, lette it be broken. For they are vncleane, and shal be vncleane vnto you: Neuerthelater, yet the fountaynes and welles, and collection of waters shall be cleane styll. And who so toucheth theyr carkases, shal be vncleane. Yf the deade carkase of anye suche fall vpon any sede vsed to sowe, it shall yet be cleane styll: but and yf any water be powred vpon the sede, and a deade carkasse fall therein, it shall be vncleane vnto you. Yf any beaste of whyche ye maye eate, dye and anye man touche the deade carkasse thereof, he shall be vncleane vntyll the euen. He that eateth of the deade carkasse of it, shall wasshe hys clothes, and be vncleane vntyll the euen. And he also that beareth the carkasse of it, shall wasshe hys clothes and be

G vncleane vntyll euen. Let euery creppnge thyng that creepeth vpon the erth, be an abhomynacyon, and not be eaten. What soeuer goeth vpon the breast, and whatsoeuer goeth vpon foure, or that hathe moe feete amonge al creppng thinges that crepe vpō the earth, yf that ye eate not, for they are abhommable. Ye shall not make your soules abhominable wyth nothynge that creepeth, neyther make youre selues vncleane wyth them: that ye should be defyled therby. For I am the Lorde youre God. Be Sanctyfied therfore, and ye shall be holye *for I am holy: and ye shal not defyle your Leu.10.a soules with any maner of creppng thyng, i.Per.1.c. that creepeth vpon the earth. For I am the Lorde, that brought you oute of the lande of Egipte, to be your God: ye shall be holy therfore, for I am holye. This is the lawe of beastes and foules, and of euery lyuinge creature that moueth in the waters, and of euery creature that crepeth vpō the erth, that there may be a difference betwene the vncleane & cleane, and betwene the beaste that may be eaten, and the beast that ought not to be eaten.

¶ The.xii. Chapter.

A AND the Lorde spake vnto Moses, saying: speake vnto the children of Israell, & say: yf a woman hath conceaued, and borne a manchilde, she shall be vncleane seuen dayes: euen in lyke maner as when she is put a parte in tyme of her naturall dysease. And in the eyght day the flesshe of the childes * foreskynne shalbe gen.27.b and.21.a. cut away. And she shal the continue in the Luk.ii.d blonde of her purifyinge three and thyrtie dayes. She shal touche no halowed thyng, nor come into the sanctuary, vntil the tyme of her purifyinge be oute. If she beare a maydechilde, she shalbe vncleane two weekes, as when she hath her naturall disease. And she shall continue in the bloud of her purifyinge thesedoze and sixe dayes. * And C Luke.ii.d when the dayes of her purifiynge are oute: whether it be for a son or for a doughter, she shal bring a lābe of one yere old for a burnt offring, & a yong pigeō or a turtyl doue for syn vnto the doze of the tabernacle of witnes, & to the preest: which shal offre thē before the lord, & make an attonemēt for her, and hath borne a male or female. But and yf she be not able to bringe a lambe, she shal the one for the burnteoffrige, & the other for synne. And the preist shal make an attonement for her, and she shalbe cleane.

¶ The.xiii. Chapter.

1 AND the Lorde spake vnto Moses and Aaron sayinge: when there ap-peareth a risinge in any mās flesh, ether a scabbe, or a glistrig white: and the plage of a leprosye be in the skynne of hys flesh, he shall be broughte vnto Aaron the preist, or vnto one of his sonnes the priestes: & the preist shal loke on the sore in the skynne of his flesche. And when the heare in the sore is turned vnto whyte, and the sore also seme to be lower then the skynne of his flesh it wilbe a plage of leprosye, & the priestes shal loke on him, and iudge him vncleane. Yf ther be but a white plecke in the skyn of his flesh, and seme not to be lower then the skyn, nor the heare ther-of is turned vnto white, the priest shall shut him vp seuen dayes. And the priest shal loke vpon him againe the seuēth day: And yf the plage seme to hym to abyde styll, and the plage growe not in the skin, the priest shall shut him vp yet.vii. dayes mo. And the priest shall loke on hym a-gayne the.vii. daye. Then yf the plage be darker, and not growen in the skynne, the priest shall iudge hym cleane, for it is but a skirfe. And he shal wash his clothes, and be cleane. But & if the scabbe growe in the skynne after that he is sene of the priest, and iudged clene, he shalbe sene of the priest agayne. Yf the priest se that the scabbe be growē abrode in the skinne, 2b the Priest shall make hym vncleane: for it is a leprosye. When the plage of the leprosye is in a mā, he shalbe brought vnto the Priest, and the priest shall se hym.
And yf the risynge be white in the skyn, & haue made the heare white, and there be rawe flesh in the sore it wylbe an olde leprosye in the skynne of his flesche. And the priest shall make hym vncleane, and shall not shut hym vp seynge he is vncleane. If a leprosie breake out abrode in the skinne, and couer all the skynne, frō his heade to his foote, whersoeuer the priestes loketh, and the Priest loke vpon him. And yf the leprosye haue couered all hys flesh, he shal iudge the plage to be cleane because it is al turned into witnes, & he shalbe cleane.
But and if there be raw flesh on him whē he is sene, he shall be vncleane, And the priest shall se the rawe flesche, and declare C hym to be vncleane. For the raw flesh is vncleane seyng it is a leprosye. Or yf the rawe flesh depart againe and chaūge vnto white, he shal come to the Priestes, and the priest shall se hym and beholde: If the sore be chaūged vnto white (& couer the whole man) the Priest shal iudge the plage cleane & he shalbe cleane: The flesche also in whose skyn ther is a byle & is healed, and in the place of the byle there ap-peare a white risinge, ether a shining whit and somwhat reddiche, it shall be sene of the priest. And yf when the priest seyeth him, it appeare lower then the skinne, and the heare therof be chaunged vnto white, the priest shall iudge hym vncleane: for it is a plage of leprosye, broken oute of the D byle. But and yf the priest loke on it and there be no white heares therin, and yf it be not lower then the skyn, but be darker, the priest shall shut him vp. vii. dayes.
And yf it spredeabrode in the flesche, the priest shal make him vncleane, seynge it is the plage. But and yf the spot stāde stil, and growe not, it is the pynne of an hote byll, and therfore the priest shall declare hym to be cleane. If there be any flesche, in whose skynne there is a hote burnynge, & the flesh that burneth haue a whit spotte, somwhat reddich or whit, the priest shall loke vpō it. And if the heare in that bright spot be chaūged to white, and it appeare lower then the skin, it is a leprosie broken out of the burnyng. And therfore the priest shall iudge him vncleane, seynge it is the plage of leprosye. But yf the priest loke on it & there be no whit heare in the bright spot, and be no lower then the other skin, but be darker, the priest shall shut hym vp seuen dayes. And the priest shall loke on hym the seuenth daye: And if it be growen abroade in the skynne, the priest shall iudge hym vncleane, seynge it is the plage of leprosye. And if the spot stode stil in it, and growe not in the skynne, but is darcke, it is a risynge of the burnynge, & the Priestes shall therfore declare hym cleane, seyng it is the print of the burning. 28 If a mā or womā hath a sore vpō the heade or the bearde, the priest shall se it. And if it appeare lower then the skinne, & there be in it a yalow heare: and thynne (more then it was wonte to be) the priest shall iudge hym vncleane, seynge that the same sterige is a token of leprosie vpō the heare or berde. And yf the priestes loke on the sore of the pynne, and it seme not lower then the skinne, and that the heare is not blacke, the priestes shall shut vp the frett-tynge sore seuen daies. And on the seuenth daye the prieste shall loke on the sore: and yf the sore be not growen, and there be in it no yalowe heare, and the sore seme not lower thē the skynne, he shalbe shauē: but the place of the sore shal he not shaue, and the prieste shal shut vp the sore seuē dayes mo. And in the seuēth daye the prieste shal loke on the sore: And yf the sore be not growen in the skynne, nor seme lower then the other skin, the prieste shall clense hym, and he shal wash his clothes, and be clene. But if the sore growe in the fleshe after his clenlynge, the prieste shal loke on hym. And yf the sore be growen in the skynne, the prieste shal not seke for yelow heare, for he is vncleane. But yf he se the paynte stande stil, and that there is blacke heare growne vp therin, the sore is healed, and he shalbe cleane, & the prieste shall declare him to be clene. If there be whyte spottes in the skynne of the fleshe of mā or woman, the prieste shal loke vpon it. And if the spottes in the skynne of their fleshe be somewhat darcke & white withal, [he may be sure, that it is no leprosie: it is a freckel growīg in the flesh: Therfore is he cleane. And the man (whose heade is destitute of heare, wherby he is made balde) is cleane. And he that hathe hys heare out in his foreheade, is foreheade balde, and cleane. If there be in the baulde heade or baulde foreheade a white reddysshe sore scabbe, there is leprosie spryng vp in his baulde heade or baulde foreheade. And the prieste shall loke vpon him, and if the rysynge of the sore be white reddisshe in his baulde heade or baulde forehearde, after the maner of leprosie which is in the skynne of the fleshe, thē he is a Leperous man and vncleane. And the prieste shal make him vncleane, for the plage ther of is in his heade. The leper in whom the plage is, shal haue his clothes rent, & hys heade bare and shall put a couerynge vpō hys lyppe, and shalbe called vncleane and defyled. And as lōge as the dysease lasteth vpō him, he shalbe defyled and vncleane: he shal dwell alone, euen ✶ wythoute the host shal his habitatiō be. The cloth that the plage of leprosye is in, whether it be linen or wollen, whether it be in the warpe or woofe of lynen or of wollen, ether in a skynne or any thing made of skynne, if the disease be pale or somwhat reddisshe in the cloth or skyn: whether it be in the warpe or woofe of anye thynge that is made of skinne, thē it is a plage of leprosye, & shal be shewed vnto the prieste. The prieste therfore shall se the plage, and shut it vp seuen daies, and loke on the plage the seuenth daye. Which if it be increased in the cloth (whether it be in the warpe or woofe, or in a skynne) or in any thig that is made of skynne it is the leprosye of a fretynge sore: it is vncleane: and that clothe shalbe burnt, ether warpe or woofe, whether it be wollē or linnen, or any thing that is made of skynne, wherin the plage is, for it is a frettig leprosie, it shalbe burnt in the fire. If the prieste se that the plage is not growē in the clothe: ether in the warpe or woofe or in whatsoeuer thynge of skynne it be, the prieste shall commaunde them to washe the thing wherin the plage is, and he shal shut it vp seuen dayes mo. And the prieste shal loke on the plage again, after that it is washed. And if the plage haue not chaūged his colour, and is spredde no further abrode, it is vncleane. Thou shalt burne it in the fire, for it is a fret inward: in part or in al together. And if the prieste se that the plage is darker after that it is washed, he shal rente it out of the cloth, or out of the skynne, or out of the warpe, or oute of the woofe. And yf it apeare any more in the cloth (ether in the warpe or in the woofe or in any thinge made of skynne) it is a waxynge plage. Thou shalte burne the plage that is in it. Moreouer the clothe, ether warpe or woofe, or whatsoeuer thynge of skynne it be whiche thou hast washed, yf the plage be departed there from, it shalbe washed once again: & thē shal it be clene. This is the law of the plage of leprosye in a cloth whether it be wollē or linnē: either in the warpe or woofe, or in any thinge of skynnes, to make it cleane or vncleane.

AND the Lorde spake vnto Moses, saying: ✶ this is the law of the leper in the daye of his clenlynge: He shalbe brought vnto the prieste, and the prieste shal go out without the hoost, & loke vpō him. And if the plage of leprosie be healed in the leper, then shall the prieste commaūde that he which is to be clensed, bring two liuige birdes & cleane, & cedar wood, and purple cloth, and ysope. And the prieste shal commaunde that one of the birdes be killed in an earthen vessel and vpō rēning water. And he shall take the liuynge birde with the cedar wood, the purple and the ysope, and shal dippe them and the liuinge birde in the bloud of the slayne birde, vpō the rennynge water, and sprinkle vpō him (that must be clensed of his leprosye) seuē tymes, and clense hym, and shall let the liuynge birde goe free into the felde. And he that is clēsed, shal washe his clothes, and shaue of all his heare, and washe him selfe in water, that he may be cleane. And after that shall he come into the hoost, and shal tarye

And he shal wasche his clothes & his flesche in water, & he shalbe cleane. In the eight daye he shall take two lābes without blemyshe & an ewe lambe of a yeare olde without blemishe, and thre tenth deales of Minha. fyne floure for a * meatoffrynge myngled with oyle & a logge of oyle. And the priest that maketh him cleane, shal bring the mā that is to be made cleane & those thynges, before the Lorde, euen before the doore of the Tabernacle of witnesse. And the priest shal take one lābe, and offer him for trespasse, and the logge of oyle, and waue thē before the Lord. And he shal slee the lambe in the place where the synneoffrynge & the burnteoffrynge are slayne: eus in the holy place. For as the synneoffrynge is, euen so is the trespasse offrynge the priestes: seyng it is moste holy. And the priest shall take of the bloude of the trespasse offrynge, and put it vpon the typpe of the right eare of hym that is to be clensed, & vpō the thōbe of his right hande and vpon the great too C of his right foote. The priest shall take of the logge of oyle, and powre it into the palme of his lefte hāde, and dyppe hys right fynger in the oyle that is in his left hande, and sprynkle of the oyle wyth hys fynger seuen tymes before the Lorde. And of the rest of the oyle that is in his hande, shal the priest put vpon the typpe of the ryght eare of hym that is for to be clensed, and vpon the thombe of his righte hande, and vpon the great too of hys righte fote, euen vpon the bloude, of the trespasse offrynge. And the remnaūte of the oyle that is in the priestes hande, he shall powre vpō the heade of hym that is for to be clēsed: and the priest shall make an attonemente for him before the Lorde. And the priest shall offer the synneoffrynge, and make an attonemente for hym that is to be clensed, for his vnclennesse. And then shal he kyl the burnteoffrynge, & the priest shal offre the burnteoffryng and the meatoffrynge vpon the alter: and the priestе shall make an attonement for him, and he Leui. v. b shalbe cleane. * If he be poore, and cannot get so muche, he shall take one lambe for a trespasse offeryng to waue it for his clensinge, and a tenth deale of fine floure mingled with oyle for a meatoffrige, & a logge D of oyle, and two turtil doues or two yong pygeons, suche as he is able to get, wherof the one shalbe for synne, and the other for a burnteoffrynge. And he shal bryngе them the, viii. daye for hys clensynge vnto the Priest before the doore of the tabernacle of wytnesse before the Lorde. And the priest shal take the lābe that is for the trespasse, and the logge of oyle, and waue them before the Lorde. And he shal kyll the lambe for the trespasse, and the priestе shall take of the bloude of the trespasse offrynge, and put it vpō the tippe of his right eare that is to be clensed, and vpon the thombe of his right hande, and vpon the great too of his right fote. And the priestе shall powre of the oyle into the right hande, and the priestе shal with his finger sprinkle of the oyle that is in his left hande, seuen tymes before the Lorde. And the priest shall put of the oyle that is in hys hande vpon the typpe of the ryghte eare of hym that is to be clensed, and vpon the thombe of hys ryght hāde, and vpon the great too of hys right fote: euē in the place where the bloud of the trespasse offeringe was put. And the rest of the oyle that is in the priestes hāde, he shall put vpō the heade of hym that is to be clensed: that he maye make an attonemente for hym before the Lorde. And he shal offer one of the turtyll doues or of the yonge pygeons, such as he can get: the one for a synneoffrynge, and the other for a burnteoffrynge with the meateoffring. And the priestе shall make an attonement for him that is to be clensed, before the Lord. This is the lawe of hym in whome is the plage of leprosye, and whose hande is not able to get that whiche pertayneth E to hys clensynge. And the Lord spake vnto Moses and Aaron sayinge: when ye be come vnto the lande of Canaan whyche I geue you in possellion. And yf I put the plage of leprosye in a house of the lande of youre possellion, he that oweth the house shall come, and tell the priestе, sayinge: me thynche that there is as it were a leprosye in the house.

And the priestе shall commaunde them to emptye the house before the priestе go into it to se the plage: that all that is in the house be not made vncleane, and then muste the priestе go in to se the house. If the priestе also se that the plage is in the walles of the house, and that there be holowe strakes pale or red whiche seme to be lower then the wall it selfe, the priestе shall go oute at the house dores, and shut vp the house seuen dayes. And the priestе shall come agayne the seuenth daye, and yf he se that the plage be increased in the walles of the house, the priestе shall cōmaunde them to take awaye the stones in which the plage

the house to be scraped within rounde about, and powre out the dust (that they scrape of) without the cyte into a foule place. And they shal take other stones and put them in the place of those stones, and other mortes to plaster the house withall. And yf the plage come agayne and breake out in the house, after that he hath taken awaye the stones and scraped the walles of the house, and after that he hath plasterd the house a newe: the Priest shall come and se it. And yf he perceaue that the plage hath growen further in the house, it is a freeynge leprosye in the house. It is therefore vncleane. And he shall breake downe the house. And the stones of it, and the tymbre therof, & all the morter of the house, shal he carye out of the cyte vnto a foule place. Moreouer, he that goeth into the house all the whyle that it is shut vp, shalbe vncleane vntyll the euen. He that slepeth i the house, shal wash his clothes: he lykewyse that eateth in the house, shall washe his clothes. And yf the Priest come 16 and se, that the plague hath spred no further in the house (after that it is new plasterd) the Priest shall iudge that house, cleane, because the plage is healed. And let hym take to clense the house wythall: two byrdes, cedar wood, purple cloth & yssope. And he shal kil one of the birdes in an erthē vessel, & vpon runninge water: & take the cedar wood, & the yssope, & the purple with the lyuinge byrde, & dyppe thē in the bloud of the slayne byrde, & in the running water, & sprinkle the house seuen tymes, & clense the house with the bloud of the bird, and with the running water, with the lyuing byrd, with the cedar wood, & the yssope, & the purple cloth. But he shall lette the lyuing byrde flee out of the towne into the brode feldes, & so make an attonemēt for the house, and it shalbe cleane. This is the law for al maner plage of leprosye and breakinge out, and of the leprosye of clothe and house: for a swelling, for a scabbe, and for a white blister. To teache whan it must be made vncleane and cleane. This is the lawe of leprosye.

1 AND the Lorde spake vnto Moyses and Aarō saying: Speake vnto the chyldrē of Israell, & saye vnto thē: Whosoeuer hath a running yssue out of his flesshe, is vncleane by reason of that yssue. And thys shall be the token of hys vnclennesse in hys yssue: whyen he is vncleane. Yf hys flesshe runne, or yf hys flesshe congele by the reason of hys yssue, then is it vnclennesse. Euery couche whereon he lyeth that hath the yssue, is vncleane, and euery thynge whereon he sytteth, is vncleane: Who so euer toucheth hys couche, shall washe hys clothes, and bathe hym selfe in water, and be vncleane vntyll the euen. And he that sytteth on any thynge where on he satte that hath the yssue, shal washe hys clothes: and bathe hym selfe in water, and be vncleane vntyll the euen. He that toucheth the flesshe of hym that hath the yssue, shall washe hys clothes, and bathe hym selfe in water, and be vncleane vnto the euen. Yf he also that hathe the yssue, spyt vpon him that is clene, he shal washe hys clothes, and bathe hym selfe in water, & be vnclene vntyl euen. And what 8 hoūse harnesse soeuer he rydeth vpon that hath the yssue, shalbe vncleane. And whosoeuer toucheth any thing that was vnder hym, shalbe vncleane vnto the euen. And he that beareth any suche thynges, shall washe his clothes, and bathe hym selfe in water, and be vncleane vnto the euen. And who soeuer he toucheth that hath the issue (and haue not fyrst washed his handes in water) shal washe his clothes, and bathe him selfe in water, & be vnclene vnto the euē. * The vessel of earth that he toucheth, Leu. 9. d. and. 11. f.

These are the feastes of the Lorde, euen holye conuocations, whyche ye shall proclayme in theyr ceasons. In the.xxiiii. daye of the fyrst moneth at euen Ex.12.c. is the Lordes * Passeouer. And on the fyf- Nu.28.c teneth day of the same moneth is the feast of swete bread vnto the Lord: seuen dayes ye muste eate vnleuened bread. * In the Ex.12.b fyrste daye ye shall haue an holye conuocation: ye shall do no labourious worcke B therein, But ye shal offre sacrifyces vnto the Lorde thorowoute those seuen dayes, and in the seuenth daye is an holye conuocation: ye shall do no labourious worcke therein. And the Lorde spake vnto Moyses, sayinge: speake vnto the chyldren of Nu.15.a Israell, and saye vnto them * when ye be come into the lande (whyche I geue vnto you) and reape downe the harueste thereof, ye shall bringe a sheffe of the fyrst frutes of youre harueste vnto the Priest, which shal waue the sheffe before the Lord to be accepted for you: and euen the morowe after the Sabboth, the Priest shall waue it. And ye shall offre that daye when ye haue the sheffe, an he lambe wythoute blemisshe of a yeare olde, for a burntesofferynge vnto the Lorde: and the meateofferynge thereof, shalbe made of two tenth deales of fyne floure mingled wyth oyle, to be a sacrifice vnto the Lorde for a swete sauoure: and the drincheofferinge thereof C shalbe of wyne, euen the fourth deale of an Iosh.5.6. hyn. * And ye shall eate neyther bread, nor parched corne, nor frumentie, nor newe corne vntyll the selfe same daye that ye haue broughte an offerynge vnto youre God. * And ye shall counte from the morowe Deu.16.b after the Sabboth: euen from the daye that ye broughte the sheffe of the waue offrynge. vii. And these holye thynges of the Lorde, shalbe the Priestes. And ye shall proclayme the same daye, that it maye be an holye conuocacion vnto you: ye shal do no labourious worke therin: let it be a lawe for euer in al youre dwellynges, and in al youre generacions. * And when ye reepe downe youre Leu.19.b harueste thou shalte not make cleane rydd- deu.24.d daunce of the felde, neither shalt thou make any aftergatherynge of thy harueste: but shalte leaue it vnto the poore & the straunger. And the Lorde spake vnto Moyses saying: Speake vnto the chyldren of Israell, & saye: * the fyftenth daye of the same seuenth moneth is the feaste of tabernacles, seuen dayes vnto the Lorde. The first daye is an holye conuocation: ye shall do no laborious worcke. The fyrste daye shalbe as a Sabboth: likewise in the .viii. daye shalbe the rest of the Sabboth. And ye shall take you in the fyrst daye, the frutes of goodly trees, braunches of palme trees, and the bowes of thicke trees, and wyllowes of the brooke, and shall reioyce before the Lorde youre God seuen dayes. And ye shal kepe thys feast vnto the Lord seuen dayes in the yeare. It shalbe a lawe for euer in youre generations, that ye kepe it in the seuenthe monethe. ye shall dwell in boothes seuen dayes: euen al that are Israelites borne, shall dwell in boothes, that youre chyldren after you maye knowe, howe that I made the chyldren of Israel to dwel in boothes, whō I brought them out of the lande of Egypte: I am the Lorde your God. And Moyses spake vnto the chyldren of Israell, concerning the feastes of the Lorde.

A And the Lorde spake vnto Moyses, saynge: * commaunde the chyldren Ex.27.D of Israell that they bringe vnto the, pure oyle olyue beaten for lyghtes, to cause the lampes to burne alway: without the vayle of wytnesse: in the Tabernacle of wytnesse, shall Aaron dresse theym bothe euen and mornynge before the Lorde alwayes. Let it be a lawe for euer in youre generacyons. He shal dresse the lampes vppon the pure candelstycke before the Lorde perpetuallye. * And thou shalte take fyne flowre, and bake twelue wallels therof, two tenth deales shalbe in one wallell. And thou shalte set them in two rowes, fyue on a rowe vpon the pure table before the Lorde, and putte pure frankencens vppon the rowes, that they maye be breade of remembraunce, and an offeryng to the Lorde. Euery Sabboth he shall put them in rowes before the Lorde euermoare: of the chyldren of Israell shall they be offered for an euerlastynge couenaunte. * And they shall be Aarons and hys sonnes, whyche shall eate them in the holy place. For they are moste holye vnto hym of the offerynges of the Lorde by a perpetual statute. And the sone of an Israelitiche wife, whose father was an Egiptian, wente out amonge the chyldren of Israell. And thys sonne of the Israelitiche wyfe, and a man of Israel, strouе togethеr in the hoste. And the Israelitiche womās sōne * blaspemed the name of the Lord & * cursed, & they broughte him vnto Moyses. And the Lord spake vnto Moyses, saying: bryng the cursed speaker wythout the hoofte, and let all that heарde hym, put theyr handes vpon his head, and let all the multitude stone hym. And thou shalte speake vnto the chyldren of Israell saying: Whosoeuer curseth hys God, shall beare hys synne. And he that blaspheмeth the name of the Lorde, lette hym be slayne, and all the multitude shall stone hym to death. Whether he be borne in the lande or a straūger, whā he blaspheмeth the name of the Lorde, lette hym be slayne. And * he that killeth any mā, let him dye the death. And he that killeth a beaste, let hym make hym good, soule for soule. And yf a man mayme his neyghbor, as he hath done, so shall it be done to hym: broke for broke, * eye for eye, and toth for tothe: euen as he hathe maymed a man, so shall he be maymed agayne. And he that killeth a beaste, let hym paye for it: and he that killeth a man, let hym dye. ye shall haue one maner of lawe: euen for the straunger as well as for one of youre selues, for I am the Lorde your God. And Moyses tolde the chyldren of Israel, and they brought hym (that had cursed) oute of the hoofte, and stoned hym with stones. And the chyldren of Israell dyd as the Lorde commaunded Moyses.

That whiche groweth of the owne accorde thou shalt not reape, neither gather the grapes that thou hast left behynde, for it is a yeare of reste vnto the lande. And the reste of the lande shalbe meate for you: euē for the, for thy seruāte, and for thy mayde, for thy hyred seruaūt, & for the straunger that sogeourneth with the: and for thy cattel, and for the beastes that are in the lande, shall all the encrease therof be meate. And thō thou shalt make a trūpe blowe: in the tēth day of the seuenth moneth, euen in the daye of attonement shal ye make the trūpe blow, throwout all your lande. And thou shalt halowe that yeare: euē the fiftyeth yeare, and proclayme libertie throwout the lāde vnto al the inhabiters therof, for it shalbe a yeare of iubelye vnto you, and ye shall retourne euery man vnto his possellion, and euery man vnto hys kynred agayne. A yeare of iubelye shall that fiftieth yeare be vnto you. ye shal not sowe, neither reape that which groweth of it selfe, nether gather the grapes that are lefte. And the lande shall geue her frute, and ye shall eate your fyll, and dwell therin in saftetye. And yf ye shal saye: what shal we eate the seuēth yeare, for we shal not sowe, nor gather in our encrease? I wil sende my blessynge vpon you in the syxte yeare, and it shall bryng forth frute for thre yeres: and ye shall sowe the eight yeare, and eate yet of olde corne vntyll the nynth yeare: euen vntyll her frutes come, ye shal eate of olde store. The lande shall not be solde to be waste: for * the lande is myne, and ye be but straungers and sotourners with me. But and yf hys hande cannot get sufficyente to restore to the other agayne, then that which is solde shal remaine in the hāde of him that hath bought it, vntyll the yeare of iubelye: and in the iubelye it shal come out, and he shal retourne vnto his possellion agayne. And yf a man sell a house or a dwelling within the walles of a citie, he maye bye it oute agayne within a whole yeare after it is solde: euen anye daye of the yeare shall he redeme it againe. But and yf he bye it not oute again within the space of a ful yeare, then the house that is in the walled citye shalbe stablyshed, and be hys owne that bought it, & his succeffours after him, and shal not go out in the iubely. But the houses of billages which haue no walles roūd about them, are coūted as the felde of the coūtre, and therfore they may be bought out agayne, and shall retourne in the iubelye. And I wil make your heauēas yron, & your erth as brasse: And youre laboure shalbe spent in bayne. For youre lande shall not geue her increase, nether shall the trees of the lande geue theyr frutes. And yf ye walke contrarie vnto me, and wil not harken vnto me, I wyll brynge seuen tymes mo plages vpon you, accordinge to your synnes. I wyll also sende in wilde beastes vpon you, which shall robbe you of youre childzen, & destroye your catel, and make you fewe in numbre, and cause youre hye wayes to growe vnto a wyldernesse. And

And I wil sende a swerde vpō you, that shall auenge my testament. And whē ye are gathered together wyth in youre Cities, I wyl sende the pestilence amonge you, and ye shalbe deliuered into the hāde of the enemye. And when I haue broken the staffe of your breade: tenne wiues shal bake youre breade in one ouē, and they shal deliuer you your breade againe by weight

I wil destroye youre hye places, and roote out your ymages, and caste youre carkasses vpon the bodyes of youre ydolles, and my soule shal abhorre you. And I wyll make your cities desolate, and bring your sanctuary vnto noughte, & wyl not smell the swetnesse of youre odoures. I wil brynge the lāde vnto a wyldernesse, and youre enemyes whyche dwell therin, shal wonder at it. And I wil strowe you amonge the hethen, and wyll drawe out a swerde after you, and youre lande shalbe wast, and your cities desolate. Then shall the lande enioye her Sabbothes, as longe as it lyeth boyde, and ye shalbe in youre enemies lande: euen then shall the lande rest, and reioyce in her Sabbothes. As longe as it lyeth boyde, it shal reste, be-

F cause it dyd not rest in youre Sabbothes, when ye dwelte vpon it. And vpon them that are lefte alyue of you, I wyll sende a faintenesse into theyr hertes in the lande of theyr enemyes: and the sounde of a shakynge leafe, shal chace them, and whē they flee the swerde, they shal fall: no man folowynge vpon them. They shall fall one vpon another, as it were before a swerde, euen no mā folowynge vpō them, and ye shall haue no power to stande before youre enemyes: And ye shall perysche amonge the hethen, and the lande of your enemyes shall eate you vp. And they that are lefte of you, shall pyne awaye in theyr vnrighteousnes, euen in theire enemies lāde and in the mysdeades of theyr fathers shall they consume. And they shall confesse theyr mysdeades and the mysdeades of theyr fathers for theyr trespace, which they haue trespassed agaynste me, and for that also that they haue walked contrarye vnto me. Therfore, I also wyl walke contrarye vnto them, and wyll brynge them into the lande, of theyr enemyes. And then at the leste waye theyr vncircumcysed heartes shall be tamed, their mysdeades. And * I wil remēbre my couenaūt, with Jacob, and my bonde with Jsahac and myne appointmēt with Abraham wyll I remembre, and wil rynche on the lande. The lande shalbe lefte of them, and shal enioye her Sabbothes while she lyeth waste without them. And they shall make an attonemente for their mistrades, because they despysed my lawes, & because theyr soule refused myne ordeynaunces: And yet for all that when they be in the Deut.4.e lāde of their enemyes, * I wyll not cast thē away, nether wil abhorre thē, to destroye thē vtterlye, and to breake myne appointment with them: for I am the Lorde theyr Exo.19.a God. * I wil for their sakes remembre the couenaūt made vnto theyr fathers whome I brought out of the lāde of Egypte in the sight of the hethē, that I myghte be theyr God: I am the Lorde. These are the ordeynaunces and iudgementes, & lawes which the Lorde made betwene him and the childzen of Jsrael in mounte Sinai, by the hande of Moses.

AND the lord spake vnto Moses saynge: speake vnto the childzē of Jsrael, & say vnto thē: Jf any mā wyl geue a singuler vow vnto the Lord accordynge to the value of the soules, the value of the male from twentye yeare olde vnto sixty shalbe fiftie * sicles of siluer after the Nu.3.g. weight of sanctuarie. And if it be a female: the value shalbe thirtie sicles. And frō fiue yeares to twēty, the male shalbe set at twētie sicles, & the female at ten sicles. And frō a moneth vnto fiue yeare, the male shalbe set at fiue sycles of syluer, and the female at thre. And he that is fyrtie yeare olde, & aboue, shalbe valued at fifteene sicles, and the woman at ten. But yf he be to poore to be sette, he shall presente hym selfe before the Prieste: and the Prieste shall value hym, accordynge as the hande of hym that vowed is able to get, euē so shall the Prieste value hym. If it be a beaste of whiche men bringe an offerynge vnto the Lorde: all that any man geueth of suche vnto the Lorde shall be counted holye. He shall not alter it nor chaunge it: a good for a badde, or a badde for a good. And yf he chaunge beaste for beaste, then bothe the same beaste, and it also wherwith it was chaunged shalbe holy. If it be any maner of vncleane beaste, of whiche men do not offre a sacrifice vnto the Lorde, he shal set the beast before the prieste, and the prieste shall value it, whether it be good or badde. And as the Prieste setteth it, so shall it be. But yf he wyl bie it agayne, he shal geue the fifte parte more aboue that it was set at. If any man dedicate his house, to be holy vnto the Lord, the Priest shal set it, whether it be good or badde: & as the priest hath set it, so shall the value be. And whan he that sanctified it, wil redeme his house, let him geue the fifte parte of the money that it was iudged at therto, and it shalbe his. yf a man halowe a pece of hys inherited lande vnto the Lorde: it shalbe set accordynge to the seed therof. If it beare an homer of barly, it shalbe set at fiftye sicles of siluer. If he halow his felde immediatly from the yeare of iubelye, it shalbe worth accordynge as it is esteemed. But and yf he halowe hys felde after the Jubelye, the priest shall reken the mony accordynge to the numbre of the yeares that remayne vn to the yeares of Jubelye folowynge, and there after it shall be lower set. If he that cōsecrated the feld, will redeme it agayne, let hym put the fifte part of the price that it was set at therunto, and it shal be hys. And if he wil not redeme the felde, but selleth the feld to another mā, he that vowed may redeme it nomore. But when the feld goeth out in the yere of iubelie, it shal be holy vnto the Lorde: euen as a felde that is vtterlye put awaye, and it shal be the priestes possession. If a man sanctifye vnto the LORD a felde whyche he hathe bought, and is not of his enheritaunce, the Prieste shall reken vnto hym what it is worth vnto the yeare of iubelye, & he shall geue the price that it is set at, thesame day as a thynge consecrated vnto the Lorde. And in the yeare of iubelye, the felde shall returne vnto hym, of whome he boughte it: euen vnto hym whose enherytaunce of lande it is. And all settynge shalbe accordynge to the sicle * of the sanctuarye. One sycle conteineth twentye halfepens. But the fyrste borne of the beastes that is appointed vnto the Lord, maye no man sanctifie: whether it be ore or shepe, for it is the Lordes already. If it be na vncleane beaste, he shall redeme it, as it is set at, and geue the fifte parte more thereto: Or if it be not redemed, it shalbe solde, accordynge to the value. Notwythstandyng, no damned thynge that a man putteth from hym, and dedicateth vnto the Lorde of al hys good (whether it be manne or beast or lande of hys enheritaunce) maye be solde or redemed: for euerye thynge so put awaye, is moste holy vnto the Lorde. Let not damned thynge that a man separateth, be redemed, but dye the death. Euery tithe of the lande whyche is of the seade of the lande, or of the frute of the trees, is the Lordes, and is sanctified vnto the Lorde. And if a man wyll redeme ought of hys tithes, let him adde the fifte part therto. And euery tythe of ore and of shepe, and of euery beast that goeth vnder the rodde, euen euery tēth shalbe holy vnto the Lorde. He shall not loke yf it be good or badde, nor chaunge it. els yf he chaunge it, both it, & that it was chaunged wythall, shalbe halowed vnto the Lorde, and maye not be redemed. These are the commaundementes whiche the Lorde commaunded by Moyses vnto the childzen of Jsraell in mounte Sinai.

A THeſe are the generacions of Aaron & Moſes, in the daye that the Lorde ſpake with Moyſes in mounte Sinai, & theſe are the names of the ſonnes of Aaron: Nadab the eldeſt ſonne, Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar. * Theſe are the names of the ſonnes of Aaron, whiche were + prieſtes annoynted, & whoſe hande was conſecrated to miniſtre. * And Nadab and Abihu dyed before the Lord whan they offred ſtraunge fyre before the Lorde in the wilderenes of Sinai, and had no chyldren. And Eleazar & Ithamar miniſtred in the ſyght of Aaron their father. And the Lorde ſpake vnto Moſes, ſaying: bring the tribe of Leui, & ſet them before Aaron the prieſt * that they maye ſerue him, and wayte by on hym and vpon al the multitude, before the tabernacle of wytneſſe, to do the ſeruice of the habitacyon. They ſhall kepe all the apparell of the tabernacle of wytneſſe, and wayte vpon the chyldren of Iſrael to do the ſeruice of the habytacyon. And thou ſhalt geue the Leuites vnto Aaron & his ſonnes, for they are geuen and delyuered vnto hym of the childzen of Iſraell. And thou ſhalt appoynt Aaron and his ſonnes to waite on their prieſtes office: and * the ſtraunger that cometh nie, ſhal be ſlayne. And the Lorde ſpake vnto Moſes, ſaying: beholde, I haue taken the Leuites from amonge the childzen of Iſraell * for all the firſt bozne that openeth the matrycе amõg the childzen of Iſraell, and the Leuytes ſhalbe mine: becauſe al the fyrſt bozne are myne: for the ſame daye that I ſmote all the firſt bozne in the land of Egipte, I halowed vnto me al the firſt bozne in Iſrael, both mã and beaſt, and mine they ſhalbe: I am the Lorde. And the Lorde ſpake vnto Moſes in the wylderneſſe of Synai, ſaying: Nombze the childzen of Leui after the houſes of theyr fathers in theyr kynredes. All that are males, from a moneth olde and aboue ſhalt thou nombze. And Moſes nombzed them, accordynge to the commaundemente of the Lorde, and as he had commaunded. * And theſe were the childzen of Leui in their names: Gerſon, and Cahath and Merari. And theſe are the names of the childzen of Gerſon in their kinreds: Libni and Semei. The ſonnes of Cahath in theyr kynredes: Amram, Jezehar, Hebzon and Oziel. And the ſumme of them (after the numbze of all the males from a moneth olde and aboue) was. viii. thouſande and fyue hundred. And the kynredes of the Gerſonites ſhal pitche behynde the habitacion weſtward. The captaine & moſt aunciẽt of the houſe of the Gerſonites, was Eliaſaph the ſonne of Lael. And vnder the keppnge of the chyldren of Gerſon in the Tabernacle of wytneſſe, was the habitacion and the tent, the couerynge therof, and the hanging of the dooze of the Tabernacle of witneſſe, and the hangynges of the courte, and the curtayne of the dooze of the courte: which is rounde about the tabernacle, and the alter, and the cozdes of it for all the ſeruyce therof. And of Cahath came the kynred of the Amramites, and the kynred of the Jezeharites: the kynredde of the Hebzonites, and the kynredde of the Ozielites. Theſe are the kynreddes of the Cahathites. And the numbze of all the males from a moneth olde and aboue, was eight thouſand and fyre hundred, and theſe ſhal kepe the thynges that are to be kepte in the holye place. And the kinred of the childzõ of Cahath ſhall pytche on the ſouth ſyde of the Tabernacle. The captayne and moſt auncient of the houſe of the kynred of the Cahathites, was Eliſaphan the ſonne of Oziel, and vnder theyr keping was the arke, the table, the candelſtycke, and the alters, and all the veſſelles of the ſanctuary that they miniſter in, and the bayle, and whas ſoeuer belonged to the miniſtracion therof. And Eleazar the ſonne of Aaron the Prieſt, was captayne ouer all the captaynes of the Leuites, and had the ouerſyghte of them that wayted vpon the ſanctuary. And of Merari came the kynredde of the Mahelites, and the kynred of the Muſites: Theſe are the kynreddes of Merari. And let the D Priestе write these curses: And when they be clensed, let hym caste them into bytter, waters, and geue the woman those bitter, and cursed waters to drincke, that those cursed and bitter waters maye entre into her. And then the Priestе shall take the gelousye offering out of the womās hande, and waue it before the Lord, and bringe it vnto the alter, and the Priest shal take an handefull of the offeringe for a memo-

And yf the woman be not defyled, but is cleane, she shall haue no harme, but shall conceaue and beare. Thys is the lawe of gelousy, when a wyfe goeth aside behynd her husbande, and is defyled, or when the spyryte of gelousye commeth vpon a man, and he beyng gelouse ouer hys wyfe, doeth bryng her before the Lord. AND the Lorde spake vnto Moyses, saying: speake vnto Aarō, and saye vnto hym: * when thou puttest on the lampes, the same seuen lampes shal geue lyght towarde the forefront of the candelsticke. And the Lord spake vnto Moyses, saying, take the Leuites fro among the chyldren of Israel, and cleanse them. And if ye trompe the secōde time, the host

And they came vnto the ryuer of Escol, and cutte downe there a braūche wyth one clouster of grapes, and twayne beare it vpō a staf: & they brought also of the pōgranates and of the fygges. And the place was called, the riuer Escoll: because of the clouster of grapes whyche the chyldren of Israell cut downe thence. And they turned backe agayne from searchynge of the lande after fourtye dayes.

D And they wente and came to Moyses and Aaron, and vnto all the multitude of the chyldren of Israell, in the wyldernelle of Pharan, whyche is Cades, and brought them worde, and also vnto all the congregation. and shewed them the frupte of the lande. The Amalechites dwell in the south countrey, and the Hethites, Jebusites, and the Amorites dwell in the mountaynes, and the Cananites dwell by the sea, and by the coastes of Jordan. And Caleb stylled the [murmur that was rayled vp.] Of the people before Moyses, sayinge: we wyll go vp and conquere it: for we be able to ouercome it. But the men that wente vp wyth hym, sayde:

And they brought vp an euyll reporte of the lande whych they had searched, saying: vnto the chyldren of Israel: the lande which we haue gone thorow to searche it out, is a land that eateth vp the inhabiters thereof: and the people that we sawe in it, are men of a great stature. And there we saw also gyauntes, the children of Enack, which come of the giauntes. And we semed in our sighe as it were greſshoppers, and so we dydde in theyr syghte.

A AND al the multitude of the people cried out, & wepte thorowoute that night, and all the chyldāe of Israell murmured againſt Moyses & Aaron. And the whole cōgregation sayd vnto thē: would God that we had died in the land of Egipt, eyther that we had dyed in this wildernes. Wherfore hath the Lord brought vs vnto this land to fal vpō the swearde: & that oure wiues, & our chyldren shoulde be a praye? Were it not better, that we returne vnto Egipt agayn? And they sayd one to another: We wyll make a captayne, & returne vnto Egipte agayne. But Moses & Aaron fell on theyr faces before all the congregation, and multitude of the chyldren of Israel. * And Josua the sonne of Nun, B Exo.4.b and Caleb the sonne of Jephune (whyche 1.ma.2.f were of them that searched the lande) rente theyr clothes, and spake vnto all the companye of the chyldren of Israell, sayinge: The lande whych we walcked thorowe to searche it, is a very good lande. And they rose vp earlye in the morninge, & gat them vp into the toppe of the moun-sayde: wherfore wyll ye go on this maner, beyonde the worde of the LORD? it wyll

Then the Amalechites, and the Cananites, whych dwelt in that hyl, came down,

For whych cause both thou and all thy companye are gathered together agaynst the Lorde? And what is Aaron, that ye murmure agaynst hym? And Moses sent, and called Dathā, and Abiram, the sonnes of Eliab, whiche sayde: we wyll not come vp. Is it a small Turne not thou vnto their offerynge. I haue not taken so muche as an asse frome them, neyther haue I hurt any of them. And Moses sayde vnto Cozah:

Be thou and all thy companye before the Lorde: both thou, they, and Aaron, to morowe. And take euery man his censer, and put cense in them, that ye may offre before the Lorde: euery man of the two hundred and fiftye, take hys censoure, thou also Aaron, that euerye one maye haue his censer. And they toke euerye man hys censer, and put fyre in them, and layde cense theron, & stode in the dooze of the tabernacle of wytnesse wyth Moses and Aaron. And Cozah gathered all the congregacion agaynst thō vnto the dooze of the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And the glooze of the Lord appeared vnto all the congregacyon. And the Lorde spake vnto Moses, saying: speake vnto the congregacyon, and say: Get you away from aboute the dwellynge of Cozah, Dathan, and Abiram. And Moses rose vp, and wente vnto Dathan and Abiram, and the elders of Israell folowed hym. And he spake vnto the congregaciō, sayinge: departe frome the tentes of these wycked men, and touch nothing of theirs: D lest ye perysche in all their synnes. And so they gate them from the dwellyng of Corah, Dathan and Abiram on euery syde. And Dathan and Abiram came oute, and stode in the dooze of theyr tentes, with their wyues, their sonnes and their litle children. And all Israell that were aboute them, fled at the crye of them. And they sayde: lest the earth swalowe vs vp also. And there came oute a fyre frome the Lorde, and consumed the two hundred & fiftye men that offred cens. And the Lorde spake vnto Moses, saying: Speake vnto Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron the priest, that he take vp the censers oute of the burnynge, and skatter the fyre here and there, for the censers of these synners are halowed in their deathes: and let them make of theym thynne beaten plates for a couerynge of the aultare. entred into it) the cloud couered it, and the glory of the Lorde appeared. And Moyses quickly. And they fel vpō theyr faces. And Moses sayd vnto Aaron: take a censer, and the Lord hath cōmaūded: * If a man bowe Deu.23.b a bowe vnto the Lorde, or ſweare an othe to bynde his ſoule: he ſhall not go backe with his word: but ſhall fulfyl all that is proceded out of his mouth. If a woman alſo bowe a bow vnto the Lorde, & binde her ſelfe being in her fathers houſe, in the time of her youth, & her father heare her bow & bonde which ſhe had made vpon her ſoule, and holde hys peace thereto: then all her bowes and bondes which ſhe hath made vpon her ſoule, ſhall ſtande in effecte.

B But and if her father forbyd her the ſame daye that he heareth it, none of her bowes noz bondes whiche she hathe made vpon her soule shalbe of value: and the Lorde shall forgeue her, because her father forbade her. If she had an husbande when she vowed oz pronounced oughte out of her lippes, wherwith she bounde her soule, and her husbande hearde it and helde hys peace there at the same daye he hearde it, then her bowes and her bondes wherwith she bounde her soule shall stande in effecte. And yf her husbande forbad her the same daye that he hearde it: and made her bowe which she hath vpon her of none effecte, and released the openynge of her lyppes, wherwith she bounde her soule, the Lord shall forgeue her. But euery bowe of a wedowe, and of her that is deuorced (that they haue bounde their soule withal) shall stande in effecte with them. If she bowed in her husbandes house, oz bounde her soule with an othe, and her husbande hearde it, and helde his peace, and forbade her not, then all her bowes and bondes wherwith she hounde her soule, shal stande. But yf her husbande dylanulled them, the same daye that he hearde them, then nothynge that proceadeth oute of her lyppes in bowes and bondes (wherwith she bounde her soule) shall stande in effecte: for her husbande hath lowsed them. And the Lord shall forgeue her. All bowes & othes that bynde to humble the soule, maye her husbande stably she oz breake. But yf her husbande holde his peace from one daye vnto another, then he stably cheth all her bowes and bondes wherwith she had vpon her, because he helde hys peace the same daye that he hearde them. But yf he breake tho, after that he hath hearde them. he shall beare her synne hym selfe. These are the ordeynaunces whiche the Lorde commaunded Moses, betwene a man and his wife: and betwene the father & his doughter beynge yet a damsell in her fathers house.

And let youre westquarter be the

And from mounte Hor, ye shall describe your border, tyll it come vnto Hemath, and the ende of the coaste shall be at Zedada, and the coaste shall reache oute to Zipheron, and go oute at Hazar Enan. Thys shall be youre northquarter. And ye shall compasse youre eastquarter from Hazarenan to Sephan. And the coaste shal go downe from Sephan to Ribla on the easte syde of Ain. Of the trybe of the sonnes of Aser, the Lorde Ahihud, the sonne of Salomi. Of the trybe of the chyldren of Nephtali, the Lorde Pedahel, the sonne of Ammihud. These are they whom the Lorde commaunded to deuyde the enherytaunce vnto the chyldren of Israell in the lande of Canaan.

¶ The.xxxv. Chapter.

AND the Lorde spake vnto Moses in A the feldes of Moab by Jordan, ouer agaynste Jericho, sayinge: commaunde the children of Israell, that they geue vnto the Leuites of theenheirtaunce of theyr possessyon, * cyteyes to dwell in. Jos.21.a.
And ye shall geue also vnto the cyteyes of the Leuites, suburbes harde by their cyteyes rounde aboute theym. The cyteyes shall they haue to dwell in, and the suburbes for theyr catell, and for theyr possessyon and all maner of beastes of theyrs.
And the suburbes of the cyteyes whiche ye shall geue vnto the Leuites, shall reache from the wall of the cyeye outewarde, a thousande cubytes rounde aboute. And ye shall measure without the citye of the eastsyde, two thousande cubytes. And of the southsyde, two thousande cubytes. And of the westsyde two thousande cubytes. And of the northsyde, two thousande cubytes also: and the cyeye shalbe in the mydest. And these shall be the suburbes of their cyties. And from amonge the cities which

And to theym ye shall adde.xlii. cyties mo: so that all the cyties whiche ye shall geue the Leuites, maye be.xlviii. wyth their suburbes. And the cyteyes whyche ye shal geue, B shall be oute of the possessyon of the chyldren of Israell. They that haue many, shall geue manye. But of them that haue fewe, ye shall take fewe. Euery one shall geue of hys cyties vnto the Leuites accordynge to the enherytaunce whiche he enherytreth. And the Lorde spake vnto Moses, sayinge: speake vnto the chyldren of Jos.xx.a. be come ouer Jordane into the lande of Canaan, ye shall appoynte you cyteys to be cities of refuge, for you: that he whiche sleeth a soule vnwares, may flee thyther.

And the citye shalbe to flee from the auenger of bloude, that he whiche kylleth dye not, vntyll he stande before the congregacyon in iudgemente. And of these sixe free cyteyes whyche ye shall geue, ye shall gene three on thys syde Jordane, and three in the lande of Canaan. And these syxe free cyties shall be a refuge bothe for the chyldren of Israell, and for the straunger, and for hym that dwelleth amonge you: that all they whiche kyll any person vnwares, may flee thither.

Exo.21.d *And yf anye man smyte another wyth an instrumente of yron that he dye, then is he a murtherer, and shall dye for it.

If he smyte hym wyth a threwynge stone that a man maye dye wyth, and yf he dye, he shall smote hym is a murtherer, lette the same murtherer be slayne therefore.

C Or yf he smyte hym wyth a hande weapon of woode, that a man maye dye wyth, then yf he dye, he is a murtherer, let the murtherer be slayne therefore. The iustice of blonde shall slaye the murtherer: whan he meteth hym, he maye slaye hym. But Deu.19.c yf he threwste at hym * of hate, or hourle at hym wyth layinge of wayte, that he dye, or smyte hym wyth hys hande of enuye that he dye, he shall smote hym shall dye, for he is a murtherer. The iustice of blonde shall slaye the murtherer as sone as he fyndeth hym. But and yf he pusshed hym by chaunce and not of hate, or caste at hym wyth any maner of thynge, and not of layinge of wayte: or caste anye maner of stone at hym (that a man maye dye wyth) and sawe him not. And he caste it vpon hym and he dye, and was not hys enemye, neyther soughte hym any harme. Then the congregacyon shall iudge betwene the sleyer and the executer of blonde in suche cases. And the congregacion shall delyuer the sleyer oute of the hande of the auenger of bloude, and the congregacyon shall restoze hym agayne vnto the cytie of hys refuge, whyther he was fled.

These commaundementes shall be a lawe vnto you, for youre generacyons in all youre dwellynges. Whosoeuer kylleth a soule, the same manslayer muste Moreouer, ye shall take none amendes for the lyfe of the murtherer which is worthye to dye: But he shall be put to death. Also ye shall take no money of hym that is fledde to a free cytye, that he shoulde come agayne, and dwell in the lande, before the deathe of the hye prieste. And se that ye polute not the lande whiche ye shall dwell in: for blond defyleth the lande. And the lande can none otherwyse be clensed of the blond that is shed therin, but by the blond of him that shed blonde. Defyle not therefore the lād which ye shal inhabite, for I am in the middes thereof: Euen I the Lord dwell amonge the childzen of Israell.

C The.xxxvi. Chapter.

AND the auncient fathers of the childzen of Gilead, the sonne of Machir the sonne of Manasse, of the kinred of the childzen of Joseph, came forth, and spake before Moyses, and the princes, and the auncyent fathers of the childzen of Israell, and sayde: * The Lorde commaunded my Lorde, to geue the lande to enherite by lotte to the childzen of Israell. And my Lorde cōmaunded in Gods behalfe, to geue the enheritaunce of * Zelaphead oure brother, vnto hys daughters. Whome yf anye of the sonnes of the other trybes of Israell take to wyues, then shall theyr enheritaunce be taken frome the enheritaunce of oure fathers, and shall be put vnto the enheritaunce of the tribe whiche they are receyued into: and shall be taken from the lot of oure enheritaunce. And when the yeare of iubelye of the childzen of Israell commeth, then shall theyr enheritaunce be put vnto the enheritaunce of the tribe wherinto they are receyued: and so shall theyr enheritaunce be taken awaye from the enheritaunce of the tribe of oure fathers. And Moses commaunded the childzen of Israel: accozdynge to the wozde of the Lorde, sayinge: the childzen of the trybe of Joseph haue sayde well. This therefore doeth the Lorde commaunde the daughters of Zelaphead, saying: * let them be wyues to whom they them selfe thynck best, onely to the kynred and trybe of their father shall they mary, so that not the enheritaunce of the childzen of Israell remoue from trybe to trybe, whan the childzen of Israel abyde euery man in the enheritaunce of the trybe of hys fathers.

C And euerye daughter that possesseth anye enheritaunce in any tribe of the childzen of Israell, shall be wyfe vnto one whyche is of the kynred of the trybe of her father, that the childzen of Israel maye enioye euerye man the enheritaunce of his father: Neyther ought the enheritaunce to go one from one tribe to another: but euery one of the tribes of the children of Israel, must abyde in his owne inheritaunce. And as the Lord commaunded Moses, euen so did the daughters of Zelaphead. And Mahela, Thirza, Hagla, Milcha and Noa were maryed vnto their fathers brothers sonnes, whiche were of the kynred of the children of Manasses, the sonne of Joseph: and so their enheritaūce remayned in the tribe of the kynred of their father. These are the commaundementes, and lawes whiche the Lorde commaunded by the hande of Moses, vnto the children of Israell in the feldes of Moab: by Jordane ouer agaynste Jericho.

THese be the wordes which Moses spake vnto all Israel, on the other syde Jordan in the wylderne, in the plaine ouer against the red sea, betwene Pharan and Thophel, Laban, Hazeroth and Disahab. xi. dayes iourney from Horeb vnto Cades barne, by mount Seir. And it foꝛtuned the fyrst daye of the xi. moneth in the. xl. yere. that Moses spake vnto the children of Israel, accoꝛdinge vnto all that the Lorde had geuen him in cōmaūdemēt vnto thē, after that he had smitten * Sehon the kynge of the Amozites whiche dwelte in Hesbon, and Og kynge of Basan whyche dwelte at Astaroth in Edrai. On the other syde Jordan in the lande of Moab beganne Moses to declare thys lawe, sayinge: the Lorde oure God spake vnto vs in Horeb, sayinge: ye haue dwelte longe ynoughe in thys mount, departe therefoꝛe and take your iourney, and goe vnto the hyl of the Amozites, and vnto all places nye thereunto: bothe vnto the playne, and dylles and dales: to the south, to the seas syde, to the lande of Canaan, and vnto Libanon: euen vnto the great ryuer Euphrates. Beholde, I haue set that lande before you: goe in, & * possesse the lande whiche the Lorde sware vnto youre fathers Abraham, Isahac, and Jacob, to geue vnto them and their sede after thē. And I spake vnto you the same season, sayinge: I am not able to beare you my selfe alone. Foꝛ the Lorde youre God hath multiplied you: and beholde, ye are this daye as the starres of heauen in numbre (the Lorde God of youre fathers make you a thousande tymes so manye mo as ye are, and bleſſe you as he hathe promised you) how can * I my selfe alone, beare the combraunce, charge and stryfe that is amonge you? bzynge (from amonge you) men of wyse dome and of vnderstandynge, and experte, according to your tribes: and I wil make them rulers ouer you. And ye answered me, & sayde: that whiche thou hast spoken is good foꝛ vs to do.

And so I toke the captaynes, (men of wyse dome, & that were experte,) & made them rulers ouer you: captaynes ouer thousandes and ouer hundzedes, ouer fyftye, and ouer ten, and officers amonge your tribes. And I charged your Iudges at the same tyme, saying: heare the cause of youre bzethren, and * iudge righteously betwene euerye man and his bzother, & the straunger that is with him. Se that ye know no faces in iudgement: * but heare the small as wel as the great, and be afrayed of no man, foꝛ the iudgemente is Goddes. And the cause that is to * harde foꝛ you, bzing vnto me, and I wil heare it. And I commaunded you the same season, all the thynges whiche ye should do. And when we departed from Horeb, we wente thoꝛowe all that greate and terryble wildernesse, as ye haue sene a longe by the waye of the hyll of the Amozites, as the Lorde our God commaūded vs, and came to Cades Barne. And I sayde vnto you: ye are come vnto the hyll of the Amozites, which the Lord our God wil geue vnto vs. Beholde, the Lord thy God harde set the land beforе the, go by & conquere it, as the Lorde God of thy fathers hathe sayd vnto thee, * feare not, neither be discoꝛaged. But ye came vnto me euery one, and sayd: * we wil sende men before vs, to searche vs oute the lande, and to bzynge vs woꝛde agayne, what way we must go by by, & vnto what cities we shal come. And the saying pleased me well, and I toke twelue men of you, of euery tribe one. Whiche departed, & went by into the hye contrey, & came vnto the ryuer Escol, & searched it out, & toke of the frut of the lande. to declare the plenteousnes therof) in their handes, and broughte it vnto vs, & bzought vs woꝛde agayne, & sayd: it is a good lāde, which the Lord our God doeth geue vs. Notwithstandynge ye wold not cōsent to go by, but were disobe-

Our brethren haue discouraged our hertes, saying: *the people is greater & taller then we, & haue cities great & walled euen vp to heauē, & moreouer we haue sene the sonnes of the Enakims there. And I sayde vnto you: dreade not nor be afrayed of thē. The Lorde youre god which goeth before you, he shal fight for you, according to al that he dyd vnto you in Egipt before youre eyes. In the wildernes also thou hast sene how that the lord thy god bare the, euē as a mā doth beare his sōne, in al the way which ye haue gone by, vntil ye cāe vnto this place. And yet in this thynge ye dyd not beleue the Lord your God. Ye went in the waye before you, to searche you oute a place to pytche your tēres. * in fire by nighte, that ye might se what way to go, & in a cloude by daye. And the Lorde hearde the voyce of your wordes, and was wroth, & sware, saynge: *there shal not one of these men, and of this frowarde generacyon se that good lande whiche I sware to geue vnto youre fathers, saue Caleb the sonne of Jephnne, he shall se it * and to hym will I gene the lande that he hath troden vpon, and to hys chyldren, because he hathe followed the Lorde (wonderfull was the indignacion againe the people, seynge that) *the Lorde was angeye with me lykewise for youre sakes, sayinge: thou also shalte not go in thither. But Josua the sonne of Nun whiche standeth before the, he shall go in thither. Holden hym therfore, for he shall cause Israell to enherite the lande * Moreouer, your children whyche ye sayde should be a praye, and your sonnes which in that day had no knowledge betwene good and euyll, they shall go in thither, and vnto them wil I geue it, and they shal enioye it. But as for you, turne youre faces, and take your iourney into the wyldernesse: euen by the waye of the rede sea. Then ye answered and sayde vnto me: *We haue synned agaynste the Lorde: we will go vp and fyghte, according to all that the Lord our God commanded to vs. And when ye had gyrde on euerye man hys weapons of warre, beholde, ye were readye to go vp into the hyll. And the Lorde sayde vnto me: saye vnto them that they go not vp, and that they fyghte not, for I am not amonge you: lest ye fall before your enemyes. I tolde you therfore, and ye wouldē not heare, but dysobeyed the mouthe of the Lorde, and wente presumptuously vp into the hil. And the Amorites which dwelt in that hyll, came oute against you, and chased you (as bees vse to do) and smote you in Seir, euen vnto Horma. And ye came agayne, and wepte before the Lorde: but the Lord would not heare youre voyce, nor geue you audience. * And so ye abodein Cades a longe season, accordynge vnto the tyme that ye remayned in other places.

The.ii. Chapter.

Thē we *tourned our face, & toke our iourney into the wildernesse, euē by the waye of the red sea, as the Lorde spake vnto me. And we cōpassed mounte Seir a lōg tyme. And the Lord spake vnto me sayinge: Ye haue compassed this mountayne lōg ynough, tourne you northward. And warne thou the people sayinge: Ye shall go thorowe the coaste of youre brethren the children of Esau whyche dwell in Seir, and they shalbe afrayed of you: Take ye good hede vnto youre selues therfore. Ye shall not prouoke them, for I will not geue you of their lande, no not so muche as a fote bredeth * because I haue geuen mounte Seir vnto Esau to possesse, ye shall bye meate of them for money to eate, and ye shall procure water of them for money to drynche. For the Lorde thy God hath blessed the in all the workes of thy hande. He knewe thy entringe into this great wildernesse this xl. yeres, and the LORD thy God hathe bene with the, so that thou hast lacked nothynge. And when we were departed from our brethren the children of Esau whiche dwelte in Seir, the playne way frō Elath and from Ezion Gaber, we turned and wente by the waye of the wylderneſſe of Moab. And the Lorde sayde vnto me: *Thou shalt not fyght against the Moabites, neither prouoke the to battell, for I will not geue the of their lande to possesse: because I haue geuen Ar vnto the children of Loth to possesse. The terryble people the * Emims dwelte therein in tymes past, a people great, many and tall, as the Enakims whiche also were take for Gianntes as the Enakims: whome the Moabites call Emims. The Horims dwelte in Seir before tyme, whose possession the children of Esau occupyed, and destroyed thē before them & dwelt in their stede: as Israel dyd vnto the lande of his possession, whyche the Lorde gaue them. Nowe ryse vp (sayde I) and get you ouer the ryuer Zared: and we wente ouer the ryuer Zared. The space in which we came from Cades barne vntyll we were come

And the Lorde spake vnto me, sayinge: Thou shalt go thorowe Ar the coaste of Moab this day: and when thou commeste nye vnto the chyldren of Ammon, thou shalt not laye sege vnto them, nor moue warre agaynste them. For I wyll not geue the of the lande of the chyldren of Ammon a possessyon, but I haue geuen it vnto the chyldren of Loth to possesse.

A These are the wordes of the * appoynt Ex.xix.a ment, whiche the LORDE commaunded Moses, to make with the chyldren of Israell in the lande of Moab, beside the appoyntmente whyche he made with theym in Horeb: and Moyses called all Israell, and sayde vnto them: Ye haue sene all that the LORDE dyd before your eyes in the lande of Egypte: vnto Pharao and vnto all hys seruauntes, and vnto all hys lande, the greate temptacyons which thyne eyes haue sene, those greate myracles and wonders: and yet the LORDE hath not geuen you an hearte to perceaue, and eyes to se, and eares to heare, vnto thys daye. And I haue ledde you fourtye Deut.8.a yeare in the wyldernes: and your * clothes are not waxed olde vppon you, and thy showes is not waxed olde vppon thy foote. Ye haue eaten no bread nor dronche wyne or stronge drynche, that ye myght know, B howe that I am the LORDE your God. Nu.21.c * And ye came vnto this place, and Sehon Deut.ii.f the kynge of Hesbon, and Og kynge of and .iii.a Basan came out agaynste vs vnto battel, and we smote them: and toke theyr lande, and gaue it for an enherytaunce vnto the Rubenites and Gaddites, and to the halfe Deu.4.a trybe of Manasse. * Kepe therefore the wordes of thys appointmente, and do thē, that ye may vnderstande all that ye ought to do. Yea, stande this daye euerye one of you before the LORDE your GOD: your captaynes, your tribes, your elders, your offycers, and all the men of Israell: youre chyldren also, your wiues. & the straūger Iosu.ix.d that is in thyne hooste * from the hewer of thy woodt, vnto the drawer of thy water: that thou shouldest goe into the appoyntment of the Lord thy God, and into Gen 17.a his othe * whiche the LORDE thy God, maketh with thee thys day. For to make the a people vnto hym selfe, and that he maye be vnto the a God, as he hathe sayde vnto the, and as he hathe swoorne vnto thy fathers, Abrahā, Isahac, and Jacob. I make C not thys bonde & thys othe with you only but both with hym that standeth here with vs thys daye before the LORDE oure God, and also with hym that is not here with vs thys day. For ye know, howe we haue dwelt in the lande of Egipte, and howe we came thorowe the myddes of the nacyons whyche ye passed by. And ye haue sene theyr abhominacyons, and their idoles: (woode and stone, syluer and golde,) whyche were amonge them. Lest there be among you, mā or womā kynred or tribe, whose heerte turneth awaye thys day from the LORDE youre God, to go and serue the Goddes of these nacyons: and leste there be amonge you some roote that beareth gal and wormewoode, so that when he heareth the wordes of thys othe, he bleste him Jere.b.e. selfe in hys herte, sayinge: * I shall haue peace, I wyll walcke in the meanyng of myne owne hearte. (To put the dronchen to the thyrstie.) And so the LORDE wyl not consent to be mercyful vnto hym, but then the wrathe of the LORDE, and his gelousy shall smoke agaynst that man, and all the curses that are wrytten in thys boke, shal lyghte vppon hym, and the LORDE shal do out hys name from vnder heauen, and the LORDE shall separate hym vnto euyll, oute of all the trybes of Israell, accordyng vnto all the curses of the appoyntment, that are wrytten in the boke of thys lawe. D So that the generacyon to come of youre chyldren, that shall ryse vp after you, and the straunger that shall come from a farre lande shall saye, when they se the plages of that lande, and the dyseases wherwith the LORDE hathe smytten it, howe all the landes is burnt vp with brymstone, & salt, and that it is neyther sowen, nor beareth, nor anye gralle groweth therin, lyke as in the place of the ouerthrowynge of * Sodome, Gomor, Adama, and Zeboim: which Gen.19.c the LORDE ouert hrewe in hys wrathe and anger. Euen then shall all nacyons saye: Jer.22.b * wherfore hath the LORDE done of this fa- and.c. cyon vnto thys lande? O howe fearse is 3.reg.9.b thys great wrath: And men shall saye: because they left the Testamēt of the LORDE God of theyr fathers, whyche he made with them, when he brought them out of the lande of Egypte. For they went and serued straunge Goddes, and worshypped them: Goddes which they knew not, and whiche had geuen them naughte. And the wrathe of the LORDE waxed whote agaynst this lande, to bryngе vpon it all the curses that are wrytten in this boke. And the LORDE caste them oute of their lande in angre, wrath, and great indignacō, and cast them into a straunge lande as this daye beareth wytnesse. The secretes of the 1.cor.4.a Lorde our God * are opened vnto vs, and to our chyldren for euer, that we maye do all the wordes of this lawe.

And assone as the soles of the fete of the priestes (that beare the arke of the Lord the Gouernour of all the worlde) treade in the waters of Jordan, the waters of Jordan (that are beneth) shal runne down, & shalbe deuided: and the waters that come from aboue, shal stand styl vpon an heape. And it fortuned, that when the people were departed from their tentes to go ouer Jordā, the priestes bearinge * the arcke of the apointmēt went before the people. And as sone as they that bare the arcke came vnto Jordan, and the fete of the priestes that bare the arke were dypped in the brim of the water. * (For Jordan vseth to fyll all his banckes all the tyme of harueste) the waters also that came downe from aboue, dyd ryse vp, vpon an heape: & apeared as great as a mountayn, and departed farre frō the cytie of Adam, that was beside Zarthan. And the waters that were beneth towarde the sea of the wildernesse, fell awaye and departed into the salte sea, and the people * went ryghte ouer agaynste Jericho. ¶ The vi. Chapter.

A AND Jericho was shut vp, & locked, because of the childzen of Israell, nether might any man go out oz in. And the Lozde sayd vnto Josua: Beholde, I haue geuen into thyne hande, Jericho & her kyng, & the stronge men of warre. And ye shall compasse the cytye, all ye that be men of warre, and go rounde about it once, and so shall you do syxe dayes. And seuen pryestes shall beare before the Arcke, seuen trompettes of rãmes hoznes (that be vsed in the Jubilie.) And the seuenth daye, ye shal cõpasse the cytie seuen tymes, and the pryestes shall blowe with the trompettes. And when they make a longe blaste wyth the rammes hozne, & ye heare the sõude of the hozne, al the people shal showt with a great showte. And thẽ shall the wal of the cytie fal down, & the people shall ascẽd vp euery mã streyght before him. And Josua the sonne of Nun, called the pryestes, and said vnto them: take vp the arke of the appoyntment, and let seuen pryestes beare seuẽ trompettes of rãmes hoznes, before the arcke of the Lozde. And he sayde vnto the people, go & cõpasse the citie: & let him that is harnelled, go before the arke of the Lozd. And whẽ Josua had spoken vnto the people, the seuen pryestes bare the seuen trompettes of rammes hoznes, & went forth before the arcke of the Lozde, and blew wyth B the trõpettes. & the arche of the couenaũte of the Lozde folowed thẽ. And all the men of armes wente before the pryestes, that blewe wyth the trompettes, & the commen people came after the arke: & the pryestes that went blew with trompettes. And Josua commaunded the people, sayinge: ye shall not showt, noz make any noyse with your voyce, nether shall any word proceed out of your mouth, vntil the day that I bid you showte, thẽ shall ye showte. And so the Arche of the Lozde cõpassed the cytye, and wente about it once: and they retourned into the hoste, & lodged there. And Josua rose early in the mornynge, and the pryestes toke vp the arcke of the Lozde, and seuen pryestes bare seuen trompettes of rammes hoznes, and went before the Arke of the LORDE, and blewe with the trompettes. And all the men of armes went before them, but the commen people came after the arke of the Lozde, whiche went before wyth the blowynge of the trompettes. And the seconde daye they compassed the cytye once, and retourned agayne vnto the hoste, and so they dyd syxe dayes.

And whẽ the seuenth daye came, they rose early: euen with the dawning of the day, & compassed the cytie after the same maner, seuen tymes: onely that day they compassed the citie. vii. times. And at the seuenth tyme, when the pryestes blew with the trõpettes. Josua said vnto the people, showt: for the Lozd hath geuẽ you the cytye. And C the citie shalbe dãned, both it & al that are therin, vnto the Lozd: only Rahab the harlot shall liue, & all that are with her in the house, because she * hid the messẽgers that Josu. 2.4 we sent. And in any wyse beware of the excommunicate thinges, lest ye make youre selues excõmunicate, and take of the excõmunicate thynges, and make the hoost of Israel excommunicate and trouble it. But all the syluer, golde, vesselles of brasse, and yron shalbe consecrate vnto the Lozde, and all shall come into hys treasurye. And the people showted, and blew with trõpettes. And when the people heardе the sounde of the trompe, they showted wyth a greate showte. and the * wall fell downe, so that Hebr. xi.f the people wẽt vp into the cytie, euery mã streyght before him, & toke the citye. And they vtterlye destroyed all that was in the cytie, both man and woman, ponge & olde, Oxe, shepe and Asse, wyth the edge of the swearde. Then Josua sayde vnto the two menne that hadde spyed oute the contrey: * go into the harlottes house, and bryngе Hebr. xi.f oute thence the woman, and all that she hath, * as ye swore to her. And the younge Josu. 2.6. men that wer spyes, went in, and brought oute Rahab, and her father and mother and her brethren and al that she had. And they brought oute all her kynred, and put thẽ wythout the hoste of Israell. And they burnte the cytie with fyre, and al that was therin. Onelye the syluer and the gold, the vessels of brasse and yron, they put vnto the treasure of the house of the Lozde.

* And Josua saued Rahab the harlot, and Hebr. xi.f. her fathers houshold, and al that she had, and she dwelt in Israel, euẽ vnto this day because she hyd the messengers, which Josua sent to spye oute Jericho. And Josua sware at that tyme: sayinge: cursed be the man before the Lozde, that ryseth vp, and buildeth this citie Jericho: he shall laye the foũdacion * in his eldest sonne, & in his yõ- 3 re. 16 g gest sonne shall he set vp the gates of it. And so the Lozde was with Josua, & hys fame was noysed throwe oute all landes.

BUt yet the thyldren of Israell trespassed in the * excommunicate thin- deut. 7.a and. 13.d ges: And Achan the sonne Carmy, * Jo. 22.b the sonne of Zabdi, the sonne of Zareth, of 1. And Josua sente men frõ Jericho to Hai, which is beside Bethauen, on the east side of

And retourned to Josua, and sayde vnto hym: let not all the people go vp, but let as it were two or three thousande men goe vp, and smyte Hai, and make not all the people to laboure thyther, for they are but fewe. And so there went vp thyther of the people, aboute a three thousande men, and they stode before the menne of Hai. Wherefore, the heartes of the people + for feare, melted awaye lyke water. And Josua rent hys clothes, and fell to the earth vpon hys face before the arke of the Lord: vntyll the euentyde, he and the elders of Israell, and put earth vpon theyr heades.
Deu.9.d And Josua sayde: + Alas, O Lorde GOD, wherefore haste thou brought this people ouer Jordane, to delyuer vs into the hande of the Amorites, and to destroye vs: would to God we had bene contente, and dwelt on the other syde Jordane. Oh, Lorde what shall I saye, when Israell turneth their backes before their enemies. Surely the Cananites, and all the enhabiters of the lande shall heare of it, and shall conspire agaynst vs, and destroy the name of vs oute of the worlde. And what wylte thou do vnto thy myghtye name? And the Lorde sayde vnto Josua, gette thee vp, wherefore lyest thou thus vppon thy face? Israell hathe synned, and they haue transgressed myne appoyntemente, whyche I commaunded theym, for they haue taken of the excommunycate thynges, and haue stollen, and dyssembled, and put them vnto theyr owne stuffe. And therefore is it that the chyldren of Israell cannot stande before theyr enemyes, but shall turne theyr backes before their enemies, because they be excõmunicate. Neyther wil I be with you any more, except ye

There is a damned thynge amonge you (O Israell) and therefore ye can not stande agaynste your enemyes, vntyll ye haue put the damned thynge from among you. To morowe morninge therefore ye shal be brought accoding to your tribes. And the tribe which the Lord taketh, shal come accoding to the kinreds therof. And the kynred whyche the Lorde shall fynde gilty, shall come by houshoIders. And the houshold which the Lord shal fynd fautie shall come man by manne. And he that is founde in the excõmunicacõ, shalbe burnt with fyre, he and all that he hath, because he hath transgressed the couenaunt of the Lorde, and wrought foly in Israel. And so Josua rose vp early in the mornynge, and brought Israell by their trybes: and the tryb of Juda was caughte, & he brought the kinredes of Juda, and toke the kinred of the Zarchites, & he brought the kynred of the Zarchites, man by man, and Zabdi was caught. And he brought his houshold man by man, and Acan the sonne of Carmy, the sonne of Zabdi, the sõne of Zarthy, in the tribe of Juda was caught. And Josua sayde vnto Acan: + my sonne, I beseche the, geue glorye to the Lorde GOD of Israell, and gene him prayse, and shewe me what thou hast done, hyde it not from me. And Acan answered Josua, and sayde: of a truthe I haue synned agaynste the Lorde God of Israell, and thus and thus haue I done. I sawe amonge the spoyle a goodlye Babyloniche garmente, and two hundred sycles of syluer, and a tonge of golde of fyfte sycles weyght, and I coueted theym, and toke theym. And beholde they lye hyd in the earth in my tente, and the syluer is therunder. And so Josua sent messengers: which when they ranne vnto hys tente, beholde they were hyd in hys tent, and the syluer therunder. Therefore, they toke them oute of the myddest of hys tente, and brought them vnto Josua, and vnto all the children of Israell, and layed them oute before the LORD. And Josua toke Acan the sonne of Zareth, & the syluer, and the garment, and the tounge of golde, and hys sonnes and hys daughters, hys oxen, and hys asses, his shepe, and his tet, and all that he had: and all Israell wyth hym, brought the vnto the valeye of Acor. And Josua sayde: In as muche as thou haste troubled vs, the Lorde shall trouble the this daye: + And all Israell stoned hym Le.24.d wyth stones, and burned theym with fire, and ouerwhelmed them wyth stones, and they caste vpon hym a greate heape of stones vnto thys daye. And so the Lorde turned from the wrath of his indignacion. And the name of the place is called the valeye of Acor vnto this daye.

A ND it fortuned, that whē Adonize-dec kyng of Jeruſalem had hearde, how Joſua had take Hai & had de-ſtroyed it, and howe that * as he had done to Jericho and her kynge, euen ſo he had done to Hai, and her kynge, and howe the enhabitours of Gibeon hadde made peace with Iſraell, and were amonge them, they feared exceadingly, for Gibeon was a great cytye, as anye cytie of the kyngdome, and was greater then Hai, and al the men ther-of were very mighty. Wherfore Adonize-dec kynge of Jeruſalem ſent vnto Hoham: kynge of Hebron, and vnto Phiria kynge of Jarmuth, and vnto Japhia kynge of Lachis, and vnto Debir kynge of Eglon, ſayinge: Come vp vnto me, and helpe me, that we maye ſmyte Gibeon: for they haue made peace wyth Joſua, and with the chyl-dren of Iſraell. Therfore the fyue kynges of the Amozites, the kynge of Jeruſalem, the kynge of Hebron, the kynge of Jar-muth: the kynge of Lachis, and the kynge of Eglon gathered theym ſelues together: they wyth all theyr hooſtes and beſieged, Gibeon, and made warre agaynſt it. And the men of Gibeon ſent vnto Joſua, and to the hooſte of Gylgal, ſayinge: wythdrawe not thy hande from thy ſeruauntes, come vp to vs, to ſaue vs: and to helpe vs. For all the kynges of the Amozites, whyche dwell in the mountaynes, are gathered to-gether agaynſt vs. And ſo Joſua aſcended frō Gilgall, he and all the people of warre wyth hym, and all the men of myght, and the Lorde ſayde vnto Joſua: feare theym not, for I haue delyuered them into thyne hande. Nether ſhall any of theym ſtande agaynſt the. Joſua therfore came vnto theym ſodaynlye, and wente vp from Gil-gall all nyghte. And the LORD troubled them before Iſraell, and ſlewe theym wyth a greate ſlaughter at Gibeon, and chaſed them alonge the waye that goeth vppe to Bethoron, and ſmote theym to Elaka and Maketa. And it fortuned, that as they fledde from Iſraell, and were in the goynge downe to Bethoron, the Lorde caſt downe great ſtones from heauen vppon theym, vntyll Elaka. And there were moo dead wyth hayle ſtones, then they were whome the chyldren of Iſraell ſlewe wythe the ſwearde. Then ſpake Joſua before the Lorde, in the daye when the Lorde delyue-red the Amozites before the chyldren of Iſraell, and he ſayd in the ſyght of Iſrael. * Sunne ſtande thou ſtyll vppon Gibeon, Ecc.46a and thou Mone in Aialon. And the ſunne abode, and the Mone ſtode ſtyll, vntyl the people aduenged them ſelues vppon theyr enemyes. Is not thys wrytten in the boke of the ryghteouſe? The ſunne (I ſaye) a-bode in the myddeſte of heauen, and ha-ſted not to goo downe by the ſpace of an hole daye. And there was no daye lyke that, before it or after it, that the LORD hearde the voyce of a man. For the Lorde foughte for Iſraell. And Joſua returned, and al Iſrael wyth hym vnto the hooſte of Gilgal: but the fyue kynges fled, & were b hyd in a caue at Maketa. And it was told Joſua of one, ſayinge: The fyue kyng-ges are founde hydde in a Caue, whyche is at Maketa. And Joſua ſayde: roule greate ſtones vppon the mouthe of the Caue, and ſet men by it, for to kepe theym, And ſtande ye not ſtyll, but folowe after youre enemyes, and ſmyte all the hynder-moſte: And ſuffre theym not to entre into theyr Cyties, for the LORDE youre God hath delyuered theym into youre hande. And it fortuned when Joſua and the chyl-dren of Iſraell had made an ende of ſleing them wyth an exceadynge greate ſlaugh-ter, tyll they were waſted, the reſte that remayned of theym, entred into walled cy-tyes. And all the people returned too the hooſte, to Joſua at Maketa in peace, ney-ther dyd any man moue hys tonge agaynſt the chyldren of Iſraell. Then ſayde Joſua: open the mouth of the Caue, and bryng oute theſe fyue kynges vnto me oute of the Caue. And they dyd ſo, and broughte thoſe fyue kynges vnto hym oute of the Caue, euen the kynge of Jeruſalem, the kynge of Hebron, the kynge of Jarmuth, the kynge of Lachis, and the kynge of E- d

And it fortuned that when they broughte oute thoſe kynges vnto Joſua: Joſua called for all the men of Iſraell, and ſayde vnto the cheſe of the men of warre, whych wente wyth hym: come neare, and putte youre feete vpon the neckes of theſe kynges. And they came nere and put theyr feete vpon the neckes of theym. And Joſua ſayde vnto them. Ye ſhall not feare nor be fayntе harte: But be ſtronge and pluckе

Then Hozam Kynge of Geſer came vp to helpe Lachis: And Josua ſmote him & his people, vntyl noughte remayned of him. And from Lachis Josua departed vnto Eglon, & all Jſraell wyth him, & they beſieged it, & aſſaulted it and toke it the ſame daye, & ſmote it wyth the edge of the ſwearde, and all the ſoules that were therin he vtterly deſtroyed the ſame daye, accordyng to all that he had done to Lachis. And Josua departed vp from Eglon and all Jſraell wyth hym, vnto Hebron. And they foughte agaynſte it, & when they had taken it, they ſmote it wyth the edge of the ſwearde, and the Kynge thereof, and all the townes that pertayned too it, and all the ſoules that were therein, and he lefte noughte remayninge: but dyd accordinge to all as he had done to Eglon, & deſtroyed it vtterly, and all the ſoules that

And when he had taken it, and the kynge thereof, and all the townes that pertayned therto, they ſmote theym wyth the edge of the ſwearde, and vtterlye deſtroyed al the ſoules that were therein, neyther lette he ought remayne. Euen as he dyd to Hebron, ſo he dyd to Dabir and the kynge thereof, as he had done alſo to Libna and her kynge. Josua therfore ſmote al the hyll countreyes, and the ſouth countreyes, and the valleyes, and the hyl ſydes and all theyr kynges, and let noughte remayne of them, but vtterlye deſtroyed all

And all the cyties of thoſe kynges, and all the kynges of them dyd Josua take, and ſmote theym with the edge of the ſweard, and vtterly deſtroyed them * as Moyſes the ſeruaunte of the Lorde commaunded. THis was the lot of the trybe of the childzẽ of Iuda by their kinreds. Namely, towarde the bozder of Edom in the wylderneße of Zin, southwarde, euẽ frõ the vtmost parte of the south coaste. * And

A This was the lotte of the trybe of Ma Ge.48.c. nasses, which was the * Eldest sonne of Joseph. And Machir the eldest sonne of Manasses, wheh was the father of Gilead (a man of warre) had Gilead & Basan. This is the possession of the rest of the children of Manasses by theyr kynredes: Namely of the childrē of Abiezer: the children of Helek: the chyldren of Ariell: the chyldren of Sichem. the chyldren of Hepher: the children of Semida: for these were the male chyldren of Manasses, the Nu.26.d sonne of Joseph by theyr kyntredes. * But xxvii.a.e Zelaphead the sonne of Hepher, the sonne xxxvi.a of Gilead, the sonne of Machir, the sonne B of Manasses had no sonēs but doughters, whose names are these: Mahela, Noa, Hagla. Melcha, and Thirza: which came before Eleazar the priestе, and before Josua the sonne of Nun, and before the Lor-to the commaundement of the Lorde, he gaue them an enheritaunce amōg the brethren of theyr father. And there felle ten portyons to Manasses, beside the land of Gilead and Basan, whiche is on the other syde Jordā: because the doughters of Ma-nasses dyd enherite amonge hys sonnes.

And Manasses other sonnes, had the lād of Gilead. And the coaste of Manasses was frō Aser to Machmarhath, that lyeth before Sichem, and went a longe on the ryght hande, euen vnto the enhabiters of Entaphuah, and the land of Thaphuah belonged to Manasses, which Thaphuah is beside the border of Manasses, and besyde the border of the childrē of Ephraim.
And the coaste descended vnto the ryuer Canah, southward, euen to the ryuer of the cities of Ephraim, and betwene the cyties C of Manasses. The coaste of Manasses wente also on the northside to the ryuer, and the endes of it go oute at the sea: so that the southe perteyned to Ephraim, & the northe to Manasses, and the sea is his border. And they mette together in Aser Judi.1.c northwarde, & in Issachar eastward. * And Manasses had in Issachar & in Aser. Beth sean, and her townes: Jibleam, and her tow nes: and the enhabitours of Dor, wyth the townes perteynynge to the same: and the enhabytoures of Endor with the towe nes of the same: and the enhabitoures of Thaanath wyth her townes: and the enhabitoures of Mageddo with the townes of the same, euen three countreys. Yet the chyldren of Manasses could not ouercome these cities. But the Cananites presumed to dwell in the same lande. Neuertheles, assone as the children of Israel were waxed stronge, they put the Cananites vnder trybute, but expelled theym not. And the D chyldren of Joseph spake vnto Josua sayinge: why hast thou geuen me but one lot and one portion to enherite, seyng I am a greate people, and for as muche as the Lorde hath blessed me hytherto? and Josua answered them: yf thou be muche people, then get the vp to the wodde countrey, and prepare for thy selfe there in the lāde of the Pherezites, and of the Giaunites, yf mounte Ephraim be to narowe for thee.
And the children of Joseph sayd: The hyl is not ynough for vs: and all the Canani-tes that dwell in the lowe countrey haue charettes of yron, and so haue they that enhabite Bethsean, and the townes of the same, and they also that dwel in the valley of Jezreel. And Josua sayd vnto the house of Joseph, Ephraim and Manasses: ye be muche people, and haue great power, and shal not therfore haue one lot. Therfore the hill shalbe youres, & ye shall cut downe the wood that is in it: & the endes of it shalbe youres if ye cast out the Cana nites whiche haue yron charettes, and are very stronge.

¶ The.xviii.Chapter.

A And the whole congregation of the E the children of Israel seuen tribes, whiche had not yet receaued theyr enheritaunce.

And Josua sayde vnto the chyldren of Israell: howe longe are ye so slacke to Lorde God of youre fathers hathe geuen

AFter the death of Iosua it came to passe, that the childzen of Israell asked the Lord, saying: who shal go vp for vs agaynst the Cananites, & who shal fyrste fyght agaynst them. And Iuda sayd vnto Simeon his brother: come vp with me in my lotte, that we may fight agaynst the Cananites: And I lykewyse wyl go with the into thy lotte. And so Symeō went with him. And Iuda went vp, and the Lord delyuered the Cananites and Pherezites into theyr handes. And they slewe of them in Bezek ten thousand men. And Adonibezek sayd: thre skore and ten kynges, hauinge theyr thombes and great toes cut of, gathered theyr meat vnder my table, + as I haue done, so god hath done to me agayne. ¶ The. iii. Chapter.

A THeſe are the nations which the Lord whiche he commaunded theyr fathers by

And the fatte closed the hafte, so that he myght not drawe the dagger oute of hys bely, but the dyrte came out. Ahud gate him oute at a posterne doze, and shutte the dozes of the parler aboute him, and locked theym. When he was gone oute, hys seruauntes came, and whan they sawe that the doores of the parler were locked, they sayde: peraduenture he couereth hys feete in hys somer chambre. And they tarryed tyll they were ashamed, and beholde: seynge he opened not the dozes of the parler: they toke a keye, and opened them. And beholde, theyr Lorde was fallen downe dead on the earth. ¶ The. iiii. Chapter.

A And the children of Israel began agayne to do wickedly in the sight of the Lorde, when Ahud was dead.
And the Lord solde them into the hande of Jabin kynge of Canaan, that raygned in Hazor, whose captayne of warre was called Sisara, whyche dwelte in Haroseth of the gentyles. And the children of Israell cryed vnto the Lorde: for he had nyne hundred charettes of yron, and twentye yeares he troubled the children of Israell verye sore. And Debora a Prophetisse, the wyfe Debora. of Lapidoth Judged Israell the same tyme, and the same Debora dwelte vnder a palmetree betwene Ramath and Bethell, in mounte Ephraim. And the children of Israell came vp to her, for iudgement. And she sente and called * Barak the sonne of Judi.5.b Abinoam, oute of Kedes Nephthalim, and sayde vnto hym. Hath not the Lorde God of Israell commaunded the, to leade wyth fayre wordes men to mounte Thabor, and take wyth the ten thousande men, of the children of Nephthalim and of the children of Zabulon? And I wyll bringe vnto pla.83.b the, to the * ryuer Kyson, Sisara, the Cap-BARAK her: yf thou wylte go with me, I wyll go: But and yf thou wylte not come with me, I wyll not go: She sayde: I wyll surely go with the, but this iourneye that thou takest, shall not be for thine honour, for the Lorde shall sell Sisara into the hande of a woman. Debora wente with Barak to Kedes. And Barak called Zabulō & Nephthalim to Kedes, and led after hym tenne thousand men: and Debora went vp wyth him. But Haber the Kenite (whych was of Nu.x.b the children of * Hobab, the father in lawe of Moses) remoued frō the other Kenites, and pitched his tente vntyll the playne of Zaanaim, whiche is by Kedes. And they shewed Sisara, that Barak the sonne of Abinoam was gone vp to mount Thabor.

C to thyne hande: Is not the LORDE gone out before the? And so Barak went downe from mounte Thabor, and ten thousande men after hym. But the LORD destroyed * Sisara and all hys charettes, and all I.re.14.c hys hoste wyth the edge of the swearde, before Barake: so that Sisara lyghted downe of hys charette, and fledde awaye on hys fete. But Barak folowed after the charettes and after the hoste, euen vnto Haroseth of the gentyles. And all the hoste of Sisara fell vpon the edge of the sweard, and there was not a man lefte. Howe beit Sisara fled awaye on hys fete to the tente of Jael the wyfe of Haber, the Kenyte: for there was peace betwene Jabin the kynge of Hazor, and the housholde of Haber the Kenite. And Jael wente out to mete Sisara, and sayde vnto hym: tourne in my Lord, turne in to me, feare not. And whan he had tourned in vnto her into her tente, she couered him wyth a mantell. And he sayde vnto her, geue me a lyttle water too whan any man doeth come and enquyze of ſhalt ſaye: naye. Then Jael Habers wyfe toke a nayle of the tente, and an hammer in her hande, and wente ſofrely vnto him, and ſmote the nayle into the temples of hys head, and faſtened it into the grounde, for he ſlombzed ſoze, and was wery: And ſo he dyed. And behold, as Barak ſolowed after Siſara, Jael came oute to mete hym, and ſayde vnto hym: come, and I wyll ſhewe the the man, whome thou ſeheeſte. And whē he came into her tente: Beholde, Siſara laye deade, and the nayle was in his temof Canaan into ſubiection that daye, be-of the chyldzen of Iſrael pzoſpered, & pzevntyl they had bzought him to naught.

A Joshu. 4. a Deut. 12. b

AND the children of Israel * committed wickednesse in the syght of the Lord. And the Lord deliuered them into the handes of Madian seuen yeares. And the hande of Madian preuayled agaynste Israel, and because of the Madianites, the childrē of Israel made thē dēnes in the mountaynes, and caues and stronge holdes. And when Israel hadde sowen, the Madiamites, the Amalechites and they of the east countreye came vp together against them: and pitched their tentes against thē, and destroyed the encrease of the earth, euē tyl thou come vnto Azah and left no substaunce for Israel, neither shepe, ore or asse: for they wente vp, they and their cattell, & came with their tentes as a multitude of grechoppers: so that both they & also their camels were without numbre. And they entred into the lande to destroye it. And so was Israel exceadingly impouerished in the sight of the Madianites, and cried vnto the Lord. And when the children of Israell cryed vnto the Lorde, because of the Madiamites, the Lord sent vnto thē a prophete, which sayd vnto them: Thus sayth the Lord god of Israell: I fet you from Egypt and brought you out of the house of bondage, and I ryd you out of the hand of the Egyptians, and out of the hande of all that oppressed you and cast thē out before you, and gaue you their land. And I sayde vnto you: I am the Lord your God, * feare not the goddes of the Amorites in whose lande you dwell. But you haue not obeyed my voyce. And the angel of the Lord came, and sate vnder an Oke whyche was in Ephrah, that pertained vnto Joas the father of the Eserites. And his sonne Gedeō prest out wheat out of the eares in a presse, to hyde it from the Madiamites: & the Angel of the Lord appeared vnto him, & sayde: the Lord is with the, thou mighte man of warre. And Gedeon answered him: Oh my Lorde, yf the Lorde be with vs, why is all this come vpon vs: yea, & wher be al his myracles which our fathers tolde vs of, & sayd: Wyd not the Lord bring vs out of Egipte? But now the Lorde hath forsaken vs, and deliuered vs into the handes of the Madianites. And the Lorde loked vpon him, and said: Go hence in this thy might, and thou shalt delyuer Israell oute of the handes of the Madiamites: Haue not I sent the? And he answered him: Oh Lord, wherwyth shal I saue Israel? Behold, my kinred is poore in Manasses, and I am lytle in my fathers house. The Lorde sayde vnto him: I wyll be with the: and thou shalt smyte the Madianites, as they were but one man. And he answered hym: Oh, yf I haue founde grace in thy syght, thā shewe me a signe, that it is thou that talkest with me. Depart not hence, vntyl I come againe vnto the, and tyll I bringe myne offering, and haue set it before the. And he sayde: I wyll tarye vntyll thou come agayne. And Gedeon wente in, and made ready a kyd, and swete kakes of an Epha of floure, and put it with the fleche in a basket, and put the broth in a pot, and broughte it out vnto him vnder the Oke, and presented it. And the aungell of God sayde vnto hym: * take the fleshe and the swete cakes, and laye thē vpon this rocke, and powre out the broth. And he did so. Thā the angel of the Lorde put forth the ende of the staffe that he helde in his hande, and touched the fleche & the swete kakes. And * there arose vp fyre oute of the rocke, and consumed the fleche & the swete kakes. But the angell of the Lorde vanished out of his sight. And when Gedeon perceaued that it was an angel of the Lord, he sayd: Alas, O Lord God, * haue I therfore sene an angell of the Lord face to face, that I should dye? And the Lord sayde vnto him: peace be vnto the, feare not, thou shalt not dye. Than Gedeō made an aultar there vnto the Lorde, and called it: The Lord of peace. And vnto this daye it is yet in Ephraah, that pertayneth vnto the father of the Esserites. And it forcuned that the same night the Lord sayd vnto him: take a yonge bullocke oute of thy fathers droue, and another of. vii. yeares olde, and destroye the aultare of Baall that thy father hath, and cutte downe the groue that is by it, & make an aultare vnto the Lorde thy God, vppon the top of this rocke in a conuenient place. And take the seconde bullocke, and offer burntsacryfyce vppon the wood of the groue, which thou shalt cutte downe. Than Gedeon toke ten men of hys seruauntes, and dyd as the Lord bad hym. But because he durst not do it by daye for feare of hys fathers houholde and of the men of the cytie, he dyd it by nyght. And when the men of the citie were vp early in the morning: Behold, the aultare of Baal was broken, and the groue cut downe that was by it, and the seconde bullock offered vpon sayde one to another: who hathe done thys the cytye sayde vnto Joas: bringe oute thy at mounte Gilead. xxii. thousande, and there abode ten thousande. And the Lorde sayde vnto Gedeon: the people are yet to many, bringe them downe vnto the water, and I wyll trye them vnto the there.

And of whome I saye vnto the, this shall go with ther, the same shall go with the.
And of whome soeuer I saye vnto the, thys shall not go with the, the same shall not go. So he broughte downe the people vnto the water, and the Lorde sayde vnto Gedeon: as many as lappe the water wyth theyr tonges, as a dogge doethe, them put by them selues, and so do them that knele downe vpon their knees to drynche. And the numbre of them that put theyr handes to theyr mouthes and lapped, were. iii. hundred men. But all the remnaunte of the people kneled downe vpon theyr knees to drynche water. And the Lorde sayde vnto Gedeon: By these thre hundred men that lapped water, wyll I saue you: and de-lyuer the Madianites vnto thyne hande.
And let all the other people go euery man C vnto hys place. They therfore of the people toke vitayles with them, and their trōpettes. And he sente all the reste of Israel, euerye man vnto hys tente, and confyrmed these thre hundred wyth hym. And the hoste of Madian was beneth hym in a baley. And it fortuned that the same nyghte the Lorde sayde vnto hym: Aryse, get the downe vnto the hoste, for I haue delyue-red it into thyne hande. But and yf thou feare to go downe, then go thou and Pharah thy ladde downe to the hoste, and thou shalte herken what they saye, and so shall thyne handes be stronge, to go downe vnto the hoste. Then wente he downe and Pharah hys ladde, euen harde vnto the men of armes that were in the hoste. And the Ma-dianites, the Amalekites, and all they of the East, lay a lōge in the baley, like a multitude of grashoppers, and theyr cameles were without numbre, euen as the sande by the sea syde in the multytude. And when Gedeon was come: Beholde, there was a mā that tolde a dreame vnto hys neyghboure, and sayde: Beholde, I dreamed a dreame, and me thought that a lofe of barley bread, D tombled into the hoste of Madian, and came vnto a tente, and smote it that it fell, and ouertourned it, that the tente laye a longe. And hys felowe answered and sayde: this is nothynge elles saue the swearde of Gedeon the sonne of Joas a man of Israel: for into hys hande hathe GOD delyue-red Madian, and all the hoste. When Gedeon harde the tellynge of the dreame, and the interpetacion of the same, he worshypped, and returned vnto the hoofte of D Israel: and sayde: vp, for the Lorde hath delyuered into youre hande the hoofte of Madian. And he deuided the thre hundred men into thre companyes, and gaue euery man a trompet in his hande, with an emptye pytcher and lampes therin, and sayde vnto them: loke on me, and do lykewyse: that when I come to the syde of the hoofte, euen as I do, so do you: When I blowe wyth a trompet and all that are with me, blowe ye wyth trompettes also on euerye syde of the hoofte, and saye: here is the swearde of the Lorde and of Gedeon.

And so Gedeon and the thre hundred men that were with hym, came vnto the syde of the hoofte in the begynnynge of the middle watch, and raised vp the watche men. And they blewe wyth their trompettes, and F brake the pytchers that were in their hã-des. And al the thre cõpanyes blewe wyth trompettes and brake the pytchers, and helde the lampes in their lefte handes, and the trompettes in the ryghte to blowe withal. And they cryed: the swearde of the Lorde and of Gedeon. And they stode tyl, euery man in his place rounde aboute the hoofte. And they within the hoofte, ranne, and cryed and fled. And the thre hundreth hoofte fled to Bethsittah, to zererath, and to the edge of the playne of Meholah vnto G Tabath. And the men of Israel beinge gathered together out of the tribe of Nepta-lim, of Aser, and of all Manalles folowed after the Madianites. And Gedeon sente messengers vnto all mounte Ephraim, sayinge: come downe agaynste the Madia-nites, and take before them the waters vnto Bethbarath and to Jordan. Then all the mẽ of Ephraim gathered together and toke the waters vnto Bethbarath, & to Jordan. And they toke two captaynes of the Madianites, Oreb and Zeb, and slewe Oreb vpõ the rocke Oreb, and Zeb at the presse Zeb, and folowed after Madian.

And brought the heades of Oreb and Zeb, to Gedeon on the otherside Jordan.

¶ The. viii. Chapter.

Jud.12.a AND the men of Ephraim said vnto him: * Why haste thou serued vs as you haue done? And then their spirites abated from of hym, when he had sayde that. And Gedeon came to Jordan to passe ouer, he and the thre hundred men that were with him, verye fayntе, and yet folo-wed the chace. And he sayde vnto the men 1.re. 27.d sayde: are the handes of Zebath and Zal-mona now in thyne hãdes, that we should geue breade vnto thyne armye? Gedeon sayde, therfore when the Lorde hath delyuered Zebath and Zalmona into myne hande, I wyll teare the flesche of you with the thornes of the wildernes and with brã-ers. And he wente vp thence to Phanuel, and spake vnto them likewise. And the mẽ C of Phanuel answered him, as did the men of Socoth. And he sayde also vnto the men of Phanuel: whẽ I come agayne in peace, I wyll breake downe this towre. Zebath and Zalmona were in Carkar, and their hoostes with them, vpon a. xv. thousande men, whiche were all that were lefte of all the hoostes of them of the Easte: For there was slaine a hundred and twẽty thousande men, that drewe swordes. And Gedeon wente thorowe them that dwelte in tabernacles on the Easte syde of Nobah and Jedyd caste no perylles. And when Zebah and Zalmona, fledde, he folowed after thẽ, and toke the two kynges of Madian, Zebath and Zalmona, and dyscomforted all the hoofte. And Gedeon the sonne of Joas returned from battel, a fore the sunne was downe, and caughte a ladde of the men of Socoth, and enquired of hym. And he wrote hym of the lordes and elders of So coth. lxxvii. men. And he came vnto the mẽ of Socoth, and sayde: Beholde, here I haue Zebath and Zalmona, with whyche ye dyd caste me in the teethe, saying: are the handes of Zebath and zalmona alredye in thine hande, that we shoulde geue breade vnto thy fayntie men? And he toke the elders of the citye, and thornes of the wyl-dernesse and brers, and made the men of Socoth to fele them. And he brake downe the towre of * Phanuel, and slewe the men 3.re.xii.g of the cytye. And thẽ sayde he vnto zebath and zalmona, what maner of mẽ were they whome ye slewe at Thabor? and they aun-swered: the lyknesse of the and them is al one, euen after the fashion of the childzen of a kynge. And he sayde: they were my bzethzen, euen my mothers childzen. As truly as the Lozde lyueth yf ye had saued theyz lines, I would not slay you. And he sayde vnto Jether his eldest sonne: vp and slay thē: But the lad dzue not his sweard, foz he feared, because he was yet yonge. Then zebath and zalmona sayde: Ryse thou, and fal vpon vs: foz as the man is, so is his strength. And Gedeon arose and slewe Zebath and Zalmona, & toke awaye the ornamentes, that were on their camels neckes. Then the men of Jsrael sayde vnto Gedeon: Reygne thou ouer vs, bothe thou, thy sonne and thy sonnes sonne, foz thou hast delyuered vs oute of the hande of Madian. And Gedeō sayde vnto them:

A Bimelech the sōne of Jerobaal wēt to Sichē, vnto his mothers bzethzē A and cōmuned with thē and with al hys mothers fathers kynred, saying: say I pzay you, in the eares of al the enhabitours of Sichē: whether is better foz you, that al the sonnes of Jerobaal (whyche are. lxx. persōnes) reygne ouer you, eyther that one reygne ouer you? Remembze, that I am of your bone, and of your flesche. And his mothers bzethzen spake of hym in the audience of the men of Sichem, all these wozdes, and theyz heartes were moued to folowe Abimelech. Foz they sayde: he is our bzother. And they gaue him. lxx. peces of syluer out of the tēple of Baal Berith, wher with Abimelech hyred bayne & lyghe personnes which went with him. And he wente vnto hys fathers house at Ephzah, *and slewe all his bzethzen, the sonnes of 1.pa.21.b Jerobaal, eus. lxx. persons with one stone. Notwythstandyng, yet Joatham the yongest sonne of Jerobaal escaped, foz he hyd hymselfe. And all the men of Sichem gathered together, and all the house of Mello, and came and made Abimelech kynge in the playne, where the great stone was by Sichē. And when they tolde it to Joatham, he wente and stode in the toppe of mount Garizim, and lyft vp his voyce, & cryed, and sayd vnto theym: Herken vnto me you men of Sichem, that God maye B herken vnto you. * The trees went foxth 4.esd.4.b to annoynt a kynge ouer theym, and sayde 2.pa.25.c vnto the Olyue tree: reygne thou ouer vs. But the Olyue tree sayd vnto thē: should I leaue my fatnesse, whiche bothe Goddes and men pzayse in me, and go to be pzomoted ouer the trees? And the trees sayde to the fygge tree: come thou, and be kynge ouer vs. The fygge tree answered theym: should I forsake my swetnesse, & my good fruite, & go to be pzomoted ouer the trees? Then sayd the trees vnto the vyne: come thou and be kyng ouer vs. The vyne sayd vnto theym: shoulde I leaue my wyne wherby I cheare both goddes and men, & go to be pzomoted ouer the trees? Then sayde all the trees vnto the fyrre busshe: come thou and reygne ouer vs. And the fyrre busshe sayde vnto the trees: yf it be true that ye wyl annoynt me kyng ouer you, thē come, & put your truste vnder my shadowe. If no, the fire come oute of the fyrre busshe, and waste the Cedze trees of Libanon. Nowe therfoze, yf ye do truly & C vncorruptly, to make Abimelech kyng: & yf ye haue dealte well wyth Jerobaal and hys houſe, and haue done vnto hym accordynge to the deſtruynge of his hãdes, iudge ye. For euen he (my father) foughte for you, and aduentured his life, and ridde you oute of the hande of Madian. And ye are riſen vp againſt my fathers houſe this daye, and haue ſlayne hys chyldren, euen lxx. perſonnes wyth one ſtone, and haue made Abimelech the ſonne of hys mayde ſeruaunt, kynge ouer the men of Sichem, becauſe he is your brother, & ye then haue dealt truely and purely with Jerobaal and with his houſe this day, thẽ reioyce ye with Abimelech, and let hym reioyce with you. But yf you haue not dealte truely, then I praye God a fyre maye come oute of Abimelech, and conſume the men of Sichem, & the houſe of Mello. And that there maye come a fyre from amonge the mẽ of Sichẽ, and oute of the houſe of Mello, and conſume Abimelech. And Joathã ranne away and fledde, and wente to Beer, and dwelt there, for feare of Abimelech his brother.

Eſa. 45 & When Abimelech had raygned thre yeare, * God ſente a ſpirite of hate betwene Abimelech, and the men of Sichem. And the citezens of Sichẽ rayled vpon Abimelech, and wyſhed that the wyckednelle done to the lxx. ſonnes of Jerobaal myghte come on hym, & that God woulde lay the bloude of theym vnto Abimelech theyr brother which ſlewe them, and vpon the other men of Sichem whiche ayded hym in the kyllynge of his brethren. And the citezens of Sichem ſet men to laye awayte for him in the toppe of the mountaynes, which when they (while they tarried for his cõming) robbed all that came a longe the waye by them. And it was tolde Abimelech. And Gaal the ſonne of Abed came with his brethren, and they got them to Sichem. And the mẽ of Sichem put theyr confydence in hym. And they went out into the feldes, and gathered in their grapes, and trode therin, & made merye: and wente into the houſe of theyr goddes, and did eate and drincke, & curſed Abimelech. And Gaal the ſonne of Abed ſayde: what is Abimelech? and what is Sichem? that we ſhoulde ſerue hym? Is he not the ſonne of Jerobaall, & Zebull is hys offycer? Serue ſuche as come of

Ge. 34. a. * Hemor the father of Sichem. For what reaſon ys it that we ſhoulde ſerue hym? wold God this people were vnder my hãd, than woulde I take Abimelech oute of the waye. And he ſpake againſte Abimelech: make thyne hoſte greater, and go out. And when zebull the ruler of the citie heard the wordes of Gaall the ſonne of Abed, he was wroth, and ſent meſſẽgers vnto Abimelech priuely, ſaynge: Beholde, Gaal the ſonne of Abed, and his brethren be come to Sichem: and behold, they ſet the citie againſt thee. Now therfore vp by nyght, thou and all the people that is with thee, and lye in wayte in the feld. And riſe early in the morynge as ſoone as the ſunne is vp, and fall vpon the citye. And yf he & the people that is with hym, come out agaynſte the, do to hym what thyne handes ſhalbe able. And Abimelech roſe vppe, and all the people that were wyth hym by nyght. And they layde a wayte againſte Sichem in foure companyes. And Gaal the ſonne of Abed wente out, and ſtode in the entrynge of the gate of the citie. And Abimelech roſe vp, & the folck that were with him, frõ laying a waite. And whẽ Gaal ſaw the people, he ſayde to Zebul: beholde there come people downe from the toppe of the mountaynes. And Zebul ſayde vnto hym: the ſhadow of the hylles ſeme men vnto the (and by that errour art thou diſceaued,) and Gaal anſwered agayne, & ſayd: ſe, there come folke downe by the myddel of the lande, and another companye come a long by the playne of the charmers. Then ſayde Zebul vnto hym: where is nowe thy mouth that ſaid: what felowe is Abimelech, that we ſhould ſerue hym? Is not thys the people that thou haſte deſpyſed? Go out now and fight with them. And Gaal wente oute before the citezens of Sichem, and fought with Abimelech. And Abimelech chaſed hym, that he fled before hym (and he droue hym into the citye) and many were ouerthrowẽ and wounded, euen vnto the entrynge of the gate. And Abimelech dwelte at Arumah. And zebul thruſte oute Gaal, and hys brethren that they ſhoulde not dwel in Sichẽ (and ſuffred them not to tarie therin.) And on the morow, it happened that the people wente out into the felde. And they tolde Abimelech. And he toke the people, & deuyded thẽ into thre companies & laid awayte in the feldes, and lohed, and beholde, the people were come out of the citye, and he ranne vpõ them, and ſmote them. And Abimelech, and the companyes that were wyth him, reached further, & ſtode in the entringe of the gate of the citye. And the two other companies ranne vpon all the people that were in the feldes, & ſlewe them. And when Abimelech had fought agaynſte the citie at that daye, he toke it, and ſlewe the people that was therin, and deſtroyed the citye and ſowed ſalte thereon. And when all the men of the towre of Sichem hearde that, they entred into a ſtrõge holde of the houſe of their god Baal berith, (where they were

And all the men that were amonge the people, cut downe bowes, & folowed Abimelech, & put them vnto the holde, and set the holde a fyre by them: so that (with smoke & fire) all the men of the tower of Sichem were slayne, vpon a thousande men and wemen. Then went Abimelech to Thebez, and besieged it, and toke it. But there was a stroge towre within the cyte, and thyther ran all the men and wemen, and all the chiefe that were in the cite, and shut it to them, and got thē vp (by the bulwarkes) to the toppe of the towre. And Abimelech came vnto the towre, and fought agaynst it, and went harde vnto the dore of the towre, to 2.re.12.b set it on fyre. And thus *the wyckednesse of Abimelech whiche he dyd vnto his father, in slayng his seuentie brethrē, and therto all the wickednes of the men of Sichē, did God bring vpon their heades. And vpon them came the curse of Joathan the sonne of Jerobaal.

A After Abimelech there arose, to defende Israell, one Thola (the sonne of Phuah) his vncles sonne, a mā of Issachar, which dwelt in Samir in mount Ephraim. And the children of Israel cried vnto the Lorde, sayinge: we haue synned agaynst thee: for we haue forsaken oure owne God, and haue serued Baalim. And the Lorde sayde vnto the chyldren of Israel: did not the Egipcyans, the Amorites, the children of Ammon, the Philistines, the Sidonites, the Amalekites, and the Moanites, oppresse you? And ye cried to me, and I deliuered you oute of theyr handes. And for all that ye haue forsaken me, and serued straunge Goddes, wherfore I wyll helpe you nomore. And they put away the straunge goddes from them, and serued the Lorde. And his soule had pitie on the mysery of Israell. Then the children of Ammō gathered together, & pitched in Gilead. And the childrē of Israel gathered thē together, & pitched in Maspa. And the Lordes of Gilead sayde eche to other: whosoeuer wil beginne the battel against the children of Ammon, the same shalbe head ouer all the enhabiters of Gilead.

A Jephthah buylded. And there was one Jephthah a Gileadite, a stronge man, the sonne of an harlot: & Gilead begat Jephthah. And Gileads wyfe bare him sonnes, which when they were come to age, thruste oute Jephthah, and said vnto him: thou *shalt Gen.21.b not enherite in our fathers house, for thou art the sonne of a straunge woman. Jephthah answered the elders of Gilead: dyd not ye hate me, and expell me oute of my fathers house? how happeneth it thē, that you come vnto me nowe in tyme of youre trybulacion? And the elders of Gilead sayde vnto Jephthah: Therfore we turne againe to the now, that thou mayest go with vs, and fyght against the childzē

And Jephthah sayde vnto the elders of Gilead: If ye bzynge me home agayne to fyghte wyth the childzen of Ammon, then if the Lozde delyuer them before me, shall I be youre heade? And the elders of Gilead sayd to Jephthah: the Lozde be wytnes betwene vs yf we do not accozdyng to thy wozdes. Then Jephthah wente wyth the elders of Gilead. And the people made him heade and ruler ouer thē. And Jephthah rehearsed all hys wozdes before the Lozde in Mizpa. And Jephthah sente messengers vnto the kyng of the childzen of Ammon, sayinge: what haste thou to do with me, that thou art come agaynst me, to fight in my land? The king of the childzē of Ammō answered vnto the messēgers of Jephthah: Because Israel toke away my land, when they came out of Egipt: euen from Arnō vnto Jaboк, and vnto Jozdā. But his father and mother wyste not that it was the Lorde doynge, & that he sought an occasiō agaynste the Philistines, for at that tyme the Philistines raygned ouer Israel. And her father said: I thoughte that thou hadest hated her, & therefore gaue I her vnto one of thy cõpanyõs. Is not her yonger syster fayzer then she? Take her in steade of the other, Samson sayde vnto them: Nowe I am more blameles then the Philistines, & therfore wyll I do them displeasure. And Samson went out, and caughte thre hundzed foxes, & tooke fyre brandes, & fastened tayle to tayle, & put a fyre bzonde in the myddes betwene two tayles. And when he hadde set the brãdes on fyre, he sent thẽ out: that they mught rũne abzode, whiche wente immedyatly into the standinge corne of the Philistines, & burnt by bothe the reaped corne, and also the standynge, with the vineyardes and olyues. Then the Philistines sayde: Who hathe done thys? And it was tolde them that Samson the sonne in lawe of the Thamnite, bycause he had taken hys wyfe, & geuen her to hys companion. And the Philystines came vp, and burnte her and her father wyth fyre. And Samson sayde vnto them: Thoughe ye haue done this, yet wyll I be aduenged of you, & then I wyll cease. And he smote them legge & thygh with a mighty plage. And then he wente and dwelte in the caue of the rocke Etam. Then the Philystines came vp, and pytched in Juda, and laye in a place, that was afterward called Lehi that is a Jawe bone, where their host was scatred abzode. And the men of Juda sayd: why are ye come vp vnto vs? They answered: to binde Samson are we come vp, and to doe to hym as he hathe done to vs. Then thre thousande men of Juda wente downe to the caue of the rocke Etam, and sayde to Samson: Wotest thou not that the Philistines are rulers ouer vs. Wherfore then hast thou done thus vnto vs? He answered them, * as they dyd vnto me, so haue I done vnto them. And they sayde vnto him again: we are come downe to bynde the, and to delyuer the into the hãde of the Philistines. And Samson sayde vnto them: Swere vnto me (and promes me) that ye shall not fall vpon me your selues. They answered hym sayinge: Noe, but we wyll bynde thee, and delyuer thee vnto their handes: But we wyll not kyll the. And they bounde hym wyth two newe cozdes, and bzoughte hym from the roche. And when he came to Lehi, the Philistynes shouted agaynste hym. And the spyrite of the Lorde came vpon him, and the cozdes that were vpon his armes, became as flare that was burnte with fyre, soz the bandes louked frome of hys handes. And he founde a rotten Jawe bone of an asse, and put fozth his hande and caughte it, and slewe a thousande men therwith. And Samson sayde: with the Jawe of an Asse, haue I made heapes of them: Wyth the Jawe of an asse haue I slayne a thousande men. And when he had lefte speakynge, he caste awaye the Jawe bone oute of hys hande, and called the place: Ramath Lehi (That is by interpretacion the lyfting vp of the Jawe bone.) And he was sooze a thrist, and called on the Lorde, and sayde: Thou haste geuen this greate victorye, in the hande of thy seruaunte. And nowe I must die soz thrist, and fall into the handes of the vncircumcised. But GOD bzake a greate tothe that was in the Jawe, and there came water there oute. Then the fyue men departed, and came to Laiis, and ſawe the people that were therin, how they dwelte careles, after the maner of the Sydons, ſtyll, and without caſting of parelles: and that noman made any trouble in the lande, or vſurped any dominion, but were farre from the Sidons, and had noo buſines with other men. And they turned thyther-warde and came to the house of the younge man the Leuite, euen vnto the house of Micah, & saluted him peaceably. And the fyre hundred men gyrded with weapons of warre, whiche were of the children of Dã, stode by the entrynge of the gate. And the fiue men that wente to spye out the lande, went in thither and toke the karued ymage, and the Ephod, Theraphim, and the

And the ꝓyest stode in the entrynge of the gate with the fyre hũdred men that were armed vnto battayle, while the other went into Micahs house, and fet the karued image, the Ephod, Theraphim: And the ymage of metall. Then sayde the ꝓyest vnto them: What doe ye? They answered hym: holde thy peace, laye thyne hande vpon thy mouthe, and come with vs, to be oure father and ꝓyeste. Is it better for the to be a ꝓyeste vnto the house of one man, then to be a ꝓyeste vnto a tribe or kynred in Israell? And the ꝓyeste was glad, and toke the Ephod, and Theraphim, and the grauen ymage, and went with the people. And they turned and departed, and put the children, the catell and their other substaunce before them. And F when they were a good waye fro the house of Micah, the men that were in the houses, and in Micahs house, made an oute cry, and folowed after the children of Dan, and called vnto them. And they turned their faces, and sayde vnto Micah: What ayleth the, that thou makest an out crye? And he sayd: ye haue taken awaye my gods, whiche I made, and also the ꝓyeste, and goe youre wayes with them. And what haue I mooze? Howe then saye ye vnto me, what ayleth the? And the children of Dan sayde vnto him: let not thy voice be heard amõge vs, lest angry felowes runne vpon the, and thou loose thy lyfe, with the lyues of all thyne hou holde. And so the chyldren of Dan went theyr wayes. And when Micah sawe that they were to stronge for hym, he turned and wente backe vnto hys house

And they toke the thinges whyche Micah had made, and the ꝓyeste whyche he had, and came vnto Lais, euen vnto a people that were at rest and without mystrust, and smote them with the edge of the swerde, and burnt the cytye with fyre. ¶ The. xix. Chapter.

IT chaunsed in those dayes, when there was no kynge in Israel, that a certayne Leuite sogeournynge on the side of mount Ephraim, toke to wyfe a concubyne out of Bethlehem Juda: and hys concubyne played the whore by hym, and wente awaye from hym, vnto her fathers house to Bethlehem Juda, and there contynued foure monethes. And her husbande arose, and wente after her, to speake frendlye vnto her, and to bryng her home agayne, hauynge hys lad wyth hym, and a couple of asses. And she broughte hym vnto her fathers house, and when the father of the damosell sawe hym, he reioyced of hys cõmynge. And hys father in lawe the damosels father kepte hym. And the Leuite aboade wyth hym thre dayes, and so they dyd eate and drynke, and lodged there.
The fourthe daye when they arose erlye in B the mornynge, the man stode vp, to departe. And the damosels father sayde vnto hys sonne in lawe: comforte thyne hearte with a morsell, * of breade, and then go gen. 18. g youre waye. And they sate downe, and dyd eate and dryncke bothe of them together. And the damoselles father sayde vnto the man: Be contente I praye the, and tarye all nyghte, & let thine heart be merye. And when the mã stode vp redy to depart, his father in lawe compelled hym to turne agayne and to tarye all nyghte there. And he rose vp early the fyfthe daye to departe, and the damoselles father sayde, comforte thyne hearte: and they taryed vntyll after midday. And they dyd eate bothe of them C together. And when the man arose to departe with hys concubine and hys lad, hys father in lawe the damoselles father sayde vnto hym: beholde, the daye goeth faste awaye and drayweth towarde euen, tarye all nyght: at the leaste waye tarye this daye here, that thyne harte maye be merye. And to morowe get you early vpon youre waye, that thou mayest get the to thy tente. Neuerthelater the man wouldo not tarye, but arose and departed, and came as far as Jebus, (whiche is Jerusalem) and hys two alles laden, and his concubyne and his lad with hym. And when they were fast by Jebus the day was ioze spent, and the ponge man sayde vnto his maister: come I praye the and let vs tourne in, into thys citye of the Jebusytes and lodge all nyghte there. His maister answered him: We wyll not turne into a straunge cytie that are not of the chyldren of Israell: we wyll goe furth to Gibea. And he sayde vnto hys lad: goe forwarde, and we shall come to one of these places to lodge all nyght ether in Gibea or in Rama. And they wente forwarde vpon theyr way, and the sunne went doune vpon them when they were faste by Gibea, whiche belongeth to them of Ben Jamin. And they tourned thytherwarde to go in, and lodge all nyghte in Gibea. And when he came, he sat hi doune in a streate of the citie, for there was no man that toke them to lodgynge. And behold, there came an olde man from hys worke, oute of the felde at euen, whiche was also of moũt Ephraim, and dwelt as a straunger in Gibea. But the men of the place were the chyldren of Ben Jamin. And when he had lyfte vp his eyes, he sawe a wayfarynge man in the streates of the cytye. And the olde man sayde: whether goest thou? And whence comest thou? He answered hym: we come from Bethlehem Juda, towarde the side of mounte Ephraim: From thence am I, and I wente to Bethlehem Juda, and goe nowe to the house of the LORD. And there is no man that receyueth me to house. We haue strawe and prouender for our asses, and breade and wyne for me and thine hadmayde, and for the ladde that is with thy seruaunt, and we lacke nothing. The olde man sayde: peace be with the, all that thou lackest shalte thou fynde with me: onely abyde not in the streate al nighte, and so he brought him into his house, and gaue foder vnto his asses. And they washed their fete, and dyd eate and drynke. And as they were makynge them hartes mery: beholde, the men of the citye whiche were wycked, beset the house rounde about, and thrust at the doore, and spake to the maister of the house, the olde manne, sayinge: bringe furth the man that came into thyne house, that we maye knawe hym. And + the manne of the house, the olde man went oute, and sayde vnto them: Oh, nay my brethren, do not so wyckedlye, seynge that this man is come into myne house: do not so vnmete a thynge. Beholde, here is my doughter a mayden, and thys mans concubyne, them I wyl bringe out nowe vnto you, and humble them, and do with them what semeth you good. But vnto this man, doe not so abhominable a thyng. But the men wold not heare him vnto hym. And the man tooke hys concubyne, and broughte her oute vnto them, whiche knewe her, and abused her, all the nyghte, euen vnto the morning. And when the day began to springe they let her go. And then came the woman in the dawnynge of the daye, and fell downe at the doore of the mans house, where her Lorde was, tyll it was daye. And her Lorde arose vp in the morynng, & opened the doores of the house, and wente oute to go his waye. And beholde, the woman, euen hys concubyne lay a longe before the doore of the house, and her handes stretched oute vpon the thresholde. And he thinking her to haue bene a slepe, sayd vnto her: vp, & let vs be goyng. But she answered not. Then the man perceyuinge that she was dead, toke her vp vpõ an asse, & rode by, and gat him vnto hys owne home. And when he was come vnto his house, he toke a knife, and caught his concubine and deuyded her with the bones into twelue peces, and sente her into al quarters of Israell. And all that sawe it sayde: there was no suche dede done or sene sence the chyldren of Israell came oute of Egypt vnto this day, consider the matter, take aduisement, and saye your mynde.

¶ The. xx. Chapter.

Then al the childre of Israell wẽt out: & the cõgregacio was gathered toge- A ther, as it had bene but one mã, euen frõ Dã to Beerseba, & vnto the land of Gilead, vnto the lorde in Mispa, & there rode folke out of al quarters & of al the tribes of Israell, i the congregacion of the people of god, foure hundred thousand fote men that drewe swerdes. And the Leuyte, the womans husbande that was slayne answered and sayde, I came into Gibea that is in Ben Jamin with my concubyne to lodge all nyghte. And the men of Gibea rose agaynst me, and beset the house rounde about vpon me by nyght, and thought to haue slayne me: and my concubyne haue they so vexed that she is deade. And I toke my concubyne, and cutte her in peces: and sente her throughoute all the landes of the enheritaunce of Israell. For they haue committed abhominacion and folye in Israel. Beholde, ye are al children of Israell. Counter thys matter, and geue your aduise in the case. haue wrought in Israel. And so all the men throughout all the tribe of Benjamin, sayinge: Iof. 22. d what wickednesse is this that is happened amonge you? Nowe therefore delyuer Juda shall begyn. And the children of Israell stode vp earlye and beseged Gibea.

And the men of Israell went out to battell against Benjamin, and the men of Israel put themselues in aray to fight against

And the folke of the children of Israell pluckеd vp theyr hartes, and wente to a the Lorde vnto euen, & asked of the Lorde, sayinge: shall we goo against to battell a came out against the children of Benjamin, the seconde daye. And the children of Benjamin went against them out of Gibea, the seconde daye, and destroyed to the Israell, and all the people went vp & came vnto Bethel, and wepte, and sat there before the LORD, and fasted the same daye vnto euen, and offered burntofferinges and peaceofferinges before the Lorde. And the children of Israell asked the LORD: for there was the arcke of the appoynement of god, in those dayes. And Phinehes the son of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron wayteinge vpon it at that tyme, sayd: shall I get me vp to go out any more to battell against the children of Benjamin my brethren, E or shall I cease? The Lorde sayde: go, for to morowe I wyll delyuer them into youre handes. And Israell set lyers awayte rounde about Gibea. And the children of Israell went vp against the children of Benjamin the thyrde tyme, and put theym selues in araye against Gibea, as tymes before.

And the children of Benjamin came out against the people, and were drawen away from the cytie. And they began to smyte of the people dead (as tymes before, by two hye wayes of which one goeth vp to Bethell and the other to Gibea throughe the

And the children of Benjamin, sayde: They are fallen before vs, as at the fyrst. But the children of Israell sayde: lette vs flye and plucke them away from the cytie, vnto the hye wayes. And all the men of Israell rose vp out of theyr place, and put them selues in araye at Baal Thamar. And likewyse the lyers in wayte of Israel came forth out of their places, euen out of the medowes that were about Gibea, and came against Gibea: ten thousande chosen menne out of all Israel, and there was a sore battel. But the other wist not that so great euyll was Israell destroyed of the Benjamites the came vpon Gibea, and wente and smote all the cytie with the edge of the swearde. And an appoynmente had the men of Israell from the lyers in wayte that they shoulde make a greate smoke rise vp out of the cytie. And when the men of Israel fled in the

But when there began to aryse out of the cytie a piller of smoke, the Benamites loked backe: and behold, the wastyng of the whole citie began to ascende vp to heaue. When the men of Israell also turned a-

And bely de that, they which came out of the citie, destroied them in the mydle of them. And thus they compalled the Ben Jamites about, and chased them to Menuha, and ouer ranne them to Gibea on the east syde: and there were slayne of Ben Jamin. xviii. thousad, whiche were all men of warre. And they turned and fled to the wildernes warde, & vnto the rocke of Rimmon. And the other slue by the waye of the rest of theym, fyue thousande men, and sticked vnto them, vntyl they came to Gibeō, and slue two thousande men of thē. AND euery man of Israell sware in Mizpa, sayinge: there shal none of vs gene his doughter vnto any of Ben Jamin to wyfe. And the people came to Bethell, and al ode there tyll euen before God, and lyfte vp theyr voyces, and wepte sore, and sayde: O Lorde God of Israel, why is this chaūced in Israel, that there should be this day one tribe lacking in Israel? And on the morowe the people rose by betime, and made there an aultar, and offred burnt offeringes, and peaceof-frynges. And the children of Israel asked, who are they amonge al the trybes of Israel, that came not vp with the cōgregacion vnto the Lorde? for they had made a great othe concernyng hym that came not vp to the Lorde to Mizpa, sayinge: he shal surely dye. And the children of Israell had pytie on Ben Jamin theyr brethren, and sayd: there is one tribe cut of from Israel thys daye: what shall we do vnto the remnaunt of thē, that they may haue wiues? we haue swoze by the Lorde, that we wil not gene them of our doughters to wines. And they sayd: Is there any of the trybes B of Israell, that came not vp to Mizpa to the Lorde? And beholde, there came none of the inhabitours of Jabes Gilead vnto the hooste and congregacion. For the people were mewed: and beholde: there were none of the enhabyters of Jabes Gilead there. And then the elders of the congregacyon, sayde: what shal we do to the remnaunte of theym, to get them wyues, seyng al the wyues of Ben Jamin are destroyed? And they sayd: there muste be an enheryteaunce for them that be escaped of Ben Jamin, that a tribe be not destroyed out of Israell: howbeit, we may not gene them wyues of oure doughters. For the children of Israell hadde swoze, sayinge: cursed be he, that geueth a wife to Bēnamin. Then they sayde: beholde, there is a feast of the Lorde yearly in Silo, which is on the nozthside of Bethel, and on the east syde of the way that goeth from Bethel to Sichem, and south from Libanon. Therefore they commaunded the children of Bēnamin, sayinge: go and lye in wayte in the vineyardes. ¶ The ende of the Booke of Judges, called in the Hebrue Sophtim.

A IT foꝛtuned that (in the dates of a certaine Judge) when the Judges Judged there fell a dearth in the lande, and a certayne man of Bethelehem Juda, wēt foꝛ to soiourne in the countrey of Moab: he & his wife, & his .ii. sōnes. The name of the mā was Elimelec, & the name of his wife, Naomi and the names of his two sonnes were, Mahlon and Chilion, & they were Ephzaites, out of Bethlehem Juda. And when they came into the lande of Moab, they continued there. And Elimelec Naomies husbande died, and she remayned with her two sonnes which toke them wyues of the nacyons of the Moabites: the ones name was Orpha, and the other Ruth. And they dwelled there about a ten yeare. And Mahlon and Chilion dyed also euen both of theym, and the woman was lefte desolate of her two sonnes and of her husbande. Then stode she vp wyth her doughters in law, and returned from the countrey of Moab: foꝛ she had harde saye in the countrey of Moab, howe that the Lozde had visited hys people, and geuen theym bꝛeade. Wherefoꝛe she departed oute of the place where she was, and her two doughters with her. And they wēt on theyꝛ way to returne vn to the lande of Juda. And Naomi sayde vnto her two doughters in lawe: go and returne eche of you vnto youre mothers house: and the Lozde deale as kyndly with you, as ye haue dealte wyth the deade, and with me. And the Lozde geue you, that you maye fynde reste, eyther of you in the house of her housbande. And whan she kissed theym, they lyfte vp theyꝛ voyce, and wepte, and sayde vnto her: we wil go with thee vnto thy folcke. And Naomi sayde: C tourne agayne mydoughters: foꝛ what cause wyll you go wyth me? Are there any mo chyldren in my wombe, to be your husbandes? Tourne agayne my doughters, and goe: foꝛ I am to olde to haue an husbande. And yf I sayde, I haue hope, yf I toke a man also thys nyght: yea, & though I had alredy bozne sonnes, would ye tary after them, tyll they were of age? oꝛ would ye foꝛ them so longe refrayne from takyng of husbandes? Not so my doughters: foꝛ it greueth me muche foꝛ your sakes, that the hande of the Lozd is gone out agaynst me. And they lyfte vp theyꝛ voyces, and wepte agayne, and Orpha kyssed her mother in lawe, but Ruth abode styll by her. And Naomi sayde: se, thy syster in lawe is gone backe agayne vnto her people and vnto her goddes: retourne thou after her. And Ruth answered: entreate me not to leaue thee, and to returne from after thee: 2. pet. 15. b

The Lozde do so and so to me, yf oughte but deathe onelye departe thee and me asondze. When she sawe that she was stedfastly mynded to go with her, she lefte speakynge vnto her. And so they wente both, vntyll they came to Bethlehem. And when they were come to Bethlehem, it was noysed of them thoꝛowe all the cytye, and the wemen sayde: is not thys Naomi? And she answered them: call me not Naomi (that is to say, bewtyfull) but call me Mara, (that is to saye, bytter.) foꝛ the almyghtye hathe made me berye bytter. I wente oute full and the Lozde hathe bzought me home agayne emptye. Why then call ye me Naomi: seynge the Lozde hathe humbled me, and the almightye hath bzought me vnto aduersite? And so Naomi with Ruth the Moabitesse her doughter in lawe retourned out of the countrey of Moab, & came to Bethlehem, in the begynnyng of barley haruest.

And beholde, Booz came from Bethlehem, and sayde vnto the reapers: the LORDE be with you. And they answered him: the Lorde blesse thee. Then sayde Booz vnto his ponge man that stode by the reapers. Whose damosell is thys? And the ponge man that stode by the reapers answered, and sayde: it is the Moabitysshe damosell, that came with Naomi oute of the countrey of Moab, and she sayde vnto vs: Oh lette me lease and gather after the reapers. the eares that remayne: and so she came, and hathe contynued euen from the morynge vnto nowe, saue that she tarved a lytle in the house. Then sayde Booz vnto Ruth: heaveste thou my doughter: go to no nother felde to gather, neyther go from hence: but abyde here by my maydens. Let thyne eyes be on the felde that they reape, and go thou after the maydens. Haue I not charged the ponge men, that they shall do thee no hurte? Moreouer, when thou art a thyrste, go vnto the vessels, and drynke of that which the ladies haue drawen. Then she fell on her face and, * bowed her selfe to the grounde, and sayde vnto him: howe is it that I haue founde grace in thyne eyes, and that thou shouldest knowe me: seynge I am an Aliannte? And Booz answered and sayde vnto her: all is tolde and shewed me, that thou haste done vnto thy mother in lawe, sence the deathe of thyne husbande, howe thou hast lefte thy father and thy mother, and the lande where thou waste borne, and arte come vnto a nacyon whiche thou knewest not in time passed. The Lord quite thy worck, & a ful rewarde be geuen thee of the Lorde God of Israell, vnder whose winges thou arte come to abyde. Then she sayde: let me fynde fauoure in thy syghte my Lorde, thou that hast cõforted me, and spoken hartely vnto thy mayde, which yet am not lyke vnto one of thy maydens. Booz sayd vnto her againe: in tyme of refeccion come thou hyther, and eate of the breade, and dyp thy soppe in the vyneger. And she satte downe by the reapers, and he reached her * parched corne: of the which she did eate, & was sufficed, and left part. And when she was risen vp to gather, Booz commaunded hys ponge men, sayinge: let her gather euen amõg the heapes, & forbyd her not. And leaue her some of the sheues for the nonce, & let it lie, that she maye gather it vp, without shame: & rebuke her not. And so she gathered in the feld, vntyl euen, and threshed that she had gathered, and it was in measure vpon an Ephat that is thre bushels of barley. And she toke it vp, and went into the citie: and whã her mother in lawe had sene what she had gathered, she plucked out also, & gaue to her that she had reserued, when she had eaten ynoughe. And her mother in lawe sayde vnto her: where haste thou gathered to daye? and where wroughteth thou? blessed be he, that knewe thee. And she shewed her mother in lawe how she had wroughte wyth him, and sayd: the mans name with whome I wrought to daye is Booz. And Naomi sayde vnto her doughter in lawe: blessed be he of the Lorde, for he ceaseth not to do * good to the lyuinge and to the deade. And Naomi sayd agayne vnto her: the man is nye vnto vs, and of oure nexte kynne. And Ruth the Moabite sayde: he sayd vnto me also. Thou shalt be with my ponge men, vntill they haue ended all my haruest: And Naomi answered vnto Ruth her doughter in lawe: it is beste my daughter that thou go out with his maides, that they fal not vpon the in any other felde. And so she kepte her by the maydens of Booz, to gather, vnto the ende of barley haruest, & of wheate haruest also: & dwelte with her mother in lawe.

¶ The. iii. Chapter.

Then Naomi her mother in lawe sayd vnto her: my doughter, shall I not seke rest for the, that thou maist prosper? And is not Booz our kynsman, with whose maydens thou waste? Beholde, he wenoweth barley to nyght in the threshynge floure: wasshe thy selfe therefore, and annoynte the, and put thy raiment vpõ thee, and get the downe to the barne. But let not a man knowe of the, vntyl he haue lefte eatynge and drynckyng. And whe he goeth to slepe, marke the place where he layeth him downe, and then go and lift vp the clothes, that are on his fete, & laie thee downe there, and so shall he tell the what thou shalte do. And she answered her: all that thou byddest me, I wil do. And so she went downe vnto the barne, and dyd accordynge to al that her mother in lawe badde her. And when Booz had eaten and dronkẽ, and made him merry, and was gone in, to lye downe beside the heape of corne, she came softely, and lift vp the clothes of hys fete, and layde her downe. And at mydnyght the man was a frayde and groped. And beholde: a woman laye at hys fete. And he sayd: what art thou? she answered: I am Ruth thyne handmayde, spreade thy wynge ouer thyne handmaide, for thou art the nexte of the kynne. He sayde: blessed

And whan she helde it vp, he mette in sixe measures of Barley, and layde it on her. And she gat her into the cytye: And whan she came into her mother in law, she sayd: howe is it with the my doughter? And she tolde her all that the man had done to her. And sayde also: These sixe measures of Barley gaue he me, and sayd: Thou shalt not come emptye vnto thy mother in law. ter chaūced amōge the people, & thy two sons, Hophni & Phinehes are deade, & the arke of God is taken. And it foztuned that when he made mencīō of the arke of God, Eli fell fro̅ of hys stole backwarde vpon the threshold of the gate, & his necke brake, & he dyed: for he was an old man, & heuye, & iudged Israell fourtye yeares. And hys doughter in law Phinehes wife was with child & nye the byrth. And when she heard the tidynges that the arke of God was taken, & that her father in law, & her husbād were dead, she bowed her selfe, & traueled, for her paynes came vpon her. And aboute the time of her death, the wemē that stode about her, sayd vnto her: feare not, for thou hast borne a sonne: but she answered not, she glory is gone. nor regarded it. And she named the childe * Achabod, sayinge: The glory is departed from Israell. Because the arcke of God was taken, & because of her father in lawe and her husbande. And she sayde agayne: The glorye is gone frome Israell, for the arke of God is taken.

¶ The. v. Chapter.

A And the Philistines toke the arke of God, & caried it frō the helpe stone vnto Asdod, agayne the Philistines toke the arke of god, & brought it into the house of Dagon, & set it by Dagō. And whē they of Asdod were vp in the next day i the mozninge, beholde, Dagon laye vpon the earthe before the arcke of the Lorde. And they toke Dagon, and set hym in his place agayne. And when they were vp earlye in the nexte mozynge, beholde, Dagon laye vpon the grounde before the arcke of the Lorde, and his heade, and hys two handes B cut of vpon the threshold, that onely the shape of a fyshe was left on hym. And therefore is it, that the priestes of Dagon (neyther any man that commeth into Dagons house) treade not on the threshold of Dagon in Asdod, vnto thys day. But the hāde of the Lorde was heuye vpon them of Asdod, & he destroyed them, and smote them with emerodes, both Asdod and in all the coostes therof. ¶ The dyllages also and the feldes in the middes of the countre were ful, and there came vp mice, & there was a confusion of great death in the citie. ¶ And whē the men of Asdod sawe that it was so, they sayde: the arke of the God of Israell shall not abyde here with vs, for hys hād is sore vpon vs and vpon Dagon our God. They sent therfore and gathered all the Lordes of the Philistines vnto them, and sayde: what shall we do with the Arke of the God of Israell? They answered: let the arcke of the God of Israell be caryed aboute vnto Gathe. And they caryed the arcke of the God of Israel aboute. And it foztuned, that when they had caryed it aboute, there was by the hande of the Lorde a myghty great noyse in the citye, and he smote the men of the citye both smal and great, & they had secret diseases. ¶ And the Gethites toke cōn-sell, and made them selues pzeuye seates of skynnes. ¶ Therefore they sent the arke of God to Akaron. And assone as the arke of God, came to Akaron, the Akaronites cryed out sayinge: they haue brought the arke of the God of Israell to vs, to slee vs and our people. And so they sente, and gathered together all the lordes of the Philstines and sayd: send awaye the arke of the God of Israell, to goe agayne to hys owne place, that it slee not vs and oure people.
For there was great lamentacion ouer the dead thozowout al the cytie, and the hande of God was exceadyuge sore there. And the men that dyed not, were smytten with the emerodes: and the crye of the citye weute vp to heauen.

¶ The. vi. Chapter.

THe arke of the Lord was in the countrey of the Philistiues. vii. monethes: A & the Philistines called for the pziestes, & the soth sayers, sayig: what shal we do with the arke of the Lorde? tel vs wherwith we shal send it home agayne? They sayd: yf you send the arke of the god of Israel home againe, sende it not empty. But reward it with a trespalle offering: and the ye shalbe whole, and it shall be knowen to you, why hys hande departeth not frome you. Then sayde they: And what shall be the trespace offerynge, whyche we shal re-warde hym with? they answered: fiue golden arles and. v. golden myce, accordynge to the numbre of the Lordes of the Philstines.

ſtines. For it is one maner of plage on you all, and on youre lordes. Wherefore ye ſhal make ymages lyke to your arſes, and ymages lyke to youre myce that corrupte the lande, and ye ſhal gene glorye vnto the God of Iſrael: that he maye take his hande from of you, and from of youre goddes, and from of youre lande. Wherefore do ye harden your hartes as the Egyptians and Pharao hardened theyr harres? whyche when he toke on agaynſte them, dyd they not let the people go, and they departed?
Nowe therefore, make a newe carte, and take two meliche kyne: on whoſe necke ther hath come no yocke. And tie the kine to the carte, and bryngе the calues home from them. And take the arke of the Lorde, and laye it vpon the carte, and put the iewels of golde (whiche ye rewarde him with for a ſynofferynge) in a cofre by the ſide therof: and ſende it awaye, that it maye go. And yͤ ye ſe that he go vp by the waye of his owne coaſt to Bethſames: then it is he that dyd vs this great euil. If no, we ſhall knowe then, that it is not his hãde that ſmote vs: but it was a chaunce that happened vs.
And the men dyd euen ſo: and toke two kine that gaue milke, and tyed them to the carte, and kepte the calues at home, & they layde the arke of the Lorde vpon the carte and the cofer with the mice of gold, & with the ymages of their arſes. And the kine toke the ſtreyght waye to Bethſames, and wente on the ſtreyghte waye: and as they wẽt, lowed, and turned neither to the right hande nor to the lefte. And the lordes of the Philiſtines wente after them, vnto the bordes of Bethſames. And they of Beth-ſames were reapinge theyr wheate harueſt in the valey. And they lyfte vp their eyes, and ſpyed the arke. And reioyſed when they ſawe it. And the carte came into the felde of one Iehoſua a Bethſamite, and ſtode ſtyll there. There was alſo a greate ſtone.
And they claue the wood of the carte and offred the kyne a burntoffrynge vnto the Lorde. And the Leuytes toke downe the arke of the Lorde and the coffer that was with it, wherein the iewels of golde were:
and put them on the greate ſtone. And the men of Bethſames ſacrificed burntſacrifice, and offered offerynges that ſame daye vnto the Lorde. And when the fyue lordes of the Philiſtines had ſene it, they returned to Akaron the ſame daye. And theſe are the golden arſes whiche the Philiſtines gaue to amendes for a treſpaſſe offrenge to the Lorde: for Aſdod one: for + Gaza one: for Aſkalon one: for Gath one: and for Akaron one. And golden myce, accordynge to the numbre of all the cyties of the Philyſtines, euen accordynge to the kyne lordes, bothe of walled townes and of towne vn-walled: euen vnto the great ſtone of lamentacion, whereon they ſet downe the arke of the Lorde: whyche ſtone remayneth vnto this daye in the felde of Iehoſua the Beth-ſamite. And he plaged the men of Beth-ſames, becauſe they had ſene the arke of the Lorde. And he ſlue amonge the people fyftye thouſande and threeſcore & ten men.
And the other people lamẽted, becauſe the Lorde had ſlayne the people with ſo greate a ſlaughter. Wherefore the men of Beth-ſames ſayde: who is able to ſtande before the Lorde ſo holy a GOD: and to whome ſhall he go from vs? And they ſent meſſengers to the enhabyters of Kariathiarim, ſayinge: The Philiſtines haue broughte a-gayne the arke of the Lorde: come ye downe therfore and fet it vp to you.

¶ The. viii. Chapter.

AND ſo the mẽ of Kariathiarim came and fet vp the arke of the Lord: and + brought it into the houſe of Ami-nadab in Gibea, & ſanctified Eleazar his ſõne to kepe the arke of the lorde, & whyle the arke abode in Kariathiarim, the dayes multiplied & there paſſed ouer. xx. yeares, & the houſe of Iſrael lamẽted after the lorde.
And Samuel ſpake vnto all the houſe of Iſ-rael, ſayinge: yf ye be come againe vnto the Lord with al your hertes, then + put awaie the ſtraũge goddes and Aſtaroth frõ amõge you: & prepare your hertes vnto the Lord, & ſerue him + onely: for he ſhal ryd you out of the hãde of the Philiſtines. Then the children of Iſrael did put awaye Baalim and Aſtaroth, and ſerued the Lorde onely. And Samuel ſayde: gather al Iſrael to Miſpa, and I wil praye for you vnto the Lorde.
And they gathered together to Miſpa, and drewe water: and powred it oute before the Lorde, and faſted the ſame daye and ſayde there: we haue ſynned agaynſte the Lorde.
And Samuel iudged the children of Iſrael in Miſpa. When the Philiſtines hearde that the children of Iſrael were gathered together to Miſpa, the lordes of the Philiſ-tines wente vp agaynſte Iſrael. And when the children of Iſrael hearde that, they were afrayed of the Philiſtines, & the chyldren of Iſrael ſayde to Samuel: ceaſſe not to crye vnto the Lorde oure God for vs, that he maye ſaue vs oute of the hande of the Philiſtines. + And Samuel toke a ſucking lambe, and offred it al together for a burnt offring vnto the Lorde: and cryed vnto the Lorde for Iſrael, and the Lord hearde hym.
And as Samuel offred the burntoffrynge the Philiſtines came to fyght agaynſte Iſ-rale. But the Lorde thondered a great thõ-der that ſame daye among the Philiſtines and ſcatered them, that they fell before Iſraell. And the men of Iſraell went oute to Mizpa, and purſued the Philiſtines, and folowed vpon them, vntyll the place that D is vnder Bethcar. And then Samuel * toke Ioſ. 24.f a ſtone, and pitched it betwene Mizpa and 1.Re.4.a the marke of the rocke, & called the name therof, the * ſtone of helpe, ſayig: Hitherto hath the Lorde helped vs. And ſo the Philiſtines were brought vnder, & they came no more into the coaſtes of Iſrael: and the hande of the Lorde was againſt the Philiſtines all the dayes of Samuel. Thereto, the cyties whiche that the Philiſtines had taken from Iſrael, were reſtored agayne to Iſraell, euen from Akaron to Gath, with the coaſtes of the ſame, and Iſraell plucked theym oute of the handes of the Philiſtines. And there was peace betwene Iſrael and the Amorites. Samuel iudged Iſraell all the dayes of his lyfe, and went about yeare by yeare to Bethel, Gilgal, and Mizpa, & iudged Iſrael in al thoſe places, & came agayne to Rama: for there was his houſe, & there he iudged Iſrael alſo, & there he buylt an aulter vnto the Lorde.

A When Samuel was olde, he made hys ſonnes iudges ouer Iſrael. The name of his eldeſt ſonne was Joel, and the name of the.ii. Abia: & they wer iudges in Beerſeba. And his ſonnes walked not in his waies: but turned a ſide after lucre, & Deu.16.d * toke reward, & peruerted the right. Then all the elders of Iſraell gathered them together, & came to Samuell vnto Rama, & ſayde vnto hym: beholde, thou art old, and thy ſonnes walck not in thy wayes. Now De.17.d therefore * make vs a kynge to iudge vs, as

B vnto the Lorde. And the Lorde ſayd vnto Samuel: heare the voyce of the people in all that they ſaye vnto thee. For they haue not caſt thee awaye, but me: that I ſhould not raygne ouer them. And as they haue euer done (ſence I brought them oute of Egypte vnto this daye: and haue forſaken me, and ſerued other Goddes) euen ſo do they vnto thee. Now therfore herken vnto their voice: howbeit, yet teſtifie vnto them and ſhewe the * the aucthorite of the king Deu.17.c that ſhal raygne ouer them. And Samuel tolde all the wordes of the Lorde vnto the people, that asked a kynge of hym, and he ſayde: this ſhalbe the auctorite of the king 1.reg.9.d that ſhall raigne ouer you: * he wyll take C your ſonnes and put them to his charetes, and make hys horſmen of theym, to runne before his charet: & wyll make him of them captaynes ouer thouſandes and ouer fyftes, and wil ſet them to eare his grounde, and to gather in hys harueſt, and to make inſtrumētes of warre, and apparel for hys charets. And he wyl take your doughters, and make them Apoticaries, cookes and bakers. And he ſhall take the beſt of your feldes, * and of your vineyardes, and of 3.re.21.8 your olyue trees, and geue them to his ſeruauntes. And he ſhal take the tenth of your ſede, and of your vineyardes, and geue it to his chamberlaynes, and to his ſeruauntes. And he ſhall take the beſt of your men ſeruauntes and maydſeruauntes, & yonge men, and of youre aſſes, and put theym to D hys worcke. And he ſhall take the tenth of your ſhepe, and ye ſhalbe hys ſeruauntes. And ye ſhall crye out at that tyme vpon your king, which ye ſhal haue choſen you, and the Lorde wyll not heare you at that daye. Neuertheles, the people wouldē not heare the voyce of Samuel, but dyd ſaye: nay, not ſo. But there ſhal be a kyng ouer vs, that we may be like other nacions, and that our kynge maye iudge vs, and go out before vs, and fight our battailes (for vs.) Therefore, when Samuel hearde all the wordes of the people, he rehearſed theym in the eares of the Lorde. And the Lorde ſayd to Samuel: herken vnto their voyce, and make them a kinge. And Samuel ſaid vnto the men of Iſraell go euery man vnto his cyte.

¶ The. ix. Chapter.

A There was a man of Bē Jamin named

For from the ſhoulders vpwarde, he was

And he wente thorowe mounte Ephraim, be meth surely to passe. Nowe then let vs go thyther: peraduenture he shall shew vs what waye we may go. Then sayde Saul to hys ladde: yf we wyll go, what shal we bryng the man? For our breade is all spēt out of our besselles, and there is no nother present to bryng the man of God: what haue we? And the ladde answered Saul a gayne, and sayde: I haue founde aboute me the fourth parte of a sicle, that wyll I gene the manne of GOD, to tell vs oure waye. Before tyme in Israell when a man wente to seke an answere of GOD, thus wyse he spake, come, and let vs go to the sear. For he that is nowe called a prophet, was in the olde tyme called a sear. Then sayde Saul to hys ladde: well sayde of the: come, let vs go. And so they wente vnto the cytie where the man of God was. And as they were goynge vp into the cytye, they met with damosels that came out to drawe water, & said vnto thē: is there here a sear? And the maydens answered them, yea, (here is one) behold, he is before you. Make haste nowe, for he came this daye to the citie, for there is an offryng of the people this day in the hyll. When ye be come into the cytye, ye shal fynde hym strayght waye, yer he go vp to the hyll to eate: For the people wyl not eate vntyl he come, because he doth blesse the offeryng, And then eate they that be bydden to the feast. Now therfore get you vp, for thys daye shall ye ¶ find hym. And they went vp vnto the citie. And whē they were come into the myddes of the citie: beholde Samuel came oute a- 1.Re.15.a gainst them, for to go vp to the hyl. * But the Lorde had tolde Samuel in his eare (a daye before Saul came,) saying: to morow thys tyme I wyll sende the a man oute of the lande of Ben Jamin, hym shalte thou annopnt to be captayne ouer my people Israell, that he maye saue my people oute of the handes of the Philystines: for I haue loked vpon my people, and their crye is come vnto me. When Samuel therfore sawe Saule, the Lorde answered hym: se, this is the man whome I spake to thee of. This same shall raygne ouer my people. Then went Saul to Samuel in the myddle of the gate, and sayde: tell me I praye the where the sears house is. Samuell answered Saul, and sayde: I am the sear, goe vp before me vnto the hyll, for ye shal eate with me to daye. And to morowe I wyll let thee go, and wyll tell thee all that is in thyne hearte And as for thyne asses that were lost thre dayes a go, care not for thē, for they are founde. And more ouer, whose shall the bewtyfull thynges of Israell belonge they not to thee, and vnto all thy fathers house? But Saul answered and p sayde: am not I the sonne of a Jeminite, of the smallest trybe of Israel? and my kynred is the leste of all the kynredes of the trybe of Ben Jamin. Wherfore then spekest thou so to me? And Samuel toke Saul and his lad, and bronghte them into the parler, and made thē syt in the chefest place amonge them that were biddē: which were vpon a thirtye personnes: And Samuel sayde vnto the cooke: bryng forthe the porcion whiche I gaue the, and of which I sayde vnto the: kepe it with the. And the cooke toke vp the shoulder, and that whiche was vpon it, and set it before Saul. And Samuel sayde: beholde, that whiche is lefte: put it before the and eate, for hytherto hathe it bene kepte for the, of purpose, when I called the people. And so Saul dyd eate with Samuel that daye. And when they were come downe from the hyll into the citye, Samuel comuned wyth Saul vpon the toppe of the house: & whan they arose earlye about the sprynge of the daye, Samuel called Saul vpon the toppe of the house, sayinge: vp, that I may sende the awaye. And Saul arose. And they wēt out at the dores, both he and Samuel. And when they were come almoste oute of the towne, Samuel sayde to Saul: byd the lad go before vs (& he wente before) but stande thou styll a whyle, that I maye shewe the what God sayeth.

And Sauls fathers brother sayde vnto hym and to his lad: whether wente ye? He sayde: to seke the Asses: and when we saw that they were no where, we came to Samuel. And Sauls vncle said: tel me what Samuel sayde vnto you? Saul answered his vncle: he told vs playnely, that the Asses were founde. But of the kyngdome wherof Samuell spake, tolde he him not. And Samuel called the people together vnto the Lorde to Mizpa, and sayde vnto the childrē of Israel: thus sayde the Lorde God of Israell: I brought Israell out of Egipte, and delyuered you oute of the hande of the Egipcyans, and oute of the handes of all kyngedomes that troubled you. And when he stode amonge the people, he was hyer then anye of the people, from the shoulders vpwarde. ¶ The.xi. Chapter.

NAhas the Ammonite came, and besieged Jabes in Gilead. And all the men of Jabes sayde vnto Nahas: make a couenaunte wyth vs, and we wyll be thy seruauntes. And Nahas the Ammonite answered them: In this wyl I make a couenaunte wyth you, yf I maye thrust out all youre eyghe eyes? & bringe that shame vpon all Israell. To whome the elders of Jabes sayde: geue vs seuen dayes respite: that we maye sende messengers vnto all the coastes of Israell. And thē yf there be no man to helpe vs, we wyl come oute to thee. Then came the messengers to Gibea vnto Saule, and tolde thys tydynges in the eares of the people. And

And they tolde hym the tydynges of the men of Jabes. And the spirite of God came vpō Saul, when he hearde those tydinges, and he was exceadynge angeye, and toke a yoke of oxen, and hewed them in peces, & sent them thorowout all the coastes of Israell, by the handes of messengers, saying: whosoeuer commeth not forth after Saul, and after Samuel, so shall his oxen be serued. And the feare of the Lorde fell on the

And on the morowe it fortuned, that Saul put the people in three partes. And they came in vpon the hoofte in the mornynge watche. And slue the Ammonites vntil the heate of the daye. And they that remayned, were scattered: so that two of them were not lefte together. And the people sayd vnto Samuel: what is he that dare saye: shall Saule raygne ouer vs? bringe those men that we maye slaye them. And Saul sayde: there shall no man dye this daye, for to daye the Lorde hath saued Israell. The said Samuel vnto the people: come, that we may go to Gilgal, & renewe the kyngedome there. And all the people went to Gilgal, & made Saul kyng there, before the Lord in Gilgal. And there they offered peaceofferynges before the Lorde. And there Saul and all the men of Israell reioyced exceadyngly.

A SAmuel sayde vnto all Israel: beholde, I haue herkened vnto youre voyce in all that ye sayde vnto me, & haue made you a kyng. Now therfore, your king walketh before you. And I am olde and grape headed: & beholde, my sonnes are with you, & I haue walked before you fro my childhode vnto this daye. Beholde, here I am: beare recorde of me before the Lorde, and before his annoynted. * Whose oxe haue I taken? or whose asse haue I taken? whome haue I done wronge to? Whome haue I hurt? Or of whose hande haue I receaued any bribe: to blynde myne eyes therwyth, & I wyll restore it you agayne. They said: thou hast done vs no wrong, nor hurt vs, neither hast thou taken ought of any mannes hande. He sayd vnto them agayne: the Lord is witnesse agaynst you, & his anoynted is witnesse this day, that ye haue founde naught in my hādes. And they answered: he is wytnesse. And Samuel sayde vnto the people: it is the Lorde, that made Moses and Aaron, and that brought your fathers oute of the lande of Egipte. Now therfore stande styll, that I maye reason wyth you before the Lorde, accordynge to all the ryghteousnesses of the Lord, which he shewed bothe you and youre fathers.

* After that Jacob was come into Egypte, and your fathers cryed to the Lorde: the Lorde sente Moyses and Aaron, whyche brought your fathers oute of Egypte, and made them dwel in this place. * And whā they forgat the Lorde their God, he deliuered them into the hande of Sisara captayne of the host of Hazor * & into the hande of the Philistines, and into the hande of the kynge of Moab, and they fought agaynste them. And they cried vnto the Lord, & sayde: we haue synned, because we haue forsaken the Lorde, & haue serued Baalim & Asharoth. Nowe therfore delyuer vs oute of the handes of oure enemyes, and we wyll serue the. And the Lorde sent Jerobaal * Badā * Jephthah, & * Samuel, & delyuered you oute of the handes of youre enemyes on euery side, and ye dwelled safe. And for all that, whē you sawe that Nahas the kynge of the chyldren of Ammon, came agaynste you, ye sayd vnto me: * not so, but a kynge shall raygne ouer vs, when yet the Lorde your God was your kynge. Now therfore, beholde, the kynge whome ye haue chosen, and whō ye haue desired: lo, the Lorde hath set a kynge ouer you. If ye wyll feare the Lorde & serue him, and heare his voice, and not disobeye the worde of the Lorde: bothe ye and the kynge that raygneth ouer you, shal folow the Lorde your God: If ye wyll not herken vnto the voyce of the Lorde, but disobey the Lordes mouthe, then shall the hande of the Lorde be vpon you and on your fathers. Now also stande, & se this great thynge: whyche the Lord wyl do before youre eyes: is it not now wheate harueste? I wyl call vnto the Lorde, & he shall sende thūder and raygne: that ye may perceaue and se, howe that your wickednes is greate, whyche ye haue done in the syght of the Lorde, in askynge you a kynge. And so, Samuel called vnto the Lorde, & the Lorde sente thunder and raigne the same day. And all the people feared the Lorde and Samuel exceadyngly. And all the people sayde vnto Samuel: pray for thy seruauntes vnto the Lorde thy God, that we dye not: for we haue synned in askynge vs a kynge, besyde all the synnes that euer we dyd. And Samuel sayde vnto the people, feare not. Ye haue in dede done all this wyckednesse, yet departe not frō folowynge the Lorde. But serue hym euen with all youre hertes, & nether turne ye after vaine thinges which are not able to profyte you, for they are but vanytie. For the * LORDE wyll not forsake his people, because of his great names sake: because it hath pleased the Lorde to make you his people. Moreouer, God forbyd that I shoulde synne agaynste the Lorde, and ceasse prayinge for you, but to shew you the good & right way. Therfore feare you the Lorde, and serue hym in the trueth and with all your hertes: and consyder howe great thinges he hath done for you. But and yf ye do wyckedly, then shal

A SAul had bene kinge one yere (whē these thinges came to passe) & he raigned.ii. yeres ouer Israel. And Saul chose him thre thousande menne of Israell. Two thousande were with Saul in Michmas, and in mounte Bethell, and a thousande with Jonathas in Gibea Ben Jamin. And the reste of the people he sente euerye man to his owne house agayne. And Jonathas smote the holde of the Philistines, that was in the hyll, and it came to the Philistines eares. And Saul blewe the trompet thorowout all the lande, sayinge: Let the Ebrues heare. And all Israell hearde saye, howe that Saul had destroyed an holde of the Philistines, wherefore Israell stancke before the Philistines. And the people gathered together after Saul to Gylgal.

The Philistines also gathered them selues together to fight with Israel, thirtie thousande charettes, & sixe thousande horsmen, with other people like the * sande by the seas syde in multitude, & came vp, & pitched in Michmas eastwarde frō Bethaūs. And when the men of Israel sawe it, they were in a straite, and feare came vpon the people, and they hyd them selues in caues, and in priuye holes, and in rockes, and in hye places, & in pittes. And some of the Ebrues went ouer Jordan to go vnto the lande of Gad & Gilead. And Saul was yet in Gilgal, and all the people that folowed hym were astonied. And he taryed seuen dayes, euē vnto the tyme that Samuell had appoynted. But Samuel came not to Gilgal, and the people were therefore scatered from him. And Saul sayd: bryngea burnt sacrifice to me and peaceofferinges. And he offered burnt sacrifice. And as soone as he had made an ende of offering the burnt sacrifice, beholde. Samuel came. And Saul wente agaynst him, to bleste hym. And Samuell sayde: what haste thou done? Saul sayde: because I sawe that, the people scatered from me, and that thou camest not within the dayes appoynted, & that the Philistines gathered thē selues together to Michmas: therfore sayde I: the Philistines shal come downe nowe vpon me to Gilgall, and I haue not made supplicatiō vnto the lord. And when I had ouercome my selfe, at the last I offered a burnte offeringe. And Samuel sayde vnto Saul * thou art become a foole, thou haste not kepte the commaundement of the Lorde thy God, whiche he commaūded the. For at this time wold the Lord haue stablished thy kyngdome vpon Israel for euer. But nowe, thy kyngdome shall not continue. * The Lorde hathe sought him a man after hys owne heart, & the Lorde hath cōmanded him to be capitayne ouer hys people, because thou haste not kept that whiche the Lorde cōmaunded the. And Samuel arose and gat hym vp from Gilgal to Gibea Ben Jamin: and the remnaūt of the folke wēt vp after Saul to mete the people, which fought agaynste them, as they were comminge from Gilgal to Gibea in the hyll of Ben Jamin. ¶ And Saul numbred the people that were fownde with him, and they were about a fyre hundred men. And Saul and Jonathas hys sonne, & the people that were founde with them had their abidynge in the hyl of Benjamin. But the Philistines pitched in Michmas. And there came out of the hoste of the Philistines.iii. cōpanies, to destroye: one company tourned vnto the waye that leadeth to Ophra, vnto the lande of Saul. And another company turned the waye to Bethoron. And the thirde company turned to the waye of the coast that is sene aboue the baleye of Zeboim towarde the wylderneslle. There was no smith founde thorowout al the lande of Israell. For the Philistines sayd: Lest happely the Ebrues make them swearedes or speares. But all the Israelites wente downe to the Philistines, to mēde euery man his share, his mattock, his axe, and his necessarye toles: And then the edges of the shares, mattockes, donge forkes, and axes were blunte, and also the forkes were to be set in. And so in tyme of batell there was neither swearde nor spere founde in the handes of anye of the people that were with Saul and Jonathas. But with Saul and Jonathas hys sonne was there somewhat founde. And the watche of the Philistines came oute, to goe ouer vnto Michmas.

AND it fortuned the same tyme, that Jonathas the sonne of Saul said vnto a yonge mā that bare his harnes: come, & let vs goe ouer to the Philistines watche that are yonder on the other syde, and he tolde not hys father. And Saul taryed in the vttermoste parte of Gibea vnder Rimmon, whiche is in Migron, and the people that were with hym were vpon a fyre hundred men. And Ahia the sonne of Ahitob, Jehabods brother, the sonne of Phinehes, the sonne of Ely, was the Lordes priest in Siloh and ware an Ephod. And the people wyste not that Jonathas was gone. And in the myddes of the passage (by whyche Jonathas soughte to goe ouer vnto the Philistines watche) were there two sharpe rockes, euen one on the

And Jonathas ſayde vnto hys harneſbearer, come vp after me, foꝛ the Lord hath deliuered them into the hande of Iſraell. And Jonathas clame vp vpon hãdes and fete, and his harneſbearer after him. And the people came into the woode: And beholde, the hony dꝛopped, and no mã moued hys hand to his mouth, foꝛ the people feared the othe. But Jonathas hearde not when his father charged the people with the othe, wherefoꝛe he put foꝛth the ende of the rod that was in his hande, and dypte it in an hony combe, and put hys hand to his mouth, and his eyes receaued ſight. Then anſwered one of the people, and ſayd: Thy father adiured the people, ſayinge: curſſed be the man that eateth any ſuſtinaũce this daye, and the people were faynte. the people brought euery man his ore in hys hande by nyght, and slue them there. And Saul made an altare vnto the Lord. And that was the first altare that he made vnto the Lord. And Saul sayd: let vs goe downe after the Philistines by nyght and spoile them, vntil it be day in the morning and let vs not leaue one man of them. And they sayde: do whatsoeuer thou thynkest best. Then sayde the Priestе: let vs come hither vnto God. And Saul asked of God: F shall I go downe after the Philistines? Wilt thou delyuer them into the hādes of Israell? But he answered him not at that tyme. And Saul sayde: let the people come hyther out of all quarters, and knowe and se by whome thys synne is chaunsed thys day: for as truly as the Lord lyueth which saueth Israell, thoughe it be in Jonathas my sonne, he shal dye the death. But there was no man amonge all the people that answered hym. Then he sayde vnto all Israell: be ye on one syde, & I and Jonathas my sonne wil be on the other syde. And the people said vnto Saul: what thou thinkest best, that do. Therfore Saule sayde vnto the Lorde God of Israell: geue a perfecte lot: Lorde God, geue thou the iudgement. Howe happeth it, that thou geuest thy seruaūt no answere today? If this sinne be in me or in Jonathas my sonne, shew it, or yf this iniquitie be in thy people. ¶ And Saul and Jonathas were caught, but the people scaped free. And Saul sayd, cast lottes betwene me and Jonathas my sonne. And Jonathas was caught. Then Saul sayde to Jonathas: tel me what thou hast done? And Jonathas tolde him, and sayde: I tasted a lytle honye with the ende of the rod that was in myne hande: and lo, I muste Ruth.i.c D dye. Saul answered: * God do so and so G to me, thou shalt dye the death Jonathas. And the people sayde vnto Saule: shall Jonathas dye whiche hathe so myghtely helped Israell? God forbyd. As truely as 2.re.14.c the Lorde liueth * there shall not one heere of his heade fall to the ground, for he hath wrought with God this daye. And so the people delyuered Jonathas, that he dyed not. And then Saule departed vp from folowyng the Philistines. And the Philistines went to their own place. And so Saul helde the kyngdome ouer Israel, & fought agaynste all his enemyes on euery syde agaynst Moab: agaynst the children of Ammon: against Edom: against the kinges of Zoba, and agaynste the Philistines. And whyther soeuer he turned hym selfe, there 1.re.28.c he wanne: and he gathered hys hoste together, and smote the * Amalekites, and ryd Israel out of the handes of thē that spoyled them. The sonnes of Saul were: Jonathas, Jesui, and Melchisua. And hys .ii. doughters were thus named: the elder was called Merob, and the yōger Michol. And the name of Sauls wife, was Ahinoa the doughter of Ahimaaz. And the name of his cheefe captayne was Abner the sonne of Ner, Sauls vncle. And * Cis was Sau- 1.Re.9.a les father. And Ner the father of Abner 1.par.8.c was the sonne of Abiel. And there was sore warre against the Philistines, al the daies of Saul. And whomsoeuer, Saul sawe to be a strong man, and mete for the warre, he toke him vnto him.

SAmuel sayde vnto Saul: * the Lorde A sent me to anoynt the, to be kyng ouer 1.Re.ix.c his people Israel. Nowe therfore herken thou vnto the voyce of the wordes of the Lord. And Saule came vnto a citie of Amalech, and set watch in the valey. And Saul sayd vnto the Kenites: go, and depart, and get you down from amōge the Amalekites, lest I destroye you wyth them: for ye shewed mercye to all the chyldren of Israell, when they came oute of Egipt. And so the Kenites departed from amonge the Amalekites. And Saul smote the Amalekites from Heuila, as thou commest to Sur, that lyeth before Egypte, and toke Agag the kynge of the Amalekites aliue, and vtterly destroyed all the people wyth the edge of the swearde. * But Saule and Nu.24.b the people spared Agag, & the better shepe, and the fatter oxen, and the lambes, and al that was good, and would not destroy thē. But al that was foule and naught worth, that they destroyed vtterly. Thē came the worde of the Lorde vnto Samuel, saying: C Gene.6.c it * repenteth me, that I haue made Saul kynge. For he is turned from me, and hath not performed my commaundementes. And Samuell was euell apayed, and cried vnto the Lord al night. and gone downe to Gilgall. And Samuel came to Saul, and Saul offred burnt sacrifice vnto the Lorde, of the fruite of the spoyles which he had brought frō Amalec. And when Samuel was come vnto Saul, Saul sayde vnto hym: Blessed be thou in the Lorde. I haue fulfylled the commaundement of the Lorde: Samuell sayd: what meaneth then the bleatynge of the sheepe in myne eares, and the noyse of the oxen which I heare? Saul answered: they haue brought them frome the Amalekites. For the people spared the beste of the sheepe and of the oxen, to sacrifice them vnto the Lord thy God. And the remnaunte haue we destroyed vtterlye. Samuel sayde to Saul: let me tell the what the Lorde hathe sayde to me this nyght. And he sayde vnto hym: saye on. Samuel sayde: * when thou waste litle in thine owne sight, wast thou not made the heade of the trybes of Israell? And the Lorde anoynted the kynge ouer Israell. And the Lorde sente the on a iourney, and sayde: Go, and vtterlye destroye those synners the Amalekites, and fyghte agaynste them, vntyll thou vtterlye destroye them. And wherfore hast thou not herkened vnto the voyce of the Lorde, but haste turned to the praye, and haste done that whiche is wicked in the sight of the Lord. And Saul sayde vnto Samuel: yea, I haue harkened vnto the voyce of the Lord, and haue gone the waye whiche the Lorde sente me vnto, and haue brought Agag the kyng of Amaleche, and haue vtterly destroyed the Amalekites. But the people toke of the spoyle sheepe, oxen, and the chefest of the thynges, whiche shoulde haue bene destroyed, to offer vnto the Lorde thy God in Gilgal. And Samuel sayde: hathe the Lorde as greate pleasure in burnt sacrifyces and offringes, as whan the voice of the Lorde is obeyed? Beholde, to obey is better then sacrifyce, and to harken is better then the fat of rammes. For rebellio is as the sinne of * witchcrafte, and stoburnes is as the wycked nesse of Idolatry. Because thou haste cast awaye the worde of the Lorde therefore hathe the Lorde cast away the also, frō beynge kyng. And Saul sayde vnto Samuel: I haue synned, for I haue gone farther then the sayinge of the Lorde and thy wordes, because I feared the people, & obeyed their voyce. Nowe therfore take awaye my synne, and turne againe with me, that I may worshyp the Lorde. And Samuel sayde vnto Saul: I wyll not returne with the: for thou haste cast awaye the worde of the Lorde, and the Lorde hath cast awaye the, that thou shalt not be kynge ouer Israel. And as Samuell turned him selfe to go awaye, he caughte the lappe of his coate, and it rente. And Samuel sayd vnto hym: The Lorde hath rent the kyngdome of Israell frō the thys daye, and hath geuen it to a neyghbour of thyne, that is better thē thou. The strēgth of Israell wyll not begyle nor repente: For he is not a man, that can repent. He sayde: I haue synned. But nowe honoure me before the elders of my people, and before Israell, and turne agayne with me, that I maye worshyp the Lorde my God. And so Samuel turned agayne, & folowed Saul. And Saull worshypped the Lorde. Then sayde Samuel: Bryngeye hither to me, Agag the kynge of the Amalekites. And Agag came vnto him dilycasly. And Agag sayde: truely the bitter death commeth on. And Samuell sayde: As thy swearde hathe made wemen childelesse, so shal thy mother be childeleslie aboue other women. And Samuell hewed Agag in peces before the Lorde in Gilgall. And thē * Samuell departed to Rama. And Saul wente home to his house to Gibea Saul. And Samuell came no mooze to see Saul, vntyl the day of hys death. Neuertheles Samuel mourned for Saul, and the Lorde repented, that he had made Saul kynge ouer Israel.

C And Samuell sayde vnto Isai: Are here al thy chyldren? He sayde: there is yet a lytle one behynde, that kepeth the shepe. And Samuel sayde vnto Isai: sende & fet hym, for we wyll not syt downe, tyll he be come hyther. And he sent, and brought hym in. And he was browne, and of an excellente bewtie, * and well fauoured in syghte. And the Lorde sayde: Arise, and anoynte hym for this is he. Therfore Samuel toke the horne with the ointmente, and anoynted hym in the middes of hys brethren. And the spirite of the Lorde came vpon Dauid, frome that daye forwarde. And Samuell rose vp and went to Rama. But the spirite of the Lorde departed frome Saul, and an euyl spirite sent of the Lorde vexed hym. And Sauls seruauntes sayde vnto hym: Beholde, an euell spirite sente of God vexed thee, let oure Lorde therefore comaunde his seruauntes (that are before the) to seke a man, that is a connynge player with an harpe: that when the euyll spyrite sente of GOD commeth vpon the, he maye playe wyth hys hande and thou shalte be eased. Wherfore Saul sente messengers vnto Isai, and sayde: sende me Dauid thy sonne, whyche is with the shepe. And Isai toke an asse laden wyth breade, and a flacket of wyne, and a kyd, and sent them by Dauid hys sonne vnto Saul. And Dauid came to Saul, and stode before hym, and he loued hym very wel, and he was made his harnesbearer. And Saul sente to Isai, sayinge: let Dauid remayne wyth me, for he hath founde fauoure in my syghte. And so it fortuned, that when the euyll spyrite sent of God, came vpō Saul, Dauid toke an harpe, and played with his hande, and so Saul was refreshed, and did amende, and the euel spyrit departed from hym.

The Philistines gathered their hoste to battel, & came together to Socoth A whyche is in Juda, & pitched betwene Socoth & Azekah, in the coaste of Dammin. And Saul and the men of Israel came together, & pitched in the Oke valley, and put them selues in arraye, to fyght agaynst the Philistines. And the Philistines stode on an hil on the one syde, & Israell stode on an hil on the other syde, & there was a valley betwene thē. And there came a mā betwene thē both, out of the tentes of the Philistines, named Goliath * of Gath, fyue cu- Jud. xi. b bites and an handbredeth longe, and had an helmet of brasse vpon his heade, and a coate of mayle about him. And the weight of his coate of mayle was fyue thousande syckles of brasse. And he hadde boates of brasse vpō his legges, and a shilde of brasse vpon his shoulders. And the shafte of hys speare was like a weuers beame. And his speare heade weyed fyue hundred sicles of yron. And one bearynge a shilde went before him. And he stode and cryed agaynste the hoste of Israell, and sayde vnto them: Why are ye come oute in arraye to battell? am not I a Philistine and you seruauntes to Saul? chose you a man frome amonge you, and let him come downe to me. And if he be able to fyght with me, and to beate 25 me, then wyll we be your seruauntes. But yf I can ouercome hym and beate hym then shall ye be our seruauntes, & serue vs. And the Philistine sayd: I defye the hoste of Israel this day, geue me a man, that we maye fyght together. When Saul and al Israell harde those wordes of the Philistine, they were dyscouraged, and greately afrayde. Dauid was the sonne of an Ephrathite of whome mencion is made afore of Bethlehem Juda named Isai, whyche had eyght sonnes. And was an olde man in the dayes of Saul, and came to age amonge men. And the thre eldest sonnes of Isai were, and folowed Saul to the battell. And the names of hys thre sonnes that wente to battell, were: Eliab the eldeste, and the nexte, Abinadab, and the thyrde Samma, & Dauid was the leaste. And the thre eldest wēt after Saul. Dauid also wente, and departed from Saul, to fede hys fathers shepe at Bethlehem. And the Philistine came forthe in the mornynge and euenynge, and continued fortye dayes. And Isai sayde vnto Dauid hys sonne: take for thy brethren an Epha of this parched corne and these ten loaues, and bringe it vnto the hoste to thy brethren. And carye these ten fre cheses vnto the captaine, & loke how thy brethren fare, and fet oute their pledge. And Saul and they, and all the men of Israell rael were in the oke baley, fyghtinge with the Philistines. And Dauid rose vp earlye in the morninge, and lefte the shepe with a keper, and toke and went as Isai had commaunded him, and came within the cōpasse of the hoste. And the hoste went oute in araye, and shouted in the battel: for Israel C and the Philistines had put them selues in araye, the one agaynst the other. And Dauid toke downe the gere frō him, and put them vnder the handes of the keper of the bellels, and ran into the hoost, and came: & saluted his brethrē. And as he talked with them, Beholde: There stode a man in the middes (Goliath the Philistine by name) of Gath oute of the araye of the Philistines, and spake of the maner aboue rehersed, that Dauid hearde it. And all the men of Israell, when they sawe the man, ranne awaye from him, and were sore afrayde.

And euerye man of Israel sayde: Sawe ye this man come forth? euen to cēsure Israel Iol. 15. c. is he come. * And to him that beateth hym wyl the kynge geue great ryches, & wyll geue him his doughter therto: yea, & make D his fathers house free in Israell. And Dauid spake to the men that stode by, & sayd: What shall be done to the man that beateth thys Philistine, and taketh away the shame from Israel? And what is this vncircumcised Philistine, that he shoulde reuile the hoste of the liuynge God? And the people answered him (after this maner,) sayinge: so shall it be done to the man that beateth hym. And Eliab his eldest brother heard when he spake vnto the mē, & Eliab was angry with Dauid, and sayde: Why camest thou downe hyther? and with whō haste thou lefte those fewe shepe in the wylderues? I know thy pryde and the malyce of thine hearte, that thou arte come downe to se the battell. And Dauid sayde: And what haue I nowe done? is there not a worde? And he departed frome hym into the presence of another, and spake of the same maner, and the people answered hym agayne as before. And they that heard the wordes whiche Dauid spake, rehearsed the before Saul, whiche caused him to be fet. And Dauid sayde to Saul: Let no manns heart fayle him because of hym. Thy seruaunt wyl go, and fight with yonder Philistine. And Saul sayde to Dauid agayne: thou arte not able to goe agaynste yonder Philistine, to fight with him. For thou art but a childe, but he is a man of warre euen frō his youth. Dauid answered vnto Saul Iud. 14 b Thy seruaūte kept his fathers shepe, and

And when he arose agaynste me, I caughte hym by the bearde, E and smote him, and slue him. And so thy seruaunte slue the Lyon, and the Beare (also) hath thy seruaunte slayne. And truelye this vncircumcised Philistine shall be as one of thē: Now wyll I go, & take awaye the rebuke of the people, for what is this vncircūcised Philistine) seig he hath railed on the hoste of the liuynge God. And Dauid spake moreouer: The Lorde that wlynered me oute of the hande of the Lyon, & out of the hande of the Beare, he shall delyuer me also out of the hande of the Philistine. And Saul sayde vnto Dauid: Goe, and the Lorde shalbe with thy. And Saul put his rayment vpon Dauid, and put an helmet of brasse vpon hys heade, and put a coate of mayle vpon hym, and girded Dauid with his owne swearde vpon hys rayment. And he assayed to goe. And bycause he neuer proued it, Dauid said vnto Saul: I cannot go with these: for I haue not vsed my selfe thereto: And Dauid put them of hym, and toke his staffe in hys hād, & chose him fiue smothe stones out of a broke, and put them in a shepardes bagge, whiche he had, and in a slynge poke: and hys slynge F was in hys hande, and he went to the Philistine. And the Philistine came and drue nere agaynst Dauid, and the man that bare the shilde went before hym. And when the Philistine loked about, and sawe Dauid, he disdayned him, for he was but ponge, & wel coloured, and goodly to loke vpō. And the Philistine sayde vnto Dauid: am I a dog, that thou comest to me with a staffe? and the Philistine cursed Dauid in the name of hys goddes. And the Philistine sayde to Dauid: Come to me, and I wyll geue thy flesche vnto the foules of the ayre, and to the beastes of the felde. Then sayde Dauid to the Philistine. Thou comest to me with a swearde, a speare, and a shilde: But I come to the in the name of the lorde of hoostes, the God of the hooste of Israell, whome thou haste rayled vpon. Thys daye shall the Lorde wlyner thee in to my hand, and I shal smite the, and take thyne head frome the, and wyl geue the karcases of the hoste of the Philistines thys day vnto the foules of the ayre, and to the beastes of the earth, that all they whiche be in the worlde, may knowe, that there is a God in Israel. And al this cōgregaciō shal know, that the Lord saueth not with sweard and speare. For the batell is the Lordes, and he shal geue you into our handes. And when the Philistine arose, to come & drawe nye vnto Dauid. Dauid hasted, and ran into the battel euen agaynste the Philistine. And

Dauid put hys hande in hys bagge, and toke oute a stone, and slange it, & smote the lyng to the earth, & so Dauid ouercame the Philistine with a slynge & a stone, & smote the Philistine, and slue him, euen whē Da-uid ran and stode vpon the Philistine, and toke his swerd, & drue it out of his sheth, and slue hym, & cut of his head therwyth.

And when the Philistines sawe, that their men of Israell and of Juda arose, & shouted, and folowed after the Philistines, vntyll they came to the valleye, and vnto the gates of Akaron. And the Philistines fell downe wounded by the waye to Saarim, euen vnto Gath and Akaron. And the children of Israell returned from chasynge after the Philistines, and spoyled theyr ten-res. And Dauid toke the heade of the Philistine, and brought it to Jerusalem: But he put his armour in his tent When Saul thy soule lyueth (O kynge) I can not tell.

And the kynge sayde: Enquire thou whose sonne the yongelynge is. And when Dauid was returned frō the slaughter of the Phi listine, Abner toke hym, and brought him before Saul, with the heade of the Phily-stine in his hande. And Saule said to him: whose sonne art thou, thou yong mā? Da-uid answered: I am the sōne of thy seruaūt Isai the Bethlehemite.

¶ The. xviii. Chapter.

A AND whē he had made an ende of spea kyng vnto Saul, the soule of Jona-thas was knyte wyth the soule of Dauid, & Jonathas loued him as his owne soule. And Saul toke him that day, & wold let hi go no moze home to his fathers house.
And Jonathas made a couenaūt with Da-uid, because he loued hi as his own soule.
And Jonathas put of his owne coate that was vpō him, & gaue it Dauid, and therto his cloke, his swearde, his bowe, & his girdle. And Dauid went oute whether so euer Saul sent him, & behaued himselfe wisely.
And Saul set him ouer his men of warre, and he was accepted in the syght of all the B people, and in the syghte of Sauls seruaūtes. And it happened as they wente, whē Dauid was returned from the slaughter of the Philistine, that wemen came oute of all cyties of Israell singynge and doun-cyng, agaynst kynge Saul, and with timbrelles, wyth ioye, and wyth instrumen-tes of musycke. And the wemen answered one an other in theyr playe, and sayde: 1. re. 21. d * Saul hath slayne hys thousāde, and Da and. 29. b uid his ten thousande. And Saule was exceding wroth, & the saying displeased him, and he sayde: they haue accerbed vnto Da-uid ten thousande, and to me but a thousande, and what can he moze haue, saue the kyngdome? Wherfoze Saule loked on syx C of Dauid from that day forwarde. And it happened on the mozowe, that the euyll spirite sent of God came vpon Saule, and he prophecied in the myddes of the house.
And Dauid played with his hande like as at other tymes, and there was a iauelin in Sauls hande. And Saul toke the iauelin, and sayde: I wyll nayle Dauid to the wall wyth it. And Dauid auoyded out of hys presence two times. And Saul was afrayd of Dauid, because the Lord was wyth him and was departed from Saule. Therefoze Saul put him from him, and made him a captayne ouer a thousande, and he wente out and in before the people. And Dauid behaued him selfe wisely in all his wayes, and the Lorde was wyth hym. Wherefoze when Saul sawe that he was so exceding wise, he was afrayd of him. But all Israell and Juda loued Dauid because he wente out and in before them. And Saul sayd to Dauid. Beholde, my eldest doughter Me- D rob, her I wyl geue the to wyfe. Only play the man with me, & fyght the Lordes battelles. For Saul thought: myne hāde shal not be vpon him, but the hand of the Philistines. And Dauid answered Saul: what am I? and what is my life, or the kynred of my father in Israell, that I shoulde be sonne in lawe to the kynge? Howbeit, whē the tyme was come that Merob Sauls doughter should haue bene geuē to Dauid, she was geuen vnto Adziel a Meholothite, to wyfe. Howbeit, Michol Sauls dough-ter loued Dauid. And they shewed Saul: E the thynge displeased hym not. And Saul sayde: I will geue him her that she maye be a snare to him, and that the hāde of the Philistines maye be agaynste him. Wherefoze Saule sayde to Dauid: thou shalte thys day be my sonne in lawe in the other doughter. And Saul commaunded his ser uauntes to cōmen with Dauid secretly, and to saye: Beholde the kynge hath a fauoure to the, and all hys seruauntes loue thee, be now therefoze the kynges sonne in lawe.
And Sauls seruauntes spake those wozdes in the eares of Dauid. And Dauid sayde: semeth it to you a lyght thyng, to be a kynges sonne in lawe? I am a poze man, and of smalle reputacyon. And the seruaū- F tes brought Saul wozde agayne, sayinge:

of thys maner spake Dauid. And Saule sayde: this wyse shall ye say to Dauid: the kynge careth for no nother dowry, but for an hundred foreskynnes of the Philistines, to be auenged of the kynges enemyes. But Saule thought to make Dauid fall into the handes of the Phylystynes. And when hys seruauntes tolde Dauid these wordes, it pleased Dauid well to be the kynges sonne in lawe. And or the dates G were expired, Dauid arose with his men, & went and slue of the Philistines, two hundred men, and Dauid brought their foreskynnes, and satisfyed the kynge therof, to

And Saul sawe and vnderstode, howe that the Lorde was wyth Dauid, and that Michol his doughter loued hym, and he was the more afrayde of Dauid, and Saule became alwaye Dauids enemie. The Lordes of the Philistines vsed to go forth. And it fortuned, that when they went furth, Dauid behaued hym selfe wiselyer then al the seruauntes of Saul: so that his name was muche set by.

A SAul spake to Jonathas his sonne, and to al his seruauntes, that they should kyll Dauid. * But Jonathas Saulles 1.Re.18.a sone had a great fauour to Dauid, & Jonathas told Dauid, sayinge: Saul my father goth about to slay the. Now therfore take hede to thy selfe vntil the morowyng, & abid in some secret place, and hide thy selfe. And I wyll go oute, and stande by my father in the felde where thou arte, and wyll comen with my father of the, and what so euer I se, I wil tel the. And Jonathas spake good of Dauid vnto Saul his father, and sayde vnto hym: let not the kynge synne agaynst his seruaũt Dauid, for he hath not synned

And Jonathas called Dauid, & shewed him all those wordes, and brought Dauid to Saul. And he was in his presence as in tymes paste. And the warre began again, and Dauid went out and fought with the Philistines, and slue them wyth a greate slaughter, and they fled from him. And the euyll spirite seme of the Lorde, was vpon Saule, as he satte in hys house hauyng a Janelin in his hande, and Dauid played with his hande. And Saul enforced to naple Dauid to the wal wyth the Janelin. But he ryd hym selfe oute of Sauls presence, as he smote the speare with a daine stroke into the wall. And Dauid fled and was saued the same nyghte. Saul also sente messengers vnto Dauids house, to watche him and to slay hym in the morynge. And Michol Dauids wyfe tolde it him, sayinge.

C If thou saue not thy selfe thys nyghte, to morow thou wylte be slayne. And so * Michol let Dauid downe thorowe a wyndowe and he wente and fled, and was saued. And than she toke an Image and layed it in the bed, and put a pelowe stuffed wyth goates heare vnder the heade of it, and couered it with a cloth. And when Saul sente messengers to fetche Dauid, he said, he is sycke. And Saul sente the messengers agayne to se Dauid, sayinge: bryng hym to me, bed and all, that I maye sleye hym. And when the messengers wer come in: Behold, there laye an ymage in the bed wyth a pyllowe of goates heare vnder the heade of it. And Saul sayde vnto Michol: why haste thou mocked me so, and sente awaye myne enemye that he is escaped? Michol answered Saul. For he sayde vnto me, let me go, or els I wyll kyll the. And so Dauid fled, and escaped, and came to Samuel to Rama, & tolde hym all that Saul had done to hym. And he and Samuel wente and dwelte in D Naioth. And one tolde Saul, sayinge: Behold, Dauid is at Naioth in Rama. And Saul sente messengers to fet Dauid. And when they sawe a companye of Prophetes prophesyinge, and Samuel standynge faste by them, the spyryte of God fell vpon the messengers of Saul, and they prophesyed to. And when it was tolde Saul, he sente other messengers, & they prophesyed lykewyse. And Saul sent messengers yet againe the thyrde tyme, and they prophesyed also. Than wente he hym selfe to Rama, and came to a greate well that is in Sechu, and he asked and said: where are Samuel and Dauid? And one sayde: Beholde, they be at Naioth in Rama, and he went thyther, euen to Naioth in Rama, and the spyryte of God came vpon him also, and he wente prophesyinge, vntyll he came to Naioth in Rama. And he strypte of hys clothes and prophesyed before Samuel in lyke maner, & fel naked al that daye, and al that nyghte.
* And therfore it is, that they say: is Saul 1.Re.19.c

A Nd Dauid flewe frõ Naioth which is in Rama, came & sayde before Jonathas, What haue I done? wherein am I faulty? What is the fyn that I haue committed before thy father, that he seketh my lyfe? He sayde vnto hym: God forbyd, thou shalte not dye. Beholde, my father wyll do nothynge eyther great or small, but that he wyll shewe it me. And howe shoulde my father hyde thys thynge from me? he wyl not do it. And Dauid sware agayne, and sayde, thy father knoweth that I haue founde grace in thyne eyes, and therfore he sayeth: Jonathas shall not knowe it, lest he be sory. And in very dede, euen as truely as the Lorde lyueth, and as truely as thy soule lyueth, there is but a steppe betwene me and death. Then sayde Jonathas vnto Dauid: what so euer thy soule desyreth, that I wil do vnto the. And Dauid sayde vnto Jonathas: Beholde, to morowe is the begynnyng of the moneth, and I should syt with the kynge at meate. But let me go, that I maye hyde my selfe in the feldes vnto the thyrde daye at euen.

If thy father speake of me, then saye, Dauid asked leaue of me, that he myghte go to Bethlehem to hys owne citye, for there is holden a yearelye feaste for all the kynred. And yf he saye it is well done, then thy seruaunte shall haue peace. But and if he be angrye, thā be sure that wyckednesse is determyne concluded of hym. And then thou shalt shew mercy vnto thy seruaunt, for thou haste made wyth me thy seruaunt a bonde in the Lorde. Notwithstandyng, yf there be in me anye trespace, then slee me thy selfe, and bryngе me not to thy father. And Jonathas answered, God kepe that from thee, neyther is it possible to come to passe. For if I knew, that wickednesse were concluded of my father, to come vpon thee, thynkest thou, that I should not tell it thee? Than sayde Dauid: who shall tel me, yf thy father answere cruelly? And Jonathas sayde vnto Dauid, come and let vs go out into the felde. And they went out both of them into the felde.

And Jonathas sayde vnto Dauid: The Lorde God of Israell loke on it, when I haue groped my fathers mynde, one tyme or other wythin thys three dayes that it stande well wyth Dauid. If I then sende not vnto thee, and shewe it thee, the Lorde do so and so vnto Jonathas. But if my father haue anye pleasure to do the euell, I will shewe the also, and sende the away that thou mayest go in peace. And the Lorde be wyth thee, as he hath bene wyth my father. And thou shalte perfourme vnto me the mercye of the Lorde, not onelye whyle I lyue, but euen when I am deade, and plucke not thy mercy awaye from my house for euer: No, not when the Lorde hath destroyed the enemyes of Dauid, euerye one frome the face of the earth. And so Jonathas made a bonde with the house of Dauid, desyryng that the Lorde should seke it out by the handes of Dauids enemyes (if it were broken.) And wyth other wordes dyd Jonathas sweare vnto Dauid, because he loued hym. For he loued hym, as hys owne soule. Then sayd Jonathas to Dauid: to morow is the fyrst daye of the Moone. And thou shalte be myssed, because the place where thou waste wonte to syt, shall be emptye. Therfore this day thre dayes come downe in anye wyse vnto the place where thou dyddest hyde thy selfe, whan the busynesse was in hande: euē by the stone Ezell. And I wyll shote thre arowes by the one syde therof, as thoughe I shote them at a marke, and wyll sende a lad, and byd him go seke the arowes. And yf I saye vnto the lad: se, the arowes are on thys syde thee, bryng them: then come thou: for it is peace and no hurte, as sure as the Lorde lyueth. But and yf I saye vnto the ladde, beholde, the arowes are beyonde the, thē go in peace) so the Lorde hathe sente thee awaye. And as touchynge thys whyche thou and I haue spoken: beholde, the Lorde be betwene thee and me for euer. And so Dauid hyd him selfe in the felde. And whē the newe mone was come, the kynge satte hym downe to eate meate. And the kynge satte hym downe after the olde maner, in his seate by the wall. And Jonathas arose, and Abner sat by Saules syde, and Dauids place was empty. Neuer theles, Saul sayde nothynge at all that daye. For he thonghte: some thynge hathe chaunsed hym that he is not clene. But on the morowe whiche was the seconde daye of the newe moone, it happened, that Dauids place was empty again. And Saul sayde vnto Jonathas hys sonne. Wherefore commeth not the sonne of Jsai to meate, neyther yesterday nor to daye? And Jonathas answered vnto Saule. Dauid asked lycence of me, to go to Bethlehem, for he sayd: let me go I praye thee, for oure kynred doth holde an offerynge in the citie, and my brother hathe sente for me. And therfore yf I haue founde fauoure in thyne eyes, let me go. & se my brethren. Thys is the cause that he cōmeth not vnto the kynges table. Thē was Saul angry with Jonathas, and sayd vnto hym: Thou wycked rebell, do not I knowe, that thou hast chosen the sonne of Jsai vnto thyne owne rebuke, and vnto the rebuke & shame of thy mother? For as longe as the sonne of Jsai lyueth vpon the earthe, thou shalte not be stablished, nor yet the kyngdom, wherfore him, whereby Jonathas wyst well, that it was vtterlye determined of his father, to slay Dauid. And so Jonathas arose from the table in a great anger, and dyd eate no meate the seconde daye of the moneth, for he was sory for Dauid, because hys father had done hym shame. On the nexte mor-nynge, Jonathas went oute into the feld, at the tyme appointed with Dauid, and a litle lad wyth hym. And he sayde vnto hys boye: runne, and seke oute myne arowes G which I shote. And as the boy ran he shote an arowe beyonde him. And when the lad was come to the place wyther Jonathas had shot the arowe, Jonathas cryed after the lad, & said: is not the arow beyõd the?

& Jonathas cried after the lad again: make spede, & stand not styl. And Jonathas lad gathered vp the arowes, & came to his master. But the lad wyst nothyng of the matter. Only Jonathas & Dauid wyste it. And Jonathas gaue his weapõs to the lad that was with him, and sayd vnto him: go and cary them to the towne. And as sone as the lad was gone, Dauid arose oute of a place that was towarde the south, and fel on his face to the grounde, and worshypped thre tymes. And they kissed either other, & wept together so longe, tyll Dauid exceaded in weppynge. And Jonathas sayde to Dauid: go in peace. And the thynges whyche we haue sworne both of vs in the name of the Lorde, sayinge: the Lord be betwene the & me, & betwene thy sede & myne, let the stãde for euer. And he arose, & departed. And Jonathas went into the towne.

kepte theym selues from vncleane thyn-ges, especyally women. Dauid answered the priest, and sayde vnto him: of a trueth women hath bene locked vp from vs abowt a thre dayes when I came out, and the bes sels of the younge men were holye. How-be it, this waye is vnpure, and how muche more shall there be holynesse in the vessell. Le 24.b.

bred, for there was no nother bread there, saue the shewebreades that were taken frõ before the Lorde, to put fresshe bread there, the daye that it was taken awaye. And there was there the same daye a certayne man, of the seruauntes of Saul, abidynge before the Lord, named Doeg, an Edomite, the chiefest of Sauls heard men. And Da-uid sayde vnto Ahimelech: is not here vnder thyne hande ether speare or swerde, for I haue neyther brought my swearde nor my harnesse with me, because the kynges busynesse required haste. And the priestе sayde: the swearde of Goliath the Philistine whom thou slewest in the Ocke valley, beholde, it is here wrapt in a cloth behinde the Ephod. If thou wilt take that, take it: for there is no nother save that here. And Dauid sayde: there is none to that, geue it me. And Dauid arose and fledde the same daye from the presence of Saul, and went to Achis the kynge of Geth. And the seruauntes of Achis sayd of him: is not this Dauid the kynge of the lande? dyd they not synge vnto him in daunses, saying: 1.re.18.b those wordes into hys herte, and was sore afrayed of Achis the kynge of Geth.

And he chaunged his speche before theym, and fayned him selfe madde in their han-des, and scrabled on the dores of the gate, and let hys spettle fall downe vpon hys beard. Then sayd Achis vnto his seruan-tes: Lo, ye se that this man is besyde hym selfe, wherefore then haue ye broughte him to me? Haue I nede of mad men, that ye haue brought thys felowe to playe the madde man in my presence? Shall he come into my house? The.xxii. Chap.

D Auid therfore departed thence, and escaped, & came vnto the caue Odollã. When his brethren also & all his fathers house hearde it, they wente downe thither to him. And there gathered vnto him all men that were in combraunce, & in det, & troubled in their myndes, and he became a captayne ouer theym. And there were with him vpon a foure hundred mẽ.
And Dauid went thence to Mizpa in the lande of Moab: and sayde vnto the kynge of Moab: Lette my father and my mother (I praye thee) come forthe vnto you, tyll I knowe what God will do for me.

And he bronghte them before the kynge of Moab. And they dwelte wyth hym all the whyle that Dauid kepte hym ſelfe in holde.
And the prophet Gad ſayde vnto Dauid, abyde not in holde, but departe and go into the lande of Juda. Then Dauid departed and came into the foreſte of Hareth.
And Saul hearde that Dauid was come abrode, and alſo the men that were wyth hym. And Saul ſat in Gibea vnder a tree in Rama, haunge hys ſpeare in hys hãde, and al his men ſtode about hym. And Saul ſaid vnto hys ſeruauntes that ſtode aboute hym. Heare J praye you, ye ſonnes of Jemini: wyll the ſonne of Jſai geue euery one of you feldes, and vyneyardes, and make you all captaynes ouer thouſandes and ouer hundredes? that ye haue alſo conſpyred agaynſt me, and there is none that 1.re.18.a and.xx.d telleth it me in myne eare? + And where as my ſonne hathe made a bonde wyth the ſonne of Jſai, there is none of you that mourneth for me, or sheweth it in myne eare: beholde, my ſonne hathe ſtered vp my ſeruaunte to lye awaite agaynſte me thys ſame daye. Then anſwered Doeg the Edomite whiche alſo ſtode by the ſeruauntes of Saul, and ſayde: J ſawe the ſonne of Jſai, when he came to Nob, to Ahimelech the ſonne of Ahitob, whyche aſked counſel of the Lorde for hym, and gaue hym vytayles, and the ſwearde of Goliah the Philiſtine alſo. Then the kynge ſent and called for Ahimelech the prieſte the ſonne of Ahitob, and all hys fathers houſe, that is to ſaye, the Prieſtes that were in Nob. And they came al to the kynge. And Saul ſaid:
C heare nowe thou ſonne of Ahitob. He anſwered: here J am, my Lorde. And Saul ſayde vnto hym: why haue ye conſpired agaynſte me, thou and the ſonne of Jſai, in that thou haſte geuen hym vytayle, and a ſwearde, and haſte aſked councel of God for hym: that he ſhoulde aryſe agaynſte me, and lye a wayte for me this daye? Ahimelech anſwered the kynge, and ſayde who is ſo faythfull amonge all thy ſeruauntes as Daiud, and therto the kynges ſonne in law, and goeth at thy biddynge, and is had in honoure in thyne houſe? haue J thys daye begon fyrſte to aſke councell of God for hym? That be farre from me (yf J had knowen it) let not the kynge put ſuche a thynge vnto hys ſeruaunt, in all the houſe of my father. For thy ſeruaunte knewe D nothynge of all this, ether leſſe or more.
The kynge ſayde: thou ſhalte ſurely dye Ahimelech, thou and all thy fathers houſe.
And the kynge ſayde vnto the fotemen that ſtode aboute him, turne, and ſlepe the prieſtes of the Lord, bothe because they hande is wyth Dauid, and becauſe they knewe when Dauid fled, and ſhewed it not to me. But the ſeruauntes of the kynge wouldo not moue theyr handes, to fall vpon the prieſtes of the LORDE. And the kynge ſayde to Doeg: turne thou, and fall vpon the prieſtes. And Doeg the Edomite turned & rãne vpon the prieſtes, & ſlue that ſame daye foure ſkore & fyue perſones, that dyd weare a lynnen Ephod. And Nob the citie of the prieſtes ſmote he wyth the edge of the ſwearde, bothe men and wemen: chyldren and ſuckelynges, oxen and aſſes and ſheepe. And one of the ſonne of Ahimelech, the ſonne of Ahitob (named Abiathar) eſcaped and fled to Dauid. And Abiathar ſhewed Dauid, howe that Saul had ſlayne the Lordes prieſtes. And Dauid ſayde vnto Abiathar: J wyſte it the ſame daye, whan Doeg the Edomite was there, that he wold tell Saul. And J am cauſe of the deathe of all the ſoules of thy fathers houſe. Abyde thou wyth me, and feare not: For yf anye man ſeke my ſoule, he ſhall ſeke thyne alſo, wyth me thou ſhalte be in ſauegarde.

Then they tolde Dauid ſaying: Beholde the Philiſtines fight againſt Keilah, and ſpoyle the barnes. Therfore Dauid aſked the Lordes aduiſe ſaying ſhall J go & ſmite theſe Philiſtines? And the Lord anſwered vnto Dauid: go & ſmyte the Philiſtines and ſaue Keilah. And Dauids men that were wyth hym, ſayde vnto him: ſe, we be afrayed here in Juda: howe muche more then yf we come to Keilah againſte the hoſt of the Philiſtines? Then Dauid aſked the Lorde agayne. And the Lorde anſwered hym and ſayde: Aryſe, and go downe to Keila, for J wyll delyuer the Philiſtines into thyne hande. And ſo Dauid and hys men wente to Keila, and foughte wyth the Philiſtines, and droue awaye theyr cattell and ſmote them wyth a greate ſlaughter. And ſo Dauid ſaued the inhabyters of Keila. And it chaunced, when Abiathar the B ſonne of Ahimelech fled to Dauid to Keila, that he brought an Ephod wyth hym in his hande. And it was tolde Saul, that Dauid was come to Keila. And Saul ſayde: God hathe delyuered hym into myne hande. For he is ſhut in nowe that he is come into a towne that hathe gates and barres. And Saul called all the people together to warre, for to go downe to Keila, and to beſege Dauid and hys men. And Dauid hauyng knowledge that Saul imagyned myſchiefe agaynſte hym, ſayde to Abiathar the prieſt: + Brynge the Ephod. Then ſayde Dauid: O LORDE GOD i.re.30.b

of Israell, thy seruaunt hath heard, that Saul is about to come agaynste Keila to destroye the citye for my sake: Will the men of Keila delyuer me in to hys hande? And will Saul come downe, as thy seruaunt hath heard saye? O Lorde GOD of Israell, tell thy seruaunte. And the Lorde sayde: He will come downe. Than sayde Dauid: Wyl the men of Keila delyuer me, and the menne that are wyth me into the hande of Saul? And the Lorde sayde: they will betraye you. Then Dauid and hys men, whiche were vpon a syde hundzeth, arose and departed out of Keila and wente, whither they coulde. And it was tolde Saul, that Dauid was fledde from Keila, and he let the iourney alone. Dauid abode in the wyldernesse in stronge holdes, and remayned in a mountayne in the wyldernesse of Ziph. And Saul sought hym euery daye, but God deliuered hym not into hys hande. And Dauid sawe that Saul was come out, to seke hys lyfe. And Dauid was in the wyldernes of Ziph in a thycket. And Jonathas Sauls sonne arose, and wente to Dauid into the thycket, and comforted hys hande in GOD, and sayde vnto hym: feare not, for the hande of Saul my father shal not finde the, and thou shalte be kynge ouer Israell, and I muste be nexte vnto the. And that doeth Saul my father knowe. *And they made a bonde bothe of them together before the Lorde. And Dauid tarved styll in the thycket, and Jonathas went to hys house. Then came the Ziphytes to Saul, to Gibea, sayinge: Doeth not Dauid hyde hym selfe faste by vs in stronge holdes, in a thycket that is by the hyl of Hachila, on the syghte syde of the wyldernesse? Nowe therefore kynge, thou mayest come downe accordynge to all the lust of thy soule: Come downe, and oure part shalbe to delyuer hym into the kinges hande. And Saul sayde: Blessed are ye in the Lorde: for ye haue compassion on me. Go, I pray you, and ordre the matter well, knowe & se his haunt, where hys fote hath bene, and who hath sene him there, for it is told me, that he is very suttell, & wonderly craftely. Se therefore, and knowe all the lurkyng places: where he hydeth him self, & come ye agayne to me with the certentye, and I wyll goe with you. And yf he be in the lande, I wyl searche hym oute thorow oute all the thousandes of Juda. And they arose, and wente to Ziph before Saul. But Dauid and his men were in the wilderness of Maon, in the playne that is on the syghte hande of Jesimon. Saull also and his men wente to seke: and they tolde Dauid, Wherefore he wente vnto a rocke, and abode in the wyldernesse of Maon. And when Saul hearde that, he folowed after Dauid in the wyldernesse of Maon. And Saul and hys men went on the one syde of the mountayne, and Dauid and hys men on the other side. And Dauid toke thought how to get from Saul. For Saul and hys men compassed Dauid and hys men, round about to take the. But there came a messager to Saul, sayinge: haste the and come, for the Philistines are come into the land. Wherefore, Saul retourned frome persecutyng Dauid, and went agaynst the Philistines. And therfore is it, that they called the place: The rock of separation. And Dauid went thence, and dwelt in stronge holdes at Engaddi.

When Saul was come agayne frō following after the Philistines, it fortuned that there were, which tolde hym, sayng: behold, Dauid is i the wildernesse of Engaddi. Then Saul tooke thre thousande chosen men oute of all Israell, and wente to seke Dauid and hys men in the heyghte of the rockes, where wylde goates remayne. And he came to the stockes of shepe in the waye. And Saul wente into a caue to couer hys fete.

And Dauid and hys menne remayned in the inwarde partes of the caue. And the men of Dauid sayde vnto hym: see, the daye is come, of which the Lorde sayd vnto the: Beholde, I wyll delyuer thyne enemie into thyne hāde, and thou shalte do to hym as it shal seme good in thy syghte. Then Dauid arose and cutte of a lappe of Sauls garment priuelye. And immedyatlye Dauids heart smote him because he had cut of a lap of Sauls garmēte. And he sayde vnto his mē: the Lord kepe me from doyng that thyng vnto my master the Lordes anointed to laye mine hāde vpō him, seinge he is the anoynted of the Lord. ¶ For as truly as the Lord liueth, except the Lorde smite him, or except his daye come, or if he goe downe to warre & perish, the Lorde be mercyful vnto me, that I lay not my hād vpō the lords anointed. And so Dauid kept of his seruauntes with these wordes, & suffred thē not to rise agaynste Saul. But Saul rose vp oute of the caue, and wente away, Dauid also arose and wente oute of the caue, and cryed after Saul, sayinge: My Lorde kynge. And when Saul loked behynd him, Dauid stowped to the earthe, and bowed him selfe and sayde to Saul: wherefore geuest thou an eare to mennes woordes that saye, Dauid seketh euell agaynste thee? Beholde, thys daye thine eyes haue sene, howe that the lorde hath delyuered the thys daye into myne hande in the caue. And some bad me kyll the, but I had compassion on the, and sayde: I wyll not laye my handes on my master, for he is the Lords annoynted. And moreouer, my father, beholde, and se yet the lappe of thy garmente in my hande, in as muche as I kylled the not, when I cut of the lappe of thy garmente. Vnderstande therfore, and se, that there is neyther euyll nor wyckednelle in me, and that I haue not synned agaynst the. And yet thou huntest after my soule to take it. The Lorde be iudge betwene the and me, and the Lord auenge me of the. But myne hande be not vpon the. Accordynge as the olde prouerbe sayeth: wyckednelle proceadeth from the wycked: But myne hande be not vpō the. After whom is the kynge of Israel come oute? After whome doest thou moue persecution? after a deade dog, and after a flee? The Lord be iudge, & iudge betwene the and me, and se & pleate my cause, and auenge me of thyne hande. When Dauid had made an ende of speakynge these wordes to Saul, Saul sayde: + is this thy voyce my sonne Dauid? and Saul lyfte vp hys voyce, and wepte, and sayd to Dauid: thou arte ryghteouser then I, for thou haste rewarded me with good, where as I haue rewarded the wyth euell. And thou haste shewed this daye, how that thou hast dealte louyngly̆e wyth me, for as muche as when the Lorde had locked me in thyne handes, thou kylledst me not. For who shal fynde hys enemye, and let hym departe into a good waye? Wherefore the Lorde rewarde the wyth good for that thou haste done vnto me thys daye. And nowe beholde, I wote well that thou shalte be kynge, and that the kyngedome of Israell shalbe stably shed in thyne hande. Sweare nowe therefore vnto me by the Lorde that thou shalte not destroye my seade after me, and that thou shalte not put my name oute of my fathers house. And Dauid sware vnto Saul, and Saul wente home. But Dauid and hys menne gat them vp vnto an holde.

AND + Samuel died, and all the Israelites gathered together, and lamented hym, & buryed hym in his owne house at Rama. And Dauid arose, and gat hym to the wildernelle of Pharā. And there was a man in Maon whose possessiō was in Carmel, & the mā was exceadynge mighty, and had three thousande shepe & a thousāde goates. And he was shearynge hys shepe in Carmel. The name of the man was Nabal, and the name of his wife was Abigail, & she was a woman of a synguler wysedome, and bewtyful. But the man was churlysh, and of shrewde condicions, and was of the kynred of Caleb. And Dauid hearde in the wyldernelle, that Nabal dyd shere hys shepe. And Dauid sente out ten yonge mē, and sayde vnto them: get you vp to Carmell, and go to Nabal, & greete hym in my name. And thus shal ye say: peace be to the, peace be to thyne house, and peace be vnto all that thou haste. Beholde, I haue hearde saye that thou haste shearers. Now thy shepherdes were wyth vs in the wyldernelle, and we dyd them no spyte neither was there ought (of the flocke) myssynge vnto them, all the whyle they were in Carmel: aske thy laddes, and they wyll shewe the. Wherefore let these younge men fynde fauoure in thyne eyes (for we come in a good season) and + geue I praye the whatsoeuer commeth to thyne hande, vnto thy seruauntes, and to thy sonne Dauid. And whan Dauids younge men came, they tolde Nabal all those wordes in the name of Dauid, and then helde they̆r peace. And Nabal answered Dauids seruauntes, and sayd: what is Dauid? and what is the sonne of Isai? there is plentye of seruauntes now a dayes, that breake away euery mā frō his master. Shal I thē take my breade, my water and my flesh, that I haue kylled for my shearers, and geue it vnto mē whō I wote not whēce they be? And so Dauids seruauntes turned their way, and wente againe, and came and tolde hym all those sayinges. And Dauid sayde vnto hys men: gyrde euery man hys swearde about hym. And they girdet euery man hys sweard about him, & Dauid was girded with his swearde. And there folowed Dauid vpon a foure hundred men, and two hundred abode by the stuffe. But one of the laddes tolde Abigail Nabals wyfe, sayinge: Beholde, Dauid sente messengers vnto oure master out of the wildernelle to salute him, and he rayled on thē. And yet the men are verye good vnto vs, and dyd vs no displeasure, neither myssed we anye thynge, as longe as we were conuersante with thē, when we were in the feldes. They were a wal of defence vnto vs bothe by nyght and daye, all the whyle we were with them keppynge shepe. Now then fore take hede, & se, what thou hast to do, for there is an occasyon of euell geuen agaynste oure master and all hys household, seynge he is as a sonne of Belial vngracious to speake to. Thē Abigail made hast, and toke two hūdred loaues, and two bottelles of wyne, and fyue shepe readye dressed, and fyue measures of parched corne, and

and an hundred kraples of kraplynges, and two hundred topnottes of kygges, and laded them on asses, and sayde vnto her younge men, goe ye before me. Beholde, I come after you. But she tolde her husbande Nabal nothynge therof. And as she rode on her asse, she came prinicipe downe the hyde of the hyll, and beholde, Dauid and his men came downe agaynst her, and she met them. And Dauid sayde: in vayne haue I kept all that this felowe hath in the wyldernesse, so that nought was myssed of all that pertayned vnto hym. And he hathe quite me euell for good. So and so do God vnto the enemyes of Dauid, yf I leaue of al that pertayne to hym, by the dawninge of the day, any thynge that pysseth against the walle. And when Abigail sawe Dauid, she hasted and lighted of her asse, and fell before Dauid on her face, and bowed her selfe to the grounde, and fell at his fete, and sayde: Let this vnhappye dede be counted mine, my Lorde, and let thyne handmayde speake in thyne audience, and heare the woordes of thine handemayde. Let not my lorde (the kynge) regarde thys vnthryftye mā Nabal: for as his name is, so is he: Naball is his name, and folly is wyth hym. But I thyne handemayde sawe not the younge men of my Lorde whome thou sentest. Nowe therefore my Lorde, as sure as the Lorde liueth, and as thy soule liueth, the Lorde hathe withholden the frome commynge to shede bloud, and withdrawen thyne hand frome bloude shede. Nowe, I praye God, that thyne enemyes and they that entende to do my lorde euell, maye be as Nabal. And nowe this is the blessynge whiche thyne handmayde hathe broughte vnto my Lorde: And lette it be geuen vnto the youngemen that folowe my Lorde. For geue the trespasse of thyne handmayde, for the Lorde wyll make my lorde a sure house, because my Lorde fyghteth the battayles of the Lorde, and there coulde none euel be founde in the in all thy dayes. And yf anye man ryse to persecute thee, and to seke thy soule, the soule of my Lorde shall be bounde as in a bondell of the lyuinge with the Lorde thy God. And the soules of thyne enemyes shal God cast out, euen as out of the mydle of a synge. And when the Lorde shall haue done to my Lorde all the good that he hath promysed the, and shall haue made the ruler ouer Israell: the shall it be no decaye vnto the, nor discourage of heart vnto my Lorde, that thou hastenor shede bloude causeleslie, nor auenged thy selfe. But when the Lorde shal haue dealt wel with my Lorde, then thynche on thine handmayde. And Dauid sayde to Abigail: blessed be the Lorde God of Israell, whiche sent the this daye to mete me: Blessed is thy saying, and blessed art thou, which hast kept me this daye from comming to shede bloude, and from auengeing my selfe with myne owne hand. For in very dede, as sure as the Lorde God of Israel lyueth, whiche hath kept me backe from hurtyng the, except thou haddest hasted & mette me, thynke thou there had bene lefte vnto Nabal by the dawnynge of the daye, a pysser agaynst the wall. And so Dauid receaued of her hande, that whiche she had brought him and sayde to her: Goe vp in peace to thyne house. Beholde, I haue hearde thy voyce, and haue accepted thy persone. And Abigail came to Nabal: And beholde, he helde a feast in hys house, lyke the feast of a kynge, and Nabals heart was merye within hym, for he was verye dronchen. Wherfore she tolde him nothynge, neather lesse nor more, but vntyl the morowe day. But in the morninge when the wyne was gone oute of Nabail, his wyfe tolde hym those woordes, and his hearte died within hym, and he became as a stone. And vpon a ten dayes after, the Lorde smote Naball, that he dyed. And when Dauid heard e that Naball was deade, he sayde: Blessed be the Lorde that hath iudged the cause of my rebuke of the hande of Nabal, and hath kept his seruaunt from euel, and hath recompensed the wyckednesse of Naball, vpon hys owne head. And Dauid sent to comen with Abigail: to thintēt to take her to hys wife. And when the seruaunnes of Dauid were come to Abigail to Carmel, they spake vnto her, saying: Dauid sent vs vnto the, to take the to hys wyfe. And she arose, and bowed her selfe on her face to the earthe, and sayd: Beholde, let thyne handmayd be a seruaunte to washe the fete of the seruauntes of my Lorde. And Abigail hasted, and arose, and gat her vp vpon an Asse, with fiue damselles of hers that wente at her fete, and she went after the messengers of Dauid, and became his wife. Dauid also tooke Ahinoam of Jezrahel, & they were both his wiues. But Saul gaue Michol his doughter Dauids wife to Phalti, the sonne of Lais whiche was of Gallim.

¶ The. xxvi. Chapter.

A THe Ziphites came vnto Saul, to Gibea, saynge. Doth not Dauid hyd hi selfe in the hyl of Hachilla, whiche is before Jesymon? Saul arose, and wente downe to the wyldernesse of Ziph, hauinge thre thousande chosen men of Israel with him for to seke Dauid in the wyldernes of Ziph. And Saul pitched in the hil of Hachilla, whiche lyeth before Jesimon, by the way fore. But Dauid dwelt in the wil-dernesse. And he saw that Saul came after him into the wildernesse. Dauid therefore sent out spyes, and vnderstode, that Saul was come in deep dede. And Dauid arose, and came to the place where Saul had pit ched, and Dauid beheld the place, where Saul laye, and Abner the sonne of Ner, whiche was his chiefe captayne, Saul lay within, & the people and the hoste rounde aboute him. Then answered Dauid, and spake to Ahimelech the Hethite, & to Abi-sai the sone of Zaruia, & brother to Joab, sayinge: who wyll go downe wyth me to Saule to the hooste? And Abisai sayde: I wyl go downe with the. And so Dauid, & Abisai came down to the people by night.

And behold, Saul laye slepyng within the host, & his speare stack in the ground at hys head. But Abner & the people laye rounde aboute him. Then sayde Abisai to Dauid: God hathe delyuered thyne enemye into thyne hāde this day. Now therfore, let me smite him once with my speare to the erth, and I wil not smyte him the seconde time.
And Dauid said to Abisai: destroye hym not. For who can laye his hād on the Lor-des anoynted, and be giltelesse? And Dauid sayde furthermore: as sure as the Lord lyueth, the Lorde shal smyte him, or his day shall come to dye, or he shall descende into battell, and there periche. The Lorde kepe me frō laying myne hand vpon the Lordes announted: But take thou nowe the speare that is at his heade, & the crewse of water, & let vs go. And so Dauid toke the speare & the crewse of water from Sauls heade, and they gat them away, and noman sawe it, or marked it, or awaked. For they were al a slepe, because the Lord had sent a vaste slepe vpon thē. Then Dauid went ouer to the other syde, and stode on the toppe of an hyl afarre of (a great space beyng betwene them) and Dauid cried vnto the people, & to Abner the sone of Ner, sayinge: Hearest thou not Abner? Abner answered, & sayd: What art thou that cryest to the kynge? and Dauid sayde to Abner: arte not thou a mā: and who is lyke the in Israell? Wherefore then hast thou not kept thy Lorde the kyng? For there came one of the folcke in, to destroye the kynge thy Lorde. It is not good that thou haste done. As truely as the Lorde lyueth, * ye are worthye to dye, because ye haue not kepte youre mayster, the Lordes annoynted. And nowe se where the kynges speare is, and the crewse of water that was at hys heade. And Saule knewe Dauids voyce, & sayd: * is this thy voyce my sonne Dauid? and Dauid sayde: it is my voyce, my Lorde, O kyng. And he sayde: wherefore doeth my Lorde thus persecute his seruaūt? for what haue I done? or what euel is in myne hande? Now therefore let my Lord the kyng heare the wor-des of his seruaunt. If the Lord haue sterred the vp agaynst me, let him smel the sauoure of a sacrifyce. But & yf they be the chyldren of men, cursed are they before the Lord. For they haue caste me out this day from abidynge in the enheritaunce of the Lorde, sayinge: hence, and go serue other goddes. Nowe therfore let not my blonde fall to the earth before the face of the Lord.
For the kynge of Israell is come oute to hunt a flee, as when one doeth hūte a par-trege in the moūtaynes. Then said Saul: I haue synned, come agayne my sonne Da-uid, for I wyll do the no more harme, because my soule was precyous in thine eies thys daye. Beholde, I haue played the fole, & haue erred exceadyngly. And Dauid answered and sayde: Beholde, the kynges speare, let one of the yonge men come ouer and fet it. The Lorde rewarde euery man accordynge to hys righteousnesse & fayth:

And they brought the head of Isboseth vnto Dauid, to Hebrõ. and sayde to the king: beholde, there is the heade of Isboseth Sauls sonne, thyne enemy whych sought after thy lyfe. And the Lorde hath auenged my lorde the kynge this daye of Saul and

And in Jerusalem he reygned thirtye and thre yeres ouer all Israell and Juda.
The kyng also and his men went to Jerusalē, vnto the Jebusites, the enhabiters of the lād. Which spake vnto Dauid, saying: excepte thou take awaye the blynde and B

¶ The. vi. Chapter.

A Gayne: Dauid gathered together all the chosen men of Israel, eũ thirtye thousande, and arose & wẽt with all the folke that were with hym of the men of Juda to fet awaye from thence the Arke of God: whose name is called the name of the LORDE of hostes that dwelleth vpon it, betwene the cherubyns. And they put the Arke of God vpon a newe carte, & brought it oute * of the house of Abinadab that was at Gibea. And Oza and Ahio the sonnes of Aminadab dzaue the newe carte, and when they brought it oute of the house of Abinadab that was at Gibea, wyth the Arke of God, Ahio wente before the Arke. And Dauid and all the house of Israell played before the Lorde in sondrye instrumẽtes made of Cedre wod, with harpes, psalteries, timbzelles, fedelips, and Simbals. And when they came to Nachons threshynge floure, Oza put his hãde to the Arke of God, and helde it, for the oxen stombled. And the Lorde was wroth with Oza, and God smote hym in the same place for his faulte, and there he died before the Arke of God. And Dauid was displeased, because the Lorde had smytten Oza. And the name of the place was called Perez. The renting of Oza, vntyll this daye. And Dauid was then afrayed of the Lorde and sayde: howe shall the Arke of the Lorde come to me? and so Dauid would not bringe the Arke of the Lorde vnto hym into the cytye of Dauid. But Dauid caryed it into the house of Obeth Edom a Gethite. And the Arke of the Lorde contynued in the house of + Obeth Edom the Gethite, thre monethes, and the LORDE blessed Obeth Edom, and al hys housholde. And one tolde kynge Dauid howe that the Lorde had blessed the house of Obeth Edom, and all that partayned vnto hym, because of the Arke of God. And Dauid wente & brought the Arke of God from the house of Obeth Edom, into the cytye of Dauid with gladnes. [And there was with Dauid seuen sortes of daunsers, & calues for sacrifice.] And when they that bare the Arke of the Lorde, had gone fyue spaces, he offered an ox, and a fat shepe. And Dauid [played on harpe strynges, &] daunsed before the lord with al his might, and was gyrded wyth a lynnen Ephod. So Dauid and all the house of Israell brought the Arke [of the couenaunte] of the Lorde, wyth showeynge and trompet blowynge. And it fortuned, that as the Arke of the Lorde came into the cytye of Dauid, Michol Sauls doughter loked thorowe a wyndowe and sawe kynge Dauid spryngе, & daunse before the Lorde, and she despysed hym in her hearte. And when they brought in the Arke of the lorde, they set it in his place, euen in the myddes of the tabernacle that Dauid had pyched for it. And Dauid offred burnte offerynges and peace offerynges before the Lorde. And as soone as Dauid had made an ende of offrynge burnteofferinges and peace offeringes, he blessed the people in the name of the Lorde of hostes, and gaue amonge all the folke, euẽ amonge the whole multitude of Israel, as well to the wemen as men, to euerye one a Take of breade, and a pece of flesshe, and a flacket of dzynke. And so all the people departed euery one to his house. Then Dauid returned to blesse hys housholde, and Michol the doughter of Saul came out to mete Dauid, & sayde: O howe glorious was the kynge of Israel this day which was vncouered to day in the eyes of the maidens of his seruaunres, as yf it had bene a lyghte brayned felowe vncouered? and Dauid sayde vnto Michol: I thoughte to daunce before the Lorde, whiche chose me rather then thy father, & al hys kynne, and commaũded me to be ruler ouer all the people of the Lorde, euen ouer Israell. And therfore wyll I playe before the Lord. And wyll yet be more vyle then so, and wyll be meke in myne owne sight: and of the selfe same mayde seruauntes, whiche thou haste spoken of, shall I be had in honoure. Therfore Michol the doughter of Saul had no chylde, vnto the daye of her deathe.

And Nathan sayde vnto the kynge: Goe, and doe all that is in thyne hearte, foꝛ the Lorde is with thee. And it foꝛtuned the same nyghte, that the woorde of the Lorde, came vnto Nathan saying: Go, and tell my seruaunte Dauid, thus sayeth the Lorde: Shalte thou buylde me an house to dwel in? Foꝛ I haue not dwelte in anye house, sence the tyme that I brought the chyldren of Israell oute of Egypte, vnto this day: but haue walked in a tēt & tabernacle. Then went Dauid in, and set hym downe beforе the Lorde, and sayd: what am I. O Lorde God: and what is my house? that thou shouldest haue brought me thus farre foꝛth? And thys was yet a smale thynge in thy syghte, O Lorde God, but thou hast spoken also of thy seruaūtes house foꝛ a great whyle to come. Foꝛ thys is the vse of man, O Lorde God. And he bowed hym selfe, and sayde: what is thy seruaunte, that thou shouldest wete safe to looke vpon suche a deade dogge as I am? And Dauid sēte to cōforte him by the hād of his seruaūtes ouer (the deathe of) his father. And Dauids seruaūtes came into the lāde of the childrē of Ammon, and the lordes of the childrē of Ammon sayde vnto Hanon theyr Lorde: thynkest thou that Dauid doeth honoure thy father, that he hathe sent comfortours to the? hathe not Dauid rather sente hys seruauntes vnto thee, to searche the cytye, and to spye it out, and to ouerthowe it? Wherefore, Hanon toke Dauids seruauntes: and shaued of the one halfe of euerye mannes beарde, and cut of their garmētes in the myddle, euen harde to the bottokes of them, and sente them awaye. When they tolde it vnto Dauid, he sente to mete them (for they were men exceedyngelye ashamed) and the kynge sayde: taryе at Jericho vntyl youre beardes be growen, and then retourne. And when the chyldren of Ammon sawe that they stacke in the syght of Dauid, they sente and hyred the Syrians of the house of Rehob, and the Syrians of Zoba. xx. thousande fote men, and of kynge Maacha a thousande men, and of Istob twelue thousande men. And when Dauid heарde of it, he sente Joab and all the hooste of stronge men. And the chyldren of Ammon came out, and waged battell at the entring in of the gate, and the Syrians of Zobah, of Rehob, Istob, and Maachah, were by them selues in the felde. When Joab sawe that the fronte of the battell was agaynste hym, before and after, he chose of all the freeh yonge men of Israell, and put them in araye agaynste the Syrians. And the reste of the people he delyuered into the hande of Abisai his brother, that he myghte put them in aray agaynste the chyldren of Ammon. And he sayde: yf the Syrians be stronger then I, thou shalt helpe me. But if the childrē of Ammō be to stronge for the, I will come and soccoure the. Therfore quite the lyke a man, and let vs stande styf for our people, and for the cities of our God. And the Lorde do that which is good in his owne eyes. And Joab proceded forth, and the people that was with him, to fyght with the Syrias. But they fledde before hym. And when the chyldren of Ammon sawe that the Syrias were fled, then fled they also before Abisai and entred into the citie. And so Joab retourned from the children of Ammon, and came to Jerusalem. And when the Syrias sawe that they were put to the worse before Israel, they gathered thē to gether And Hadarezer sent, and brought out the Syrians that were beyonde the ryuer. And they came with theyr army, and Sobah the Captayne of the hoost of Hadarezer went before them. And when it was shewed Dauyd, he gathered all Israel together, and passed ouer Jordan, and came to Helam: And the Syrians sette them selues in araye against Dauid, and fought with him, and the Syrians fled before Israel. And Dauid destroyed seuen hundred charetes of the Syrians, and fortye thousande horsmen, and smote Sobah the captayne of their hoostе, whyche also dyed there. And when all the kynges (that were seruauntes to Hadarezer) sawe that they were putte to the worse before Israell, they made peace with them, and serued them. And so the Syrians feared to helpe the children of Ammon any more.

The. xi. Chapter.

AND it came to passe that (after the yeare was expired) in the tyme whē kinges vse to go forth to batel, Dauid sente Joab and his seruauntes with him, and all Israell, whyche * destroyed the chyldren of Ammon, and beleged Raba. But Dauid taryed styll at Jerusalem. And it chaunced in an euenynge that Dauid arose oute of hys bedde, and walked vpon the rouфe of the kynges palace, and frome the rouфe he sawe a woman * washynge her selfe: And the woman was very bewtyfull to looke vpon. And he sent to enquire what woman it shoulde be, sayinge: is it not Bethsabe the doughter of Eliam, and wife to Urias the Hethite? And Dauid sent messengers, and fette her. And she came in vnto hym * and he laye with her. And (immediatlye) she was purified from her vncleannesse, and retourned vnto her house. And the woman cōceaued, and sent, and tolde Dauid, and sayde: I am with childe. And Dauid sente to Joab, sayinge: Sende me Urias the Hethite. And Joab sente Urias to Dauid. And when Urias was come vnto hym. Dauid demaunded of hym: howe Joab dyd, and howe the people fared, and howe the men of warre prospered. And Dauid sayde to Urias, goe downe to thyne house, & washe thy fete. And Urias departed oute of the kynges palace, and there folowed him a seruyce frome the kynges table. But Urias slepte at the dooze of the kynges palace, with all the seruauntes of hys Lorde, and went not downe to his house. Which when they had told Dauid, saying: (Urias went not downe into hys house.) Dauid sayde vnto Urias: Camest thou not frome thy iorney? Why dyddest thou not goe downe then vnto thyne house? Urias answered Dauid. The arcke and Israell and Juda dwell in pauylyons: and my Lorde Joab and the seruauntes of my Lorde lye vpon the flat earth: & shall I then goe into myne house, to eate, and drynke, and lye wyth my wife? * By thy lyfe, and by the lyfe of thy soule, I will not do thys tryng, And

Dauid sayde vnto Vrias: * tarye here thys daye also, and to morowe I wyll lette the departe. And so Vrias abode in Jerusalem that daye, and the morowe. And when Dauid had called hym, he dyd eate and droncke before him, and he made hym dronke. And at euen he went oute to lye on hys couche wyth the seruauntes of hys lorde, but wente not downe to hys house. On the morowe Dauid wrote a letter to Joab, and sente it by the hande of Vrias. And he wrote thus in the letter, sayinge: put Vrias in the forefronte of the sharper battel, and come ye backe frō him, that he maye be smytten and dye. So whan Joab beseged the cytie, he assygned Vrias vnto a place, where he wyste that stronge men were. And the men of the cytie came oute, and foughte wyth Joab. And there were certayne ouerthrowen of the people, and of the seruauntes of Dauid, and Vrias the Hethite dyed also. Then Joab sente, & tolde Dauid all the thynges concernyng the warre, and charged the messenger, sayinge: when thou haste made an ende of tellynge the matters of the warre vnto the kynge: yf he begynne to fume, and saye vnto thee, wherefore approched ye so nye vnto the cytie: whā ye dyd fyght, wyst ye not that they would hurle and shote frō the wall? Who smote Abimelech, sonne of Jereboseth? * dyd not a woman caste a pece of a mylstone vpon hym from of the wal, and he dyed in Thebes? why went ye nye the wall? then saye thou, thy seruaūte Vrias the Hethite is deade also. So the messenger wente, and came, and shewed Dauid all that Joab hadde sente hym for: and the messaunger sayde vnto Dauid: the men preuayled agaynste vs, and came oute vnto vs into the felde, and we (wyth violence) stacke vnto theym, euen vnto the enterynge of the gate. And the shoters shotte from the walles vpon thy seruauntes, and some of the kynges seruauntes be dead. And thy seruaunt Vrias the Hethite is dead also. And Dauid sayde vnto the messenger, thus shalt thou say vnto Joab, lette not that thynge trouble thee. For (the chaunce of warre is dyuerse, and) the swearde deuoureth one as well as another, make thy batrell moze stronge agaynste the cytie to ouerthrowe it, and se that thou courage Joab. And when the wyfe of Vrias hearde that her husbande was dead, she mourned for him. And whan the mournynge was past, Dauid sente and fet her to hys house, and she became hys wife, and bare him a sonne. But this thynge that Dauid dyd, displeased the Lorde.

¶ The.xii. Chapter.

And the Lorde sent Nathā vnto Dauid. And he came vnto him, & tolde him, there were two mē in one city, the one ryche, & the other poze: The ryche mā had exceadyng many shepe & oxē. But the poze had nothyng saue one lytle shepe, which he had bought & nozisshed vp. And it grewe vp with him, & with his childrē also & dyd eate of his owne meate, & dranke of his owne cuppe: and slepte in hys bosome: & was vnto hi as his doughter. And there came a straunger vnto the riche man. And he coulde not fynde in his herte to take of hys owne shepe, and of his owne oxen, to dresse for the straūger that was come vnto him. But toke the poze mannes shepe, and dressedit for the mā that was come to him. And Dauid was exceadynge wzothe with the mā, & said to Nathan: as surely as the Lorde lyueth, the man that hath done this thinge, * is the chylde of deathe. He shall restoze the lambe: fourefolde, because he dyd this thing, & had no pitye. And Nathā sayde to Dauid: thou arte the man. Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Jsrael, * I anoynted the kyng ouer Jsrael, and ridde the out of the hande of Saule, I gaue thee thy masters house, & thy maysters wyues into thy bosome, and gaue thee the house of Jsraell and of Juda, & might (yf that hadde bene to lytle) haue geuen the so much moze. Wherfore thē hast thou despised the commaundement of the Lorde to do wyckednesse in his syght? thou hast kylled Vrias the Hethite with the swerd, & hast takē his wife to thy wyfe, & hast slayne hym wyth the swearde of the childrē of Ammō. Now therfore, the swearde shal neuer depart frō thyne house, because thou haste despysed me, & takē the wife of Vrias the Hethite, to be thy wyfe. Wherfore thus sayeth the Lorde: beholde, I wyll sterre vp euel agaynst the: euen out of thyne owne house, and wyll * take thy wyues before thyne eyes, and geue theim vnto thy neyghboure, and he shall lye with thy wyues in the syght of the sunne. For thou dydest it secretlye. But I wyll do this thynge before all Jsracil, and in the open sunne lyghte. And Dauid sayde vnto Nathan, * I haue synned agaynste the Lorde. And Nathan sayde vnto Dauid: the Lorde also hathe put awaye thy synne, thou shalte not dye. Howbeit, because in doynge this dede, thou haste geuen the enemyes of the Lorde a cause to rayle, the chylde that is borne vnto thee, shall surelye dye. And Nathan departed vnto hys house. And the Lorde stroke the childe that Vrias wyfe bare vnto Dauid, and it sycknede sooze. Dauid therefore besought God for the childe, and fasted, and went went in, and laye all nyght vpõ the earthe. And the elders of hys houſe aroſe, and wente to hym, to take hym vp from the earthe. But he woulde not, neither dyd he eate meate with them. And it happened the ſeuenth daye, that the chylde dyed.

And the ſeruauntes of Dauid durſte not tell hym, that the chylde was deade. Foꝛ they ſayde: beholde, whyle the chylde was yet alyue, we ſpake vnto hym, and he would not herken vnto oure voyce. Howe wyll he then bexe hym ſelfe, yf we tell hym, that the childe is deade? But Dauid eſpyed hys ſeruauntes wyſperynge, perceaued that the chylde was deade, and Dauid ſayde vnto hys ſeruauntes: is the chylde deade? They ſayde: yea. And Dauid aroſe from the earth: and waſhed and anoynted hym ſelfe, and chaunged hys apparel, and came into the houſe of the Lozde, and woꝛſhyp-ped, and afterward came to his owne houſe and bad that they ſhoulde ſet bꝛeade befoꝛe hym, and he dyd eate. Then ſayde hys ſeruauntes vnto him: what thynge is this, that thou haſte done. Thou dyddeſt faſte and wepe foꝛ the chylde whyle it was a-lyue, and as ſoone as it was deade, thou dyddeſt ryſe vp, and eate meate. He ſayde: whyle the chylde was yet alyue. I faſted and wept. Foꝛ thus I thoughte, who can tell whether God wyll haue mercye on me, Ex.38.a. that the childe maye lyue. * But nowe ſeynge it is deade, wheꝛfoze ſhoulde I faſte? can I bꝛynge hym agayne anye moze? I ſhall go to hym, rather then he ſhall come agayne to me. And Dauid conſoꝛted Bethſabe his wyfe, and wente in vnto her, and lay with her, and ſhe bare a ſonne, and peaceable called his name * Salomõ, and the Lord Math.1.a loued hym. And he ſente by the hande of i.Pa.3.b Nathã the pꝛophete and called hys name * Belo- * Jedidia, of the Lozdes behalfe. Joab ued of the fought agaynſt Raba the citie of the chil-Lozde. dꝛen of Ammon, and toke the cytye of the kyngdome. And Joab ſente meſſengers to Dauid, ſayinge: I haue made aſſaute to Raba, and haue taken the cytye with wa-ters. Nowe theꝛefoze gather the reſte of the people together, and beſyege the cytye, that thou mayeſt take it: leſte I take it, and call it after my name. And Dauid gathered all the people together, and wẽt againſt Raba, i.Pa.xx.b and beſyeged it, and gat it. * And he toke theyr kynges crowne from of hys heade, whiche waped and hundꝛed wayghte of golde, & in it were pꝛecious ſtones. And it was ſete on Dauids heade. And he bꝛought oute the ſpoyle of the cytye in exceadynge greate aboundance. And he caryeth oute the people that was therin, and put them vpon ſawes and vpon yꝛon haꝛowes, and vpon axes of yꝛon, and thruſte them into the tylekell. Thus dyd he vnto all the cy-tyes of the chyldꝛen of Ammon. And ſo Dauid and all the people retourned vnto Jeruſalem.

AFter this it chaunced that Abſalom the ſonne of Dauid had a faire ſiſter, named Thamar, whõ Amnõ the ſõne of Dauid loued. And he was ſo ſoꝛe vexed, that he fell ſycke foꝛ the loue of hys ſyſter Thamar: foꝛ ſhe was a virgi, & he thoughe it harde foꝛ him, to haue his purpoſe of her. But Amnon had a frende, called Jonadab, the ſonne of Simeah Dauids bꝛother, and Jonadab was a very wiſe man. And he ſaid vnto him: how cometh it, that thou beynge the kynges ſonne, art thus conſumed euery daye? Wylte thou not tell me? Ammon anſwered hym: I loue Thamar my bꝛo-ther Abſaloms ſyſter. Jonadab ſayde vnto hym: laye the downe on thy bedde, and make thy ſelfe ſycke. And when thy fa-ther is come to ſe the, ſaye vnto hym: Oh let my ſyſter Thamar come, and gene me meate, and dꝛeſſe it in my ſyghte, that I maye ſe it, and eate it of her hande. And ſo Ammon laye downe, and made hym ſelfe ſycke. And when the kynge was come to ſe hym, Ammon ſayde vnto hym: Oh let Thamar my ſyſter come, and make me a couple of fryttes in my ſyghte, that I maye eate of her hande. Then Dauid ſente home to Thamar, ſayinge: go nowe to thy bꝛother Ammons houſe, and dꝛeſſe hym meate. So Thamar wente to her bꝛother Ammons houſe, and was laied downe. And ſhe toke floure, and made paſte, and dꝛeſſed fryttes in hys ſyghte, and did bake thẽ, & toke a platter and powꝛed them oute befoꝛe hym, but he would not eate. And Ammon ſayde: Haue oute all men frõ me. And they wẽt al out from him. And Ammõ ſaid vnto Thamar: bꝛynge the meate into the cham-bꝛe, that I maye eate of thyne hande. And Thamar toke the fryttes, whiche ſhe had made and bꝛoughte them into the chãbꝛe to Ammon her bꝛother. And whan ſhe had ſet them befoꝛe him to eate, he toke her, & ſaid vnto her, come lye wyth me my ſyſter. And ſhe anſwered hym: naye my bꝛother, do not foꝛce me, foꝛ there hath no ſuch thinge bene done in Jſrael: do not thou this abhomina-cion. Foꝛ whyther ſhall I be able to go with my ſhame. And thou ſhalt be as one of the foles in Jſraell. O ſpeake vnto the kynge, and he ſhall not denye me vnto the.

excedyngly, so that the hate where with he hated her was greater then the loue, with whyche he before loued her. And Ammon sayde vnto her: vp, and get the hence. She answeredhim: thou hast no cause. This euel that thou puttest me awaye is greater then the other that thou dyddest vnto me. Neuertheles he wouldē not heare her, but called his boye that serued hym, and said: put awaye this woman from me, and bolte the doze after her. And she had a kyrtell of dyuerse coloures vpon her, for wyth suche were the kynges doughters (that wer vyrgins) apparelD. Then his seruaūt brought her out, and locked the doze after her. And Thamar toke, and put ashes on her head, & rente her gaye kyrtel that was on her, and layed her hande on her heade, and so wente: and as she wente, cryed. And Absalon her brother sayde vnto her: hathe Ammon thy brother bene with the? Nowe yet be styll my syster: he is thy brother. Let not thys thynge greue thyne heart. And so Thamar remayned desolate in her brother Absaloms house. But whan kyng Dauid hearde of all these thynges, he was verye wrothe.

(And he would not vexe the spirit of Ammō his sonne: for he loued hym, because he was his fyrste bozne.) And Absalom sayde vnto hys brother Ammon nether good nor bad. Howbeit Absalom hated Ammon because he had forced hys syster Thamar. And it happened after two yere, that Absalom had + shepe sheaters in the playne of Hasor besyde the tryde of Ephraim, and bad al the kynges sonnes, and came to the kynge, and said: beholde, thy seruaūte hath shepe sheerers, let the kynge wyth hys seruauntes come to thy seruaunt. The kynge answered Absalom: naye my sonne. We wil not go al, nor be chargeable vnto thee. And Absalom lay sore vpon him: howe beit he woulde not go, but bleſſed hym. Thē said Absalom: yf thou wylte not come, then let my brother Ammon go with vs. And the kynge answered hym: what nedeth it that he go wyth the? But Absalom made suche instaunce that he let Ammon, and all the kynges chyldren go wyth hym. Nowe had Absalom commaunded hys younge men, saying: marke when Ammons heart is merye wyth wyne, and when I bid you smyte Ammon, then kyll him: and feare not, haue not I bydden you? be bolde therfore, and playe the men. And the yonge men of Absalom dyd vnto Ammon euen as Absalom had commaunded. And all the kynges sonnes arose, and euery man gat him vp, vpon hys mule, and fled. And it fortuned, that whyle they were yet in the waye, tydynges came to Dauid saying: Absalom hath slayne all the kynges sonnes, and there is none lefte alyue. Then Dauid arose, and + rare his garmētes, and laye a lōge on the earth, and all his seruauntes stode by with their clothes rente. And Jonadab the sonne of Simeach Dauids brother, aunswered, and sayde: let not my LORDE suppose that they haue slayne all the younge men the kynges sonnes, saue Ammon onely is deade. For that hathe bene determyned in Absaloms mynde, sence he forced hys syster Thamar. Nowe therfore, let not my Lorde the kynge take the thynge so greuously, to thynche that al the kynges sonnes are deade, saue Ammon onely is deade. But Absalō fled. And the younge man that kepte the watche, lyfte vp hys eyes, and loked: And beholde, there came muche people by a waye, a longe by the hynder parte on an hylles syde. And Jonadab sayde vnto the kinge: beholde, the kynges sonnes come: As thy seruaunte sayde, so it is. And as sone as he had lefte speakynge: beholde, the kynges sonnes came, & lyfte vp their voyces, and wepte. The kynge also and all hys seruauntes wepte exceedingely. But Absalom escaped and went to Thalmai the sonne of Amihur kynge of Gesur. And Dauid mourned for hys sonne euerye daye. And so Absalom escaped and wente to Gesur, and was there thre yeares. And kynge Dauid desyred to go forthe vnto Absalom: For where as Ammon was deade, he was comforted ouer hym.

Joab the sonne of Zaruia perceaued, that the kinges heart was towarde Absalom, and he sente to Thekoa, and fet thence a wyse woman, and said vnto her: fayne thy selfe to be a mourner, & put on mournynge apparel. And anoint not thy selfe with oyle. But be as a womā that had lōg time mourned for some deade bodye. And come to the kynge, and speake of thys maner vnto him. And so Joab taught her what she shoulde saye. And when the woman of Thekoa had fallen on her face to the grounde, and done obeysaunce, she sayde vnto the kyng: helpe me O kynge. The kynge sayde vnto her: what ayled the? She answered, I am a wedowe, and myne husbāde is deade. And thy handemayde had two sonnes, and they two foughte together in the felde, (where was no man to go betwene them) but the one smote the other, and slewe him. And beholde, the whole kynred is risen agaynste thy handmayde, and they sayde: * delyuer vs hym, that smote hys brother: that we maye kyll him, for the soule of hys brother whom he slue. We wyll destroye the heyre also. And so they shall quenche my sparkle which is left, that he shall sterre vp (to my husbande) neither name nor yssue vpon the earth. And the kynge sayde vnto the woman: go home to thyne house, I wyll geue a charge for the. And the woman of Thekoa sayde vnto the kynge: My Lorde O kynge, thys trespasse be on me, and on my fathers house, and the kyng and hys seate be gyltlesse. And the kynge sayde: yf any man saye ought vnto the, bring him to me, and he shall hurte the no more. Thē sayde she: let the kyng remembre his Lord God, that the auenger of the bloude gather not on heapes together to destroye, and that they slaye not my sonne. And he answered: as sure as the Lorde lyueth * there shall not one heere of thy sonne fall to the earth. The woman sayde: let thyne handmayde speake one worde more vnto my Lord the kyng. And he he sayd: say on. The woman said: wherfore then hast thou determyned suche a thynge agaynste the people of God? For the kynge doeth speake thys thing as one which is faulty, that he shulde not fette home agayne his banished. For we muste nedes dye, and perisshe as water spylt on the grounde, which cannot be gathered vp againe. Neither doth God spare any soule. Let the kyng therfore fynde the meanes, that his banysshed be not vtterlye expelled from hym. Nowe therfore I am come, to speake of thys thinge vnto the kyng my lord. For they that be of the people, haue feared me. And thy handmaid said: Nowe wyll I speake vnto the kynge, paraduenture the kynge wyll perfourme the request of his handemayde. And the kynge shall heare his handmayde, to delyuer her out of the hād of the mā, that wouldе haue destroyed me, and also my sōne oute of the enheryptaunce of God. And thyne handemayde sayd: the worde of my lorde the kyng shall nowe be comfortable. For my lorde the kynge is as an Aungell of GOD, in hearynge of good and badde: therefore the LORDE thy God be with the. Then the kynge answered, and sayde vnto the woman, hyde not from me (I praye thee) the thynge that I shall aske the: And the woman sayd: let my lord the kyng nowe saye on. And the kynge sayde: Is not the hande of Joab wyth thee in all this matter? The woman answered, and sayde: * as sure as thy soule lyueth my lorde kynge, there is els noman (on the ryght hande nor on the left) but as my lorde the kyng hathe spoken, thy seruaunt Joab he bad me, and he put all these wordes in the mouthe of thyne handemayde. For to the intente that I shoulde alter my communicacyon, hath thy seruaunt Joab done this thynge. And my lorde is wyse, euē as an Aungel of God to vnderstande all thynges that are in the earth. And the kynge sayde vnto Joab, beholde, I am content to do thys thynge. Go and fet home the childe Absalom agayne. And Joab fell to the grounde on hys face, and bowed him selfe, and blessed the kyng. And Joab sayde: nowe thy seruaunt knoweth, that I haue founde grace in thy syght (my lorde O kynge) in that the kyng hath fulfylled the request of hys seruaunt. And so Joab arose, and wente to Gesur, and brought Absalom to Jerusalem. And the kynge sayde: let him turne to hys own house, and not se my face. And so Absalom returned to his owne house, and sawe not the kynges face. But in all Israell there was not so goodlye a man as Absalom, for he was verye bewtyfull: in so muche that from the sole of his foote, to the toppe of hys heade, there was no blemyshe in him. And when he shaued his heade (for at euery yeares ende, he shaued it, because the heere was heaupe on him, and must nedes shaue it) the heere of his heade wayed two hundred sycles after the kynges weyghte. And thys Absalom had thre sonnes borne hym, and one doughter, named Thamar, whyche was a fayre woman to loke vpon. So Absalom dwelte two yeare in Jerusalem, and sawe not the kynges face. Therfore Absalom sente for Joab, to haue sente him to the kynge. But he would not come to hym. And whan he sent agayne, he wold not come. Therfore he sayde vnto his seruauntes: beholde, Joab hath a parcell of lande faste by my place, and hathe barley therein. Go, and sette it on fyre. And Absaloms seruauntes set it on fyre. Then Joabs seruauntes came with their garmētes rēt, and said: Absaloms seruauntes haue burnt the pece of lande with fire. Then Joab arose and came to Absalom vnto his house, and sayde vnto hym, wherefore haue thy seruauntes burnte my felde with fire? And Absalom answered Joab: beholde, I sent for thee, desyryng the to come, because I would haue sente the to the kynge, for to saye: wherefore am I come from Gesur? It hadde bene better for me, to haue bene there styll. Nowe therfore, wouldе I see the kynges face. And yf there be anye tresspasse in me, kyll thou me. And so Joab came to the kynge, and tolde hym: whiche whan he had sent for Absalom, he came to the kyng, and fel to the ground on his face before him. And the kyng kissed Absalom.

After this it fortuned, that Absalom gat him charetes and horsses, and fyfty mē to runne before hi. And he rose

rose vp earlye in the mornynges, and stode in the place of the entrynge in of the gate. And euery man that had anye matter, and came to the kynge for iudgement, hym did Absalon cal vnto him, and sayde: Of what cytie art thou? He answered: Thy seruãt is of one of the trybes of Israell. And Absalõ sayd vnto him: se, thy matter is good and righteous, but there is no mã apoynted of the kynge to heare thee. Absalom sayde moreouer: Oh, that I were made iudge in the lande, that euery man, whiche hathe any plee and matter i the law, might come to me, and that I might doe hym iustyce? And when anye man came nye to him, and dyd hym obeysaunce, he put forth his hãde and toke him to him, and kyssed him. And on this maner dyd Absalom to all Israell that came to the kynge for iudgement, and he stale the heartes of the men of Israell. And after fourtye yeares it fortuned, that Absalom sayde vnto the kynge: let me goe nowe to Hebron, and pay my bowe which I haue bowed vnto the Lorde: for thy seruaunt bowed a * vow (when I was in Gesur in the lande of Syria) sayinge: yf the Lorde shal bring me agayne to Jerusalẽ, I wyl serue the Lord. And the kyng said vnto him: go in peace. And so he arose, and went to Hebron. But Absalõ sent spies thorowe oute all the trybes of Israell, sainge: As soone as ye heare the voyce of the trompet blowe, ye shall saye: Absalom raygneth kynge in Hebron. And with Absalom went two hũdred men out of Jerusalẽ, that were called. And they wẽt with pure heartes, not knowing of any thynge. And Absalom sõte also for Ahithophell the Gilomite Dauids counseller, that he should come out of hys cytye Gilo, while he offred sacrifices. And there was wrought ströger reasõ. For the people went and increased with Absalom in multitude. And there came a messẽger to Dauid, and sayde: the heartes of the men of Israell are tourned after Absalom. And Dauid sayde vnto all his seruauntes: that were with him at Jerusalem: vp, that we may be gone, for we shall not els escape from Absalõ. Make spede to departe: Lest he come sodenly, and catche vs, and bringe some mischiefe vpon vs, and smyte the cyte with the edge of the swearde. And the kynges seruauntes sayd vnto hym: behold, thy seruauntes are readye: to doe what soeuer my Lorde the kyng shal appoynt. And the kynge and al his housholde departed a fote. And he left behynde hym * ten cõcubines, to kepe the house. And so the king & al the people went oute a fote, and taried in a place that was farre of. And all hys seruauntes wente aboute him. And al the Cerethites and all the Phelethites and all the Gethites (myghtie men of warre) (euen vi. hũdred men, which were come a kote frõ Geth) went before the kynge. Then sayde the kinge to * Ithai the Gethite, wherefore comest thou with vs? Returne, and abyde with the kynge, for thou arte a straunger, and art remoued frome thyne owne place. Thou camest but yesterdaye, and shulde I vnquiet the to daye to goe with vs? I wyll go whither I can. Therefore returne thou and cary agayne thy brethren. Mercy and truth shal the lord shew vnto the. And Ithai answered the kynge, and sayd: as truely as God lyueth, and as my Lord the king lyueth, in what place my Lorde the kynge shalbe, whether in death or lyfe, euen there also wyll thy seruaunte be. And Dauid the kynge sayd to Ithai, come then, and go forwarde. And Ithai the Gethite went forth, and all his men, and all the chyldren that were with him. And all the cõtrey wepte with a loude voyce, and so did al the people that wente forth. The kynge also him selfe passed ouer the broke Kydron. And all the people wente towarde the waye that leadeth to the wyldernesse. And Sadocke and all the Leuites were with him, and bare the arcke of the appoyntment of God. And there they set downe the arcke of God. And Abiathar went vp, vntyll the people were all come ouer, out of the citye. And the kyng sayd vnto Sadock: Cary the arke of God agayne into the citye. If I shall finde fauoure in the eyes of the Lorde, he wyll bryng me agayne, and shewe me both it, & the tabernacle therof. But and yf the Lord thus say: I haue no luste vnto the, beholde, here am I, let hym doe with me, what semeth good in hys eyes. The kynge sayde also vnto Sadock the prieste: Arte not thou a * Seare? Retourne into the citie in peace. And take your two sonnes with you: Ahimaaz thy sonne, and Jonathas the sonne of Abiathar. Beholde, I wyll tarye in the feldes of the wyldernesse, vntyll there come some worde from you to be tolde me. Sadock therefore and Abiathar caryed the Arcke of God agayne to Jerusalem, and they tayed there. And Dauid wente vpon mount Olyuet, and wept as he went, and had hys heade couered, and went bare fote. And all the people that was wyth him, had euery man his heade couered, and as they went vp, they wepte also. And one tolde Dauid, sainge: Ahithophel is one of them that haue conspired with Absalom. And Dauid sayde: O Lorde turne the councell of Ahithophel into foly thnes. When Dauid was come to the toppe of the mount he worshypped God: And beholde,

A And when Dauid was a lytle paste the top of the hyll: behold, Ziba the seruaunte of Miphiboseth came to mete him with a couple of Asses sadled, & vpon the two. C. loaues, & one. C. bonches of Resynges, & an hundred frayles of dryed fygges, & a bottel of wyne. And the kynge sayde vnto Ziba: what meanest thou with these? And Ziba sayde: They be asses for the kynges houshold to ride on, & bread, & frute for the ponge men to eate, and wyne: that suche as be fayntе in the wyldernesse, maye drynche. And the kyng sayde: where is thy masters sonne? Ziba answered vnto the kynge: beholde, he taryeth styll at Jerusalem. For he sayde: this daye shall the house of Israell restore me the kyngedome of my father. Then sayde the kynge to Ziba: beholde, thyne are all that pertayned

I do homage to thee. I beseche thee that I maye fynde grace in thy syght, my Lorde, Ps.22.d. men of warre were on hys ryghte hande, and on hys lefte. And thus sayde * Semei, whē he cursed, come forthe, come forth thou bloudeschedder, and thou man of Beliall. The Lorde hathe brought vpon the, all the bloude of the house of Saule, in whose stede thou haste raygned, and the Lorde hathe delyuered the kyngdome into the hande of Absalom thy sonne. And beholde, thou arte come to thy myschiefe, because thou arte a bloudschedder. Then sayde Abysai the sonne of Zaruia vnto the kynge: why dothe thys deade dogge curse my Lorde the kynge? let me go nowe, and take of the heade of hym. And the kynge sayde: what haue I to do wyth you ye sonnes of Zaruia: let hym curse: for the Lorde hathe bydden hym curse Dauid. Who dare then saye: Wherefore haste thou done so? And Dauid sayde to Abysai, and to all hys seruauntes: beholde, my sonne whyche came of myne owne bodye, seketh my lyfe. Howe much more then maye thys sonne of 3.kt.2.g Jemini do it? Suffer hym to curse * for the Lorde hathe bydden hym: happely the Lorde wyll loke on my weppynge eyes and wzetchednesse, and do me good for hys cursynge this daye. And as Dauid and his men wente by the waye, Semei wēt alonge on the hylles syde ouer agaynste hym, and cursed as he wente, and threwe stones at him, and caste dust. And the kynge and all that were wyth hym came werye, and refreshed them selues * there. And Absalom and all the people of the men of Israell came to Jerusalem, and Ahitophell was with him. And as soone as Husai the Archite Dauids frēde, was come vnto Absalō, he sayde vnto hym: GOD saue the kynge, God saue the kynge. And Absalom sayde agayne to Husai: is this the kyndnesse thou owest to thy frende? Why wentest thou not with hym? Husai answered vnto Absalom: naye not so, but whome the Lorde and this people and all the men of Israel chose, hys wyl I be, and with him wyl I dwel. Moreouer, vnto whome shall I do seruyce, but vnto his sonne? And as I was a seruaūte before wyth thy father, euen so shall I be with the. Then spake Absalom to Ahithophel: gene councell what is beste for vs to do. And Ahithophel sayde vnto Absalom: get the in vnto thy fathers * concubines, whiche he hathe lefte to kepe the and.16.a arte caste oute of thy father, then shall the handes of al that are with the, be stronge. And so they pitched Absalom a tente vpon the toppe of the house. And he wente in vnto his fathers concubines in the syghte of all Israell. And the councell of Ahithophel, whiche he councelled in those dayes was as a man had asked councell of God: euen so was al the councel of Ahithophel, both with Dauid and with Absalom.

A Ahithophel sayd vnto Absalō: let me chose out now twelue thousād men. C And I wyll vp, & folowe after Dauid this nyght. And I wyl come vpon him, whyle he is wery and weake handed, and wyll feare hym. And all the people that are

gee with hym, ſhall flee. And ſo wyll I ſmyte the kynge onelye, and wyll bryngе agayne all the people vnto thee, euen as eaſelye as yͤ I woulde bryngе anye other thynge. And whan I haue ſlayne the man whom thou ſeeck, all the people ſhal haue reſte. And the ſayinge pleaſed Abſalom well: and all the elders of Iſraell.

B Then ſayde Abſalom, cal alſo Huſai the Arachite, and let vs heare hys councell. When Huſai was come to Abſalom, Abſalō ſpake vnto him, ſayinge: Ahithophel hath geuen ſuch councel: Shall we do after hys ſayinge, or no? tell thou. Huſai anſwered vnto Abſalom, the councell that Ahithophel hathe geuen, is not good at thys tyme. For (ſayde Huſai) thou knowеſt thy father, and his men, howe that they be ſtronge. And they be chafed in their pro.17.B myndes, and are euen as a * Beare robbed of her whelpes in the felde. Thy father is a man alſo practyſed in warre: and maketh no taryinge with the people. Beholde he lurketh nowe in ſome caue, or in ſome other (ſtronge) place. And thoughe ſome of hys men be ouerthrowen at the fyrſt bռt, yet they that heare it, wyll ſaye: The people that folowed Abſalom, be put to the worſe. And the beſt men thou haſte, whoſe heartes are, as the heartes of Lyons, ſhall thynke there at. For all Iſrael knoweth, that thy father is a myghtye man, and they whyche be wyth hym are all men of warre.

Therefore my councell is that all Iſraell C be gathered vnto the, from Dan to Beerſeba, (whyche are as the ſandes of the ſea, in nombre) and that thou go to battayle in thyne owne perſon. For ſo ſhall we come vpon hym in one place or other, where we ſhal fynde hym, and we wyll fall vpon him euen as thycke as the dewe falleth on the grounde. And of all the men that are wyth hym, we ſhal not leaue hym one. Moreouer yf he be gotten into a towne, then ſhall all the men of Iſraell bryngе ropes to that cитye, and we wyll drawe it into the ryuer, vntyll there be not one ſtone founde there. And Abſalom and all the men of Iſraell ſayde: the councel of Huſai the Arachite D is better, then the councell of Ahithophel.
Eſa.19.c * For it was euen the Lordes determynacion to deſtroye the good councell of Ahithophel, that the LORDE myghte bryngе

And thus and thus haue I councelled. Nowe therefore ſende quickelye, and shewe Dauid ſayinge, tarye not all nyghte in the feldes of the wyldernelle, but get the ouer, leſte the kynge be deuoured, and all the people that are wyth him. Nowe Jonathas and Ahimaaz abode by the well Rogell: (for they myghte not be ſene to come into the cytye.) And a wenche went and tolde them. E And they wente, and ſhewed kyng Dauid. Neuertheleſſe, a lad ſawe theym, and tolde it to Abſalom. But they went both of thē away quickelye, and came to a mans houſe in Bahurim, which had a wel in his yard, into the which they wēt downe. And a wo manne tooke and ſpredе a couerlet ouer the welles mouthe, and ſtrawed hymmentye corne thereon. And the thynge was not eſpyed. And when Abſaloms ſeruauntes came to the wyfe, to the houſe, they ſayde: Where is Ahimaaz and Jonathas? The woman anſwered theym: they be gone ouer the lytell broke of water. And when they had ſoughte theym, and coulde not fynde theym, they returned to Jeruſalem. And as ſoone as they were departed, the other came out of the well, and wente and tolde kynge Dauid, and ſayde vnto hym, vp, and get you quickelye ouer the water, for ſuche counſell hathe Ahithophel geuen agaynſt you. Then Dauid arofe, and all the people that weer with him, & they were come ouer Jordan be that it was daye, ſo that there lacked not oneof them, that was not come ouer Jordan. And when Ahithophel ſawe, that his councell was not folowed, he ſadeled his Aſſe, and arofe, and gat F him home to his owne houſe, & to his owne cytye, and put his houſholde in order, and hanged hymſelfe: and dyed: and was buried in the ſepulchre of his father. Thē Dauid came to Mahenaim. And Abſalom paſſed ouer Jordan, he and all the men of Iſrael with him. And Abſalom made Amaſa captaine of the hoſt in ſtede of Joab, which Amaſa was a mannes ſonne named Jethra an Iſraelite, that wente into Abigail the doughter of Nahas, ſyſter to Zeruia Joabs mother. ¶ The.xviii. Chapter.

Anno

AND Dauid nombred the people that were with him, and set captaynes of thousãdes and of hũdredes ouer thẽ. And Dauid sente forthe the thyrde parte of the people vnder the hande of Joab, and another parte vnder the hande of Abisai the sonne of Seruia Joabs brother, and the other thirde part vnder the hãde of Ithai the Gethite. And the kynge sayde vnto the people, I wil go with you also. And the people answered. Thou shalt not go forthe: for yf we flé, oure aduersaries wyl not care for vs: neither shall they regarde vs, thoughe halfe of vs were slayne: but thou art worth ten thousande of vs: Wherefore it is better, that thou succoure vs oute of the city. And the kynge said vnto thẽ: what semeth you best, that wyll I do. And the kynge stode by the gate syde, & all the people came oute by hundredes and by thousandes. And the kynge commaunded Joab and Abisai, and * Ithai saying: intreate the yonge mã Absalom gently for my sake. And all the people hearde, that the kynge gaue al the captaynes charge concernynge Absalom. And so the people wente oute into the felde agaynste Israel, and the battell was in the wod of Ephraim: Where the people of Israel were put to the worse before the seruauntes of Dauid, and there was a greate slaughter that daye, euen of twentye thousande men. For the felde was fought there in dyuerse places, al abrode vpõ the earthe. And the wode deuoured mo people that daye than dyd the sweorde. And Absalom came before the seruauntes of Dauid, rydynge vpon a Mule, whych taried him vnder the thycke bowes of a greate Oke, and his heade was caughte of the Oke. And he was lyfte vp betwene heauẽ and earth: and the Mule that was vnder him, wẽt his waye. And one that sawe it tolde Joab, sayinge: beholde, I saw Absalom hange in an Oke: and Joab sayde vnto the man that tolde hym. If thou dyddest se him, why dydest not thou there smite him to the grounde, and I wouldé haue geuen the ten sycles of syluer, and a gyrdle. The man sayde vnto Joab: thoughe thou wouldest laye a thousande sycles of syluer in my hande, yet would I not stretche out mine hãde against the kynges sonne. For we hearde with oure eares, whẽ the kinge charged the, and Abisai, and Ithai, sayinge: Beware, that none touche the younge man Absalom. Moreouer, yf I had done it, I shoulde haue done agaynste myne owne lyfe: for there is no matter hyd from the kynge: yea, and thou thy selfe wouldest haue bene againste me. Then sayde Joab: I maye not stande thus tarynge wyth the. And he tooke three speares in hys hande, and thruste them thorowe Absalom, whyle he was yet alyue on the bodye of the tree. And ten seruauntes that bare Joabs weapons, turned, and smote Absalom, and slue hym. And when Joab blewe the trompet, the people returned fro folowynge Israel: for Joab spared the people. And they toke Absalom, and caste hym into a greate pyt in the wodde, and layed a wyghtye greate heape of stones vpon hym. And all Israell fled to theyr tentes. And this Absalom yet in hys lyfe tyme * toke counsel, and reared vp a pyller, which is in kynges dale. For he sayde: I haue no sonne. And therfore, to kepe my name in remembraunce do I it. And he called the pyller after hys owne name. And it is called vnto thys daye: Absaloms pyller. 1.rr.15.d

Then sayde Ahimaaz the sonne of Sadocke: let me runne nowe, and beare the kynge tydynges, how that the Lorde hath iudged hym qwyte of the hande of hys enemyes. And Joab sayde vnto him: thou arte no man to beare good tydynges to daye: thou shalte beare tydynges another tyme: but to daye thou shalte beare none, because the kynges sonne is deade. Then sayde Joab to Chusi: go, and tel the kynge, what thou haste sene: And Chusi bowed hym selfe vnto Joab, and ranne. Then sayde Ahimaaz the sonne of Sadocke agayne to Joab: come what come wyll, let me also runne after Chusi. And Joab said: Wherefore wylt thou runne my sonne? seinge that for the tydynges thou shalte haue no reward: well (sayde he) come what wyll, let me runne. Ye sayde vnto hym: runne. Then Ahimaaz ranne by the playne waye, and came before Chusi. And Dauid sat betwene the two gates. And the watchemen wente vp to the roufe ouer the gate vnto the wal, and lyfte vp hys eyes, and sawe: and beholde, there came a man runnynge alone. And the watcheman cryed, and tolde the kynge. And the kynge sayd: yf he be alone, there is good tydinges in hys mouthe. And he came, and drewe nye. And the watchmã sawe another man runnynge, and he called vnto the porter and sayde: beholde, there commeth another man runnynge alone. And the kynge sayde: he is also a tydynges bringer. And the watcheman sayde: me thynketh the runnynge of the formoste is lyke the runnynge of Ahimaaz the sonne of Sadock. The kynge sayde: he is a good man, and commeth with good tydynges. And Ahimaaz called, and sayde vnto the kynge: good tydynges, and he fell downe flat to the earthe vpon hys face before the kynge, and sayde: blessed be the Lorde thy God, whyche hathe shut vp the men that lyfte lyfte vp their handes agaynste my Lorde the kynge. And the kynge sayde: Is the yonge man Absalom safe? Ahimaaz answered: when Joab sente (Chusi) the kynges seruaunte, and me thy seruaunte, I sawe muche a doe. But I wot not what it was. And the kynge sayde vnto hym: turne, and stande here. And he tourned, and stode styll. And beholde, Chusi came also, and sayde: Good tydynges my Lorde the kynge, for the Lorde hathe quite the thys daye out of the hande of all them that rose agaynste the. And the kynge sayde vnto Chusi. Is the yong man Absalom safe? Chusi answered: The enemyes of my Lorde the kynge, and all that ryse agaynste thee, to doe thee hurte, be as that younge man is. And the kynge was moued, and wente vp to a chambre ouer the gate, and wepte. And as he wente, thus he sayde: O my sonne Absalom, my sonne, my sonne Absalom, would God I had dyed for thee: O Absalom, my sonne, my sonne,

¶ The. xix. Chapter.

AND it was tolde Joab: Beholde, the kynge wepeth & mourneth for Absalō. And the victori of that dai was turned into mournig vnto al the people. For the people heard say that day how the kig sorowed for his son. And the people stale away that daye frō goinge into the citie, as people confounded steale away, whā they flee in battel. But the kynge hyd his face, and cryed with a loude voyce. O my sonne Absalom, O Absalom my sonne, my sonne. And Joab came into the house to the king and sayd: thou hast shamed this day the faces of all thy seruauntes, whiche this daye haue saued thy life, and the lyues of thy sonnes and of thy doughters, and the lyues of thy wyues, & of thy concubynes, in that thou louest thyne enemyes, and hatest thy frēdes. For thou haste declared thys daye, that thou regardest neither thy lordes nor seruauntes. And thys daye I do perceyue, that yf Absalom had lyued, and all we had died thys daye, that had pleased thee well. Now therfore vp, & come oute, and speake kindely vnto thy seruaūtes. For I sweare by the Lorde, except thou come out, there wyl not tary one man with thy this night. And that wyl be worse vnto the, thā al the euell that fell on the frome thy youth vnto thys houre. Then the kynge arose, and sat downe in the gate. And they tolde vnto all the people, saying: Beholde, the kyng doth syt in the gate. And al the people came before the kynge. But Israel fled, euery man to hys tente. And it fortuned that all the people were at stryfe thorowe oute all the tribes of Israell, sayinge: the kynge saued vs out of the hande of our enemies, he delyuered vs out of the hand of the Philistines, & now he is fled oute of the lande for Absalom. But Absalom whō we anoynted ouer vs, is dead in battel. Therfore, why are ye so styl, that you bryng not the king again? And kynge Dauid sente Sadock & Abiathar the priestes, sayinge: speake vnto the elders of Juda, and saye: why are ye behynd to bryng the kynge agayne to his house, seinge that suche tydynges is come frō all Israel vnto the kynge, euen to hys house? For the kig had said: (thus shal ye sai vnto the people of Juda.) Ye are my brethrē, my bones and my fleache: wherefore then are ye the laste that brynge the kynge home againe? And say ye to Amasa: art thou not of my bone and of my fleache? God do so and to to me, yf thou be not captayne of the hoost to me for euer in the rowme of Joab. And he bowed the heartes of all the men of Juda, euen as the hearte of one mā: so that they sent this worde to the kynge: Returne thou with al thy seruauntes. So the kynge returned, & came to Jordā. And Juda came to Gilgal, for to goe downe to mete the kyng, & to conuey hym ouer Jordā. And Simei + the sonne of Gera the son of Jemim, which was of Bahurim, hasted, and came with the menne of Juda to mete kynge Dauid & there were a thousande mē of Benjamin with him, and + Ziba the seruaunte of the house of Saul, and hys .xv. sonnes and twentye seruauntes with him. And they wēt quickly ouer Jordan before the kynge. And there went ouer a boat that caryed ouer the kynges houshold & they dyd hym pleasure. And Semei the sonne of Gera fell before the kynge (as he was come ouer Jordan) and sayde vnto him: Let not my lorde impute wickednesse vnto me, nor remembre the thynges that thy seruaunte dyd wyckedly (when my Lord the kyng departed oute of Jerusalem) that the kynge shoulde take it to heart. For thy seruaunt doth know, howe that I haue done amisse. And therfore beholde, I am the fyrst this daye of all the house of Joseph, that am come to goe downe, to mete my Lorde the kynge. But Abisai the sonne of Zeruia answered, and sayde: shall not Semei dye for thys, because he cursed the Lordes anoynted? And Dauid sayde: what matter is betwene you and me, ye sonnes of Zeruia? For thys daye ye be aduersaryes vnto me. Shal there anye man dye thys daye in Israell? doe not I knowe, that I am thys day kynge ouer Israell? And therefore the king sayd vnto Semei: thou shalt not dye, and the kynge sware vnto hym. And Mephiboseth the sonne of Saul came also to mete the kynge, & had neyther washed his fete, nor shauen his beard, nor washed his clothes from the tyme the kynge departed, vntyll he came agayne in peace. And it foztuned that when he was come to Jerusalē, and met the kyng, the kyng sayd vnto hym: wherefoze wentest not thou with me Miphiboseth? He answered: my lozde: O king, my seruaūt deceiued me. For thy seruaunt sayd: I would haue myne Asse sadled to ryde theron, for to go to the kynge, because thy seruaunt is lame. And Ziba hath falsely reported of thy seruaunte vnto my lozde the kynge. And my lozde the kyng is as an angell of God: do therefoze what semeth good in thyne eyes. For all my fathers house were but deade men befoze my lozde the kyng: and yet didest thou put thy seruaunt among thē that dyd eate at thyne owne table. What righte therefoze haue I yet, to crye any moze vnto the kynge? And the kynge sayde vnto hym: Why speakest thou yet in thine owne cause. I is determined, that I haue sayde: thou and Ziba deuide the landes betwene you. And Miphiboseth sayd vnto the kyng: yea, let him take al: for so muche as my lozd the kynge is comeagain in peace vnto his own houle. And Berselai the Gileadite came downe from Roglim, and wēt ouer Jozdan wyth the kyng, to conuey hym ouer Jordan: Berselai was a very aged man, euē foure score yere olde, and prouided the kynge of sustenaunce, whyle he laye at Mahanaim: for he was a man of very great substaūce. And the kynge sayde vnto Berselai: come thou with me, and I will fede the with me in Jerusalē. And *Berselai sayd vnto the king. I am thus olde, and howe am I able to go by wyth the kynge vnto Jerusalem? I am thys daye foure score yeare olde: and canne I deserne betwene good an euyll? Wathe thy seruaunt anye taste in that he eateth or drincketh? Cā he heare any moze the voice of syngynge men and women? Wherefoze then shoulde thy seruaunt be yet a burthē vnto my lozde the kynge? Thy seruaunt wyl go a lytle waye ouer Jozdan with the kyng: and why wyll the kinge recompence it me wyth suche a rewarde? O lette thy seruaunt turne backe agayne, that I may dye in myne owne cytie, and (be buried) in the graue of my father and of my mother. Behold, here is thy seruaunt Thimeam, let him go with my lozde the kyng, and do to him, what shall please the. And the kynge answered: Chimeā shall go with me. And I wyll do to him that thou shalt be cōtent with. And whatsoeuer thou shalte require of me, that same wyl I do for thee. And all the people wente ouer Jozdan. And when the kyng was come ouer Jozdā, he kyssed Berselai, and blessed him, & he went backe agayne vnto his owne place. And then the kyng went to Gilgal, and Chimeam went with him, and so did all the people of Juda, and brought ouer the kynge, and there were but halfe the men of Israell. And beholde, all the men of Israell came to the kynge, and sayde vnto hym: why haue our brethren the men of Juda stolen the away, and haue brought the kynge and his houshoulde, and all Dauids men with him ouer Jozdan? And all the men of Juda answered the men of Israell: the kynge is nere of kynne to vs: wherefoze be ye angry for that matter? eyuhke ye that we eate of the kynges coste, oz that we take vs anye gyftes? And the men of Israell answered the men of Juda, and sayde: we haue ten partes in the kynge, and haue thereto moze ryght to Dauid then ye. Why then dyd ye despyse vs, that our aduise should not be fyrst had, in restoring our king againe? And the wozdes of the men of Juda were fearcer, then the wordes of the men of Israel.

¶ The. xx. Chapter.

Whā there came thyther a certayne man of Belial (named Seba, the son of Bichri, a man of Gemini) he blew a trōpet, & saide: we haue no part in Dauid, nether haue we enheritaunce in the sonne of Isai: let the men of Israell departe vnto their tentes. And so euery māne of Israell wente frome Dauid, and folowed Seba, the sonne of Bichri. But the men of Juda claue faste vnto their kynge, frome Jozdan vnto Jerusalem. And Dauid came to hys house to Jerusalem, * and toke the tenne women his concubines, that he had lefte behinde him to kepe the house, and put thē in warde, and fedde them: but laye no moze with them. And so they were enclosed vnto the daye of theyr death, lyuynge in wyddowhod. Then sayde the kynge to Amasa, call me the men of Juda together againste the thyrde day, and be thou here also. And so Amasa wente to gather the men of Juda together: but tarryed loger thā the time which he had appoynted hym. And Dauid sayd to Abisai: nowe shall Seba the sonne of Bichri do vs moze harme, then did Absalom. Take thou therefoze thy lozdes seruauntes, and folowe after hym: lest he get him walled cyties, and escape vs. And there went out after him Joabs men, and the Crethites, and the Pheletites, and all the mygthiest men. And they departed oute of Jerusalem to folowe after Seba, the sonne of Bichri. And whan they were at the greate stone in Gibeon, Amasa went before them. And Joabs garmente

D And one of Joabs men stode by hym, and sayde: He that beareth anye fauoure to Joab, or good wyll to Dauid, let hym goe after Joab. And Amasa laye walowed in bloude, in the myddes of the waye. And

And they came, and beleged him in Abeland in Bethmaacha. And they caste vp a banche agaynste the cyte that stode i the balley. All the people that was with Joab, thrust at the wall to ouerthrowe it. Then cryed a wyse wo-

They spake in the olde tyme, sayinge: men must aske (peace) ere they fight, howe muche rather shoulde they so do to Abel? For so haue they continued (hytherto): I am one of them, that are peaceable and faythfull in Israell. And thou goest about to destroye a cytye, and a mother in Israell. Why wilt thou deuoure the enheritaunce of the Lord.
And Joab answered, and sayde: God forbid, God forbyd it me, that I shoulde either deuoure or destroye. The matter is not so: but a manne of mount Ephraim (Seba the sonne of Bichri by name) hathe lyfte vp hys hande agaynste the kynge, euen agaynst Dauid. Delyuer vs him only, and I will departe from the cyte. And the

And Joab returned to Jerusalem, vnto the kynge. Joab was ouer all the hoste of Israell. And Banaia the sonne of Jehoiada was ouer the Crethytes and Phelethites. And Aduram was ouer the trybute. And Jehosaphat the sonne of Ahylud was Recorder. Seua was scribe. And Sadoche and Abiathar were the priestes. And Ira the Jairite was Dauids priest.

¶ The. xxi. Chapter.

Then there fell an hongre in the dayes of Dauid, thre yeares together. And Dauid enquired of the Lord, & the Lord answered: it is for Saul, and the house of bloude, bycause he slew the + Gibaonites. 1.Ki.21.f
And the kynge called the Gibaonites, and sayde vnto them: (Nowe the Gibaonites were not of the + chyldren of Israell, but Josua.ix.d a remnaunte of the Amorites, and the children of Israell sware vnto them: And Saul soughte to slay them, for a zele that he had to the chyldren of Israell, and of Juda). Wherfore Dauid sayde vnto them: what shall I doe for you, and wherewith shal I make the attonement that ye maye bleste the inheritaunce of the Lorde? The Gibaonites answered him: We wyll haue no syluer nor golde, of Saul, nor of hys house: neyther is it ouer mynde, that thou shouldest kyll anye man in Israel. He sayd: what say ye then that I shall doe for you? They answered the kynge: the man that consumed vs, and imagined to bryng vs to nought, him wyl we destroye, that nought

And the kynge sayde: I wyll geue them you. But the kynge had compassion on Miphibosheth the sonne of Jonathas the sonne of Saull, bycause of the Lordes othe, that was betwene them: euen betwene Dauid and Jonathas the sonne of Saull. But he tooke the two sonnes of Respa the doughter of Aia (whome she bare vnto Saul) euen Armoni and Miphibosheth, and the fyue sonnes of Michol (the doughter of Saul) whome she bare to Adriell the sonne of Berselai, the Meholathyte. And he delyuered them vnto the handes of the Gibaonites, which hanged them in the hyll before the Lorde.
And they fell all seuen together, and were

C And it was tolde Dauid what Rizpa the daughter of Aia the concubine of Saull had done: And Dauid went, and toke the bones of Saul and of Jonathas hys sonne, from the men of Jabes in Gilead (whyche had stolen them frome the streate of Bethsan, where the Philistines hadde hanged them, when the Philistines had slayne Saul in Gilboa). And he broughte thence the bones of Saull, and the bones of Jonathas his sonne, and they tooke vp the bones of them that were hanged. And the bones of Saul and Jonathas his sonne, buried they in the countreye of Ben Jamin, in Zela, in the sepulchre of Cis his father. And when they had perfourmed all that the kynge cõmaunded, God was then at one with the the lande. It fortuned, that the Philistines had yet warre agayne wyth Israell. And Dauid went downe and hys seruãtes with him, and fought agaynst the Philistines. And Dauid waxed fayntye, and Then the seruauntes of Dauid sware vnto hym, sayenge: Thou shalt goe no more out with vs to battell, that thou quenche not the lyghte of Israell. And yet after this, there was a batell with the Philistines at Nob, and then Sibbechai the Husathite slew Saph whiche was one of the sonnes of the Gyauntes. And there was yet another batell

And was borne also of the kynred of the gyauntes in Geth. And when he defyed Israel, Jonathas the sonne of Simea the brother of Dauid slew hym. These foure gyauntes were borne in Geth, and fell into the hande of Dauid & into the handes of hys seruauntes

¶ The. xxii. Chapter.

AND Dauid spake the wordes of this songe vnto the Lorde, what tyme the Lorde had delyuered hym out of the hande of al his enemies and out of the hande of Saul. And he sayde:

The Lorde is my rocke and my castel, and my deliuerer. God is my strengeth, in hym wil I truste: he is my shilde, & the horne of my saluacion: my worshyp and my refuge: my sauioure, thou shalte saue me frome wronge. * I wyll cal on the Lord, which is psa.18.b prayse worthy, & so shall I be saued frome myne enemyes. For the corruptions of death closed me aboute: the floudes of Beliall put me in feare. The sorowes of hell compassed me aboute: the snares of deathe ouertooke me. In my tribulacion wyll I call vpon the Lorde, and crye to my God. And he shall heare my voyce out of his temple, and me crye shall entre into his eares. The earth trymbled and quaked: the foundacions of heauen moued and shoke, why he was angrye. Smoke wente vp in hys wrath, & consumige fire out of his mouth, cooles were kyndled therof. And he bowed heauen, and came downe, and there was darckenes vnder hys fete. And he sat vpon B Cherub and dyd flie, he was sene caried vp on the wynges of the wynde. He made darckeneg a tabernacle rounde about him, with waters gathered together in thycke cloudes. Thorowe the brightenes of hys presence were the fire coales kyndled. God thundred from heauen, and he that is most hye, doeth put out hys voyce. He shot arowes, and scatered them: he hurled lyghtenynge, and ouerthrewe them. The flowinges of the sea apeared, and the foundacions of the worlde were sene, by the reasō of the rebukynge of the Lorde, and thorowe the blastynge of the breath of his nostrelles. He shall sende from heauen, and fet me, he shall plucke me out of many waters. He shal deliuer me frome my mightye aduersary, and fro myne enemies, for they are to stronge for me. When they had ouertaken me in the daye of my calamytie the Lorde stayed me vp. For he broughte me out into rowmth: he deliuered me, because Rom.2.b he had a lone vnto me. * The Lorde wyll C reward me accordyng to my righteousnes: accordynge to the pureneg of my handes wyll he recompence me. For I haue kepte the wayes of the Lorde, and done no wyckednes agaynste my God. For all hys lawes are in my syghte, and hys statutes wyll not I put awaye fro me. In hys syghte also haue I bene vndefyled, and haue kepte me fro myne owne iniquitie. And the LORD dyd to me agayne accordynge to my righteousnes, euen after my pureneg in his eye

And the poore people that are in aduersytye, thou shalte helpe. And on the proude shalte thou caste thyne eyes. Thou arte my lyghte O Lorde: the Lorde shall lyghte my darcheneſſe. For wyth thy helpe I wyll runne thorowe an hoofte of men, and in my God I wil spring ouer a walle. God is vncorrupte in hys waye: the worde of the Lorde is tryed in the fyre: he is the defender of all them that truſte in hym. For who is a God, ſaue the Lorde? and who is myghtie, ſaue our God? God ſtrēgtheth me with power, and rydderh the waye in battell cleare before me. He maketh my feete lyke hartes feete, and ſetteth me faſt vpon my hye hold. * He teacheth my handes to fyghte, that euen a bowe of ſtele is to weake for myne armes. Thou haſt geuen me the ſhylde of thy ſaluacyon, and with thy louynge mekeneſſe thou doeſt multyply me. Thou ſhalt make me ſpace to walcke in, and my legges ſhall not fayle me. I wyll folowe vpon myne enemyes, and deſtroye them, and turne not agayne vntyll I haue conſumed theym. I wil waſt them and ſmyte theym, ſhat they ſhall not be able to aryſe: yea, they ſhal fal vnder my fete. Thou haſt gyrded me about with might to battell, and them that aroſe agaynſt me, haſte thou ſubdued vnder me. And thou madeſt myne enemyes (and them that hated me) to eourne theyr backes to me, that I myghte deſtroye theym. They lohe for helpe, but there is none to ſaue theym: yea, euen vnto the Lorde do they crye, but he heareth theym not. I wyll beate theym as ſmale as the duſte of the earth: I wyll ſtampe them as the dyrte of the ſtreate, and wyll ſpreade them abrode. Thou ſhalte delyuer me from the dyſſencion of my people: thou ſhalte kepe me to be an heade ouer nacions: the people whyche I knewe not, ſhall ſerue me. Straunge chyldren diſſemble wyth me: At the hearynge of the eare they obey me. Straunge chyldren wyll chrynche awaye, and they ſhall be ſmytten with feare in theyr preup chambre. God is a lyue, and bleſſed be my maker: magnifyed be God, my moſt ſtrong ſaluacyon. It is God that gduengeth me, and brynggeth downe the people vnder me. He delyuereth me fro myne enemyes, thou alſo ſhalte lyfte me vp on hye, from theym that ryſe agaynſte me, thou ſhalte delyuer me from the wycked men. And therfore I wyll prayſe thee (O Lorde) amonge the nacyons, and wyll ſyng vnto thy name.

Whyche sheweth great ſaluacyon for hys kynge, and dealeth mercyfully wyth hys annoynted: euen wyth Dauid, and wyth his ſede for euermore.

These be the laſte layinges of Dauid. Dauid the ſonne of Iſai ſaid: And the man (which was made the annoynted of the God of Jacob, & the noble Pſalmiſt of Iſrael) ſayd: the ſpirit of the Lord ſpake by me, and his worde was in my tonge. The God of Iſrael ſpake of me, euen the moſte myghtie of Iſrael, ſaid: he that beareth rule ouer men, oughte to rule iuſtely in the feare of God. And as the morynge lyghte when the ſunne is vp, a morning in whyche are no cloudes to lette the bright-neſſe, and as the graſſe of the earthe is by the vertue of the rayne: Shall not my houſe be ſo wyth God? * For he hath made with me an euerlaſtynge couenaunt perfect and ſure in all poynres: and this is truly al my healthe, and al my wyſhe, that it growe, but not as graſſe. But the vngodly man of Belial ſhall be as a thorne cleane pluckt vp, which can not be taken with hādes: But the man that ſhal touche them, muſte haue yron, or a longe helue. * Or els muſte they be burnt with fyre in the ſame place. These be the names of the myghtye men whom Dauid had: one that ſat in the ſeate of wyſedome, beynge chiefeſt amonge three, pleſaunt was he and ſtronge: he ſlue eyght hundred at one time. After him was Eliazar the ſonne of Dodi the ſonne of Ahohi, one of the three worthyes with Dauid, which defied the Philiſtines that were there gathered together to battell: whan the men of Iſrael were gone vp. He arose and layed on the Philiſtines vntyll hys hande was weery, & clane vnto the ſweard. And the Lord gaue great victory the ſame day. And the people (whiche had fledde) returned, and went after him to eunne to the ſpoyle. After him was Samma the ſonne of Agge the Hararite: and the Philiſtines gathered together belyde a towne (where was a parcell of lande full of ryce) and the people fledde from the Philiſtines. But he ſtode in the myddes of the grounde, and defended it, and ſlue the Philiſtines. And the Lord gaue great victory. * These three (which wer of the thirty cheefe captaynes) went downe to Dauid in the harueſt tyme vnto the caue of Adullam, & the hoſt of the Philiſtines abode in the baley of Giaunres. And Dauid was then in an holde. And the ſouldiours of the Philiſtines were in Bethlehem. And Dauid longed, and ſayd: Oh, that I had of the water that is in the well well by the gate of Bethlehē, for to drinke. And the three myghtye brake thorowe the host of the Philistines, and fet water oute of the well of Bethlehem that was by the gate, and toke and broughte it to Dauid. Neuertheles he would not drynke therof, but offred it vnto the Lord: and sayde: the Lord forbyd that I should do so. Is not this the bloude of the men that wente in ieoperdy of theyr lyues? and therefore he woulde not drynche it. And these thinges did these three mighty men. * Abisai the brother of Joab, the sonne of Saruiah, was cheefe amonge the three, and he lyft vp his speare agaynste three hundred, and slue them, and had the name amonge the three. For he was nobler man then the three, and was theyr captaine. Howbeit he attayned not vnto (the first) three. And Banaiahu the sonne of Jehoiada (the sonne of a mightye man) valyaunte in actes, of Kabzeel, slue two stronge lyons, euen lyons of Moab. He went downe also, and slue a lion in a pit in tyme of snowe. And he slue an Egiptian a goodly bygge man, whyche had a speare in hys hande. But he went downe to him with a staffe, and plucked the speare out of the Egyptians hande, and slue hym wyth his owne speare. These thynges did Banaiahu the sonne of Jehoiada, and had the name amonge the three worthyes. He was honorable amonge thirty, but the attained not to the (first) three. And Dauid made him of his councell. Asahel the brother of Joab also was one of the thirtie. Then Elhanan the sonne of Dodo of Bethlehem: Samma the Haronite: Elica the Harodite: Helez the Paltite: Ira the sonne of Akes the Thekoite: Abiezer of Anathoth: Meobnai the Husathite: Zelmon an Ahohite: Maharai the Netophatite: Heleb the sonne of Baanah an Netophatite: Ithai the sonne of Kibai out of an hyll of the chyldren of Ben Jamin: Banaiahu the Pharatonite, Hedai of the ryuer of Gaas: Abialbon the Arbathite: Asmaueth a Barhumite: Eliahba a Saalbonite: and the sonnes of Jasē, Jonathas, Samma the Hararite. Ahiam the sonne of Sarar an Hararite. ¶ The.xxiiii. Chapter.

AGayne, the Lord was wroth with Israel, & he moued Dauid against thē, in that he said: * go & nūber Israel and Juda. For the kynge said to Joab the captaine of his hoste: go thou abrode nowe, thorowout all the trybes of Israel, euen from Dan to Beer Seba, and numbre ye the people, that I maye knowe the numbre of thē. And Joab said vnto the kynge: I beseche the lord thy God, to make thy people as many mo as they be: yea, & an hūdred times so many mo, and that the eyes of my Lorde the kynge maye se them. And what is the cause that my Lorde the kynge hathe a lust to this thynge? Notwithstādynge the kynges word prenailed agaynste Joab, and agaynst the captaines of the hoste. And Joab and the captaines of the hoste wente oute from the presence of the kynge, to numbre the people of Israel. And they passed ouer Jordan, and pytched in Aroer on the right syde of the cytie that lyeth in the myddes of the valey of Gad, ouer agaynste Jazer. And then they came to Gilead, and to the nether lande, where was a new habytacion, and from thence they came to Dan Jaan about to Sidon, and came to the stronge holde of Tyre, and to all the cityes of the Heuites and of the Cananites, and then wente out to the South of Juda, euen to Beersebā. And so, when they had bene abroade thorowout all the lande, they returned to Jerusalem agayne, after the ende of nyne monethes and twentye dayes. And Joab deliuered vp the numbre and summe of the people vnto the kynge. And there were in Israell eyghte hundred thousande men of myghte that drewe swerdes. And the men of Juda were fyue hundred thousāde mē. And Dauids hearte smote him, after that he had numbred the people. And Dauid sayde vnto the Lorde: I haue synned exceedingly in that I haue done. And now Lord take awaye the trespace of thy seruaunte, for I haue done verye folyshlye. And whē Dauid was vp in a mornynge, the word of the Lord came vnto the prophet Gad, Dauids seer, sayinge: go and say vnto Dauid, thus sayeth the Lord: I offre the three thinges, chose the whyche of them I shal do vnto the. So Gad came to Dauid, and shewed hym, and sayde vnto hym. Wylt thou haue seuen yeres hunger to come in thy lande, or wilte thou flee. iii. monethes before thyne enemyes, they folowyng the, or that there be three dayes pestilēce in thy lande? Nowe therfore aduise the, and se, what answere I shal gene to him that sent me. And Dauid sayde vnto Gad: I am in extreme trouble, + We wyll fall nowe into the hande of the Lord, for muche is his mercye, & let me not fall into the hande of man. And so the Lorde sent a pestylence in Israell, frome the mornynge vnto the tyme appounted. And there dyed of the people frō Dan to Beersheba, seuentie. M. men. And when the Angel stretched out his hand vp on Jerusalē to destroye it, the Lorde hadde compassion to do that euel, and sayde to the angell that destroyed the people: it is now sufficient: hold thine hande. And the angel of the Lord was by the threshyng place of Arefna the Jebusite. And Dauid spake vnto the Lorde: (when he saw the angell that smote the people) & said: lo, it is I that haue synned, & I that haue done wyckedly. But these shepe, what haue they done? let thyne hande (I praye thee) be agaynst me, and agaynste my fathers house. And Gad came the same daye to Dauid, and sayde vnto hym: go vp and reare an aultare vnto the Lorde in the threshynge flooze of Arefna the Jebusite. And Dauid (accordyng to the sayinge of Gad) went vp, as the Lorde commaunded. And Arefna loked, and sawe the kyng and his seruauntes comming towarde hym. And Arefna wente out, and bowed hym selfe before the kyng, flatte on his face vpō the grounde, and Arefna sayd: wherefore is my Lorde the kynge come to hys seruaunt? Dauid answered: to bye the threshynge flooze of thee, and to make an aultar vnto the Lorde, that the plage may ceasse from the people. And Arefna sayd vnto Dauid: let my Lorde the kynge take and offre what semeth him good in his eyes: Beholde, here be oxen for burnt sacrifice, and sleades, and the other instrumētes of the oxen for woode. All these thynges did Arefna geue vnto the kyng, and sayd moze ouer vnto the king: the Lorde thy God accepte the. And the kyng sayd vnto Arefna: not so, but I wil bie it of the at a price, and will not offre sacrifice vnto the Lorde my God, of that which doth coste me nothyng. And so Dauid bought the threshing flooze, and the oxen for fifte sycles of syluer. And Dauid buylt there an altar vnto the Lord, and offered burnte sacrifices, and peace offrynges. And so the Lorde was entreated for the lande. And the plage ceased frome Israell.

¶ The ende of the seconde booke of Samuel: otherwyse called the seconde boke of the kynges.

¶ The thyrde Booke of the Kynges, after the reckenyng of the Latinistes: whiche thyrde Booke and the fourth also, is but one with the Hebrues.

AND kynge Dauid was olde, and stricken in yeres: & so that whan they couered hi with clothes, he caught no heate: wherfore his seruauntes said vnto him: let there be soughte for my lord the kyng a yong mayden, to stande before the kynge, and to cherysche hym. And let her lye in thy bosome, that my lorde the kynge maye get heate. And so they soughte for a fayre damosell thorowe oute all the coastes of Israell, and founde one Abisag a Sunamite, and broughte her to the kyng. And the damosell was excedyng fayre, and cherysshed the kyng, and ministred to him. But the kynge knew her not. And Adonia the sonne of Hagith exalted hym selfe, saying: I wylbe kyng. And he gat him charrettes and horsemen, and fyftiemen to rūne before him. And his father would not displease hym at any tyme, nor sayd so much to him, as, why doest thou so? And he was a goodly man, and his mother bare hym nexte after Absalom. And he toke counsell at Joab the sonne of Zarui, and at Abiathar the Priestе. And they helped Adonia. But Sadoche the prieste, Banaiahu the sonne of Jehoiada, Nathan the prophete, Semei and Rei, and all the men of myght whyche were wyth Dauid, fauoured not Adonia. And Adonia sacrificed shepe and oxen, and fat catel, by the stone of Zoheleth whiche is fast by the well of Rogel, and called all his brethren, the kynges sonnes, and the men of Juda the kinges seruāntes. But Nathan the prophet, and Banaiahu, and the other myghty men, and Salomon his brother he called not. Wherefore, Nathan spake vnto Bethsabe, the mother of Salomon, sayinge: haste thou not herde how that Adonia the sonne of Hagith doth reigne, & Dauid our lorde knoweth it not? Now therefore come, & I wil geue the cōcel, how to saue thyne owne lyfe, & the life of thy sonne Salomō. Go & get the in vnto kyng Dauid, and say vnto him: dydest not thou (my lord O kig) sweare vnto thy hādmayde, saying? Salomon thy sonne shall reigne after me, & he shal sit vpō my seate: why is thē Adonia kinge? Beholde, while thou yet talkest there with the kyng, I wil come in after the, & confirme thy wordes. And Bethsabe went in vnto the king into the chādze. And the king was very olde, & Abisag the Sunamite ministred vnto the kyng. And Bethsabe stouped, & made obeisaūce vnto the kig. And the kig sayd: what is the matter? She answered hi: my lorde, thou swarest by the Lord thy God to thine handmayd: Salomō thy sonne shal reigne after after me, and he shall syt vpon my seate. And behold, nowe is Adonia king, and my lorde the kynge wotteth not of it. And he hath offered oxen, fat cattel, and many shepe, and hathe called all the sonnes of the kynge, and Abiathar the preest, and Joab the captayne of the host. But Salomō thy seruaunt hathe he not bydden. And nowe my lorde (O kynge) the eyes of all Israell wait on the, that thou shuldest tel thē, who ought to syte on the seate of my lorde the kynge after him. For elles when my lorde the kynge shall slepe with hys fathers, I and my sonne Salomon shall be synners.

And while she yet talcked with the kyng, Nathan the prophete came also. And they tolde the kynge, saying: behold, here commeth Nathan the prophete. And when he was come in to the kynge, he made obeysaunce before the kyng vpō his face on the grounde, and Nathan sayde: My lorde (O kyng) hast thou sayde: Adonia shal reigne after me, and he shall syt vpon my seate? For he is gone downe thys daye, and hath slayne many oxen, and fat sheepe, and hathe called al the kynges sonnes, and the captaynes of the host, and Abiathar the preest. And behold, they eate and drincke before hym, & say: God saue the kyng Adonia. But me thy seruaunte, and Sadock the preest, and Banaiahu the sonne of Jehoiada, and thy seruaunt Salomon hath he not called. Is thys thyng done of my lord the king, and hast not shewed it vnto thy seruaunt, who shuld syt on the seate of my lorde the king after hym? Then kynge Dauid answered, and sayde: cal me Bethsabe. And she came into the kynges presence, and stode before him. And the kyng sware, saying: As truly as the Lord lyueth (that hath ryd my soule out of all aduersitie) euen as I swate vnto the by the Lorde God of Israell, sayinge: Salomon thy sonne shall reygne after me, and he shall syt vppon my seate for me, su wyll I do this day. Thā Bethsabe bowed on her face to the earth, and dyd reuerence vnto the kynge, and said: I pray God that my Lord kyng Dauid may lyue euer. And kynge Dauid sayde: call me Sadocke the preest, and Nathan the prophete, and Banaiahu the sonne of Jehoiada. And they came before the kyng. The kyng also sayd vnto them: take with you the seruauntes of your Lord, and set Salomon my sonne vpon myne owne Mule, and carye hym down to Gihō. And let Sadock the preest, & Nathan the prophet anoynt him there, kyng ouer Israel. And blowe ye wyth trōpettes, and say: God saue kynge Salomō. And then come vp after hym, that he maye come and syt vpon my seate. For he shalbe kynge in my steade. And I wyl cōmaunde him to be captayne ouer Israell and Juda. And Banaiahu the sonne of Jehoiada, answered the kynge, and sayde: Amen. I pray God that the Lorde GOD of my lorde the kynge, say so to. And as GOD hath bene with my lord the kyng, euen so be he with Salomō also, and make hys seate greater, then the seate of my lorde kynge Dauids hath bene. And so Sadock the preest, and Nathan the prophete, and Banaiahu the sonne of Jehoiada, and the Cerethites, and Pheleethites wēt downe, and set Salomon vpō kyng Dauids Mule, and brought him to Gihon. And Sadock the preeste toke an horne of oyle oute of the Tabernacle, and annoynted Salomon. And all they of the people blewe trumpettes, and sayde: God saue kynge Salomon. And all the people came vp after hym, pypyng wyth pipes, & reioysyng greatly, so that the earth range with the sounde of them. And Adonia, and all the gestes that he had called vnto hym, hearde it, euen as they had made an ende of eating. And whē Joab harde the sounde of the trumpet, he sayde: howe happeneth it that there is suche a noyse in the cytie? And as he yet spake: behold, Jonathas the sonne of Abiathar the preeste, came. And Adonia sayde vnto hym: come in, for thou art a valyaunt man, and bringest good tydynges. And Jonathas answered, & sayde to Adonia: Verely our Lorde kyng Dauid hath made Salomon king. And the kynge hath sent with hym, Sadock the Hyreste, and Nathan the Prophete, and Banaiahu the sonne of Jehoiada, and the Cerethites, and the Pheleethites, & they haue set hym vpon the kynges Mule. And Sadock the preest, and Nathan the prophete, haue annoynted him kynge in Gihon. And they came vp againe, and reioysed, that the citie did sounde againe. And that is the noyse, that ye haue hearde. And Salomon sytteth on the seate of the kyngedome. And moreouer the kynges seruauntes came to bleesse oure Lorde kyng Dauid, saying: thy GOD make the name of Salomon more honourable then thy name, and make his seate greater then thy seate. And the kynge bowed hym selfe vpon the bed. And thus sayde the kynge: Blessed be the Lorde God of Israel: whiche hath made one to syte on my seate this daye, myne eye seyng it. And all the gestes that were with Adonia were afrayed, and rose vp, and went euerye man hys waye. And Adonia, fearynge the presence of Salomon, arose, and wente, (into the tabernacle of the Lorde) and caughte holde on the hornes of the altare. And one tolde Salomon, sayinge: behold, Adonia doeth feare kynge Salomon: for he hath Exo.21.b *caught holde on the hornes of the altare, sayinge: let kynge Salomon sweare vnto me thys daye that he wyll not slay his seruaunte wyth the swearde. And Salomon sayde, yf he wylbe a chylde of vertue, there shall not an heere of him fall to the earth.

But and yf wyckednesse be founde in him, he shall dye. And so kynge Salomon sent, and they brought him from the altar. And he came, & dyd obeysaunce vnto kyng Salomon. And Salomon sayde vnto hym: get the to thyne house.

But thou shalt not counte him as vngylti-

Dauid raygned vpon Israel, were fourtye he in Jerusalem. * Then sat Salomon vp- 1.pa.29.f pon the seate of Dauid hys father, and his kyngdome was stablyshed myghtelye.

And Adonia the sonne of Hagith came to Bethsabe the mother of Salomon. And 1.re.16 § she sayde: * Commest thou peaceably? And he sayde, peaceably. He sayde, moreouer: I haue somwhat to say vnto the. She sayde: saye on. And he sayde: thou knowest that the kyngdome was myne, and that all Israel set theyr faces on me, that I shoulde raygne, howbeit, the kyngdome is tourned awaye, and geuen to my brother: for it is appoynted him of the Lorde: and nowe I aske a peticyon of thee: denie me not. And she sayde vnto him: Saye on. And he sayd: speake, I praye thee, vnto Salomon the kynge, for he wyl not saye the nay, that he geue me Abisag the Sunamite to wyfe.
And Bethsabe sayd: well, I wyl speake for thee vnto the kyng. Bethsabe therfore wēt vnto kynge Salomon, to speake vnto him M for Adonia. And the kyng arose vp to mete her, and bowed hym selfe vnto her, and sat hym downe on his seate. And there was a seate set for the kynges mother, and she sat on hys ryghte syde. Then she sayde: I de-syre a lytle petycyon of thee, I praye thee saye me not naye. And the kynge sayde vnto her: Aske on my mother, for I wyll not saye the naye. She sayde: let Abisag the Sunamite be geuen to Adonia thy brother to wife. And kynge Salomon answered and sayde vnto his mother: why doest thou aske Abisag the Sunamite for Adonia? aske for him the kingdome also: for he is myne elder brother, and hath for him Abiathar the Prieste, and Joab the sonne of Saruia. Then kynge Salomon sware by the Lorde, sayinge: God do so, and so to me: if Adonia haue not spoken this word agaynste hys owne lyfe. Nowe therefore, as truely as the Lorde lyueth, which hath ordayned me, and sette me on the seate of Dauid my father, and made me an house, as he promysed, Adonia shal dye thys day. E And kynge Salomon sent by the hande of Banaiahu the sonne of Jehoiada, and he smote him that he dyed. And vnto Abiathar the prieste, sayde the kynge: get thee vnto Anatoth vnto thyne owne feldes: for thou arte worthy of death: but I wyll not at thys time kyll thee, because thou bareste the arcke of the Lorde God before Dauid my father, and because thou haste suffered wyth my father in all hys afflyctions. And so Salomon putte awaye Abiathar frome be synge

beynge prieste vnto the LORD: that he mpghte fulfyll the wozdes of the LORD which he spake ouer the house of Eli in Silo. Then tydynges came also to Joab: foz Joab had turned after Adonia, though he turned not after Absalom. And Joab fled vnto the tabernacle of the Lozde, & caught holde on the hoznes of the aultare. And it was tolde kyng Salomon, how that Joab fled vnto the tabernacle of the Lozde, and stode by the aultare. Then Salomon sente Banaiahu the sonne Jehoiada, sayinge: go and fal vpon him. And Banaiahu came to the Tabernacle of the Lozde, and sayde vnto hym. Thus sayeth the kynge: come out. And he sayde: naye, but I wil dye euen here. And Banaiahu bzoughte the kynge wozde agayne, sayinge: thus sayde Joab, and thus he answered me. And the kyng sayde. Do euen as he hath sayde: smyte him, and burye him, that thou mayest take awaye the bloude whiche Joab shed causeleslye, frome me, and frome the house of my father. And the Lozde shall bzyng hys bloude vpon his owne heade, foz he smote two men ypghtwyser and better then he, and slue them wyth the swearde, my father Dauid not knowynge therof, euen Abner the sonne of Ner, captayne of the hoofte of Israell, and Amasa the sonne of Jether, captayne of the hoost of Juda. Theyr bloud shall therfoze returne vp5 the heade of Joab, and on the heade of hys seede foz euer. But vpon Dauid, and vpon his seed, and vpon hys house, and vppon his seate, shall there be peace foz euer of the Lozde. So Banaiahu, the sonne of Jehoiada wēt vp. and smote hym, and slue hym, and buryed hym in hys owne house in the wyldernes. And the kynge put Banaiahu the sonne of Jehoiada in hys rowme ouer the hoft. and put Sadock the prieft in the rowme of Abiathar. And the kynge sente and called Semei, and sayde vnto hym: buylde the an house in Jerusalem, and dwel there: and se that thou go not fozth thence anye whyther. Foz be thou sure, that the daye that thou goest oute, and passest ouer the ryuer of Cedzon, thou shalt dye that daye, and thy bloude shall be vpon thyne owne heade. And Semei sayde vnto the kynge. Thys is a good thynge: as my lozde the kynge hathe sayde: so wyll hys seruaunt do. And Semei dwelt in Jerusalem many a daye. And it chaunced after thze yeres, that two of the seruauntes of Semei ranne away vnto Achis, sonne of Maacha kyng of Geth. And they tolde Semei, sayinge: beholde, thy seruāntes be in Geth. And Semei stode vp, and sadled hys Asse, and gat hym to Geth to Achis, to sēke hys seruantes, and retourned, & bzoughte his seruantes agayne frome Geth. And it was tolde Salomon, howe that Semei had gone frō Jerusalem to Geth, and was come agayne. And the kynge sent and called Semei, and sayd vnto hym: Wyd not I charge thee by the Lozde with an othe, and testifyed vnto the, saying: Be sure that when soeuer thou goest oute, and walkest abzoade any whether, thou shalte dye the deathe? And thou saydest vnto me: It is good tydynge that I haue hearde. Why then haste thou not kepte the othe of the LORD, and the commaundement that I charged the withall? The kynge sayde moreouer to Semei: * thou remembrest all the wickednes whe the thyne hearte knoweth, that thou dyddest to Dauid my father. The Lozde also shal bzing thy wyckednes vpon thyne owne head: and kyng Salomō shalbe bleste, and the seate of Dauid stablyshed before the Lozde foz euer. So the kyng commaunded Banaiahu the sonne of Jehoiada: which went out, and smote hym that he dyed. And the kyngdome was stablyshed in the hande of Salomon. 2.re.16

¶ The. iii. Chapter.

SAlomon made affinite with Pharao kinge of Egipte, & toke Pharaos doughter, and bzought her into the city of Dauid, vntil he had made an ende of buildig his owne house, & the house of the lozd, and the wal of Jerusalē rounde aboute. Onely the people sacrificed in alters made on hilles, because there was no house buylt vnto the name of the Lozde, vntyll those dayes. And Salomon loued the Lozde, & walcked in the ozdinaūces of Dauid his father, saue onelye that he sacrificed and offered incense vpon aultees in hylles. * And the kynge wente to Gibeon, to offer there: Foz there was a special offring place. And a thousād burnt offrynges dyd Salomon offre vpon that aulter: and in Gibeon the Lozde apeared to Salomon in a dzeame by night. And God sayde: aske what thou wylt, that I maye geue it thee. And Salomon sayde: thou haste shewed vnto thy seruaunt Dauid my father great mercye, when he walked before the in trueth, in righteousnesse, and in playnesse of heart with thee. And thou haste kepte foz hym thys greate mercy, that thou hast geuen him a sonne, to sit on hys seate: As it is come to passe thys daye. * And nowe, O Lozde my God, it is thou that haste made thy seruaunte kynge in steade of Dauid my father. * And I am but younge, and wotte not howe to goe out and in. And thy seruaunt is in the mydest of thy people, whiche thou haste chosen. And verely the people are so manye, that A 2.par.1 B 2.par.1 B Sap.9.a

B hym: Because thou haste asked this thyng, and hast not asked longe lyfe, neither haste asked ryches, nor the soule of thyne enemyes, but hast asked vnderstandynge and discrecion in iudgmente: Beholde, I haue done accordynge to thy peticion. Then came there two women, that were harlottes, vnto the kynge, and stode before hym. And the one woman sayde: Oh my lorde, I & thys woman dwell in one house. And I was delyuered of a chylde with her in the house. And the thyrde daye after that I was delyuered, she was delyuered also: and we were together, and no straunger with vs in the house, saue we two. And this wymes chyld died in the night, for she smothered it. And she rose at mydnighte, & toke my sonne from my syde, while thine handmayde slepte, and layed it in her bosome, & put her deade childe in my bosome. And when I rose vp to gene my chylde sucke, beholde, it was deade. But whan I D had loked vpon it in the morynyng, beholde, it was not my sonne, whiche I dyd beare. The other woman sayde: it is not so: But my sonne lyueth, and thy sonne is deade. And she sayde agayne: No, but thy sonne is deade and my sonne is alyue. And thus they pleated before the kynge. Then sayde the kynge: the one sayeth, this that is alyue is my sonne, and the deade is thyne. And the other sayeth: nay, but thy sonne is the dead, and the lyuynge chylde is myne. And the kynge sayde: brynge me a sweard. And they brought one a swearde before the kynge. And the kynge sayde: Deuyde the lyuynge childe in two, & geue the one halfe to the one, and the other to the other. Then spake the woman, whose the lyuyng childe was, vnto the kynge, for her bowelles yerned vpon her sonne, and sayde: I beseche the my lorde, geue her the lyuynge chylde, and in no wyse sley it. But the other sayde: let it be neither myne nor thyne, but kuyde it. Then the kynge aunswered, and sayde Luc.7.c
* geue her the lyuynge childe, and slaye it not: for she is the mother thereof. And all they of Israell hearde of the iudgemente, whiche the kynge had iudged, and feared the kynge: for they sawe that the wisdome of God was in hym to do iustice.

And there came of all nacions to heare the wysedome of Salomon, and from all kynges of the earth, whiche had heard of his wysdōe. ¶ The. b. Chapter.

AND Hirā kynge of Tyre sente hys seruautes vnto Salomō, for he had heardе, that they had annoynted hym kynge in the rowme of his father. * For Hiram was euer a louer of Dauid. * And Salomon sent to Hiram, sayinge: thou knowest * howe that Dauid my father coulde not buylde an house vnto the name of the Lorde his God, for the warres whiche were about him on euerye syde, vntyl the Lorde put them vnder the soles of hys fete. But nowe the Lorde my God hath geuen me reste on euerye syde, so that there is neither aduersarye, nor anye euyll plage. And beholde, * I am determined to buylo an house vnto the name of the Lorde my God, as the Lorde spake vnto Dauid my father sayinge: thy sonne whom I wyll set vpon thy seate for the, he shall buylde an house vnto my name. Nowe therefore, commaunde thou that they hewe me Cedar trees out of Libanon. And my seruautes shalbe with thyne, and vnto thee wyll I geue the hyre for thy seruauntes, accordinge to all suche thynges as thou shalte appoynte, for thou knowest that there are not among vs, that can skyll to hewe timbre, lyke vnto the Sidones. When Hiram heard the woordes of Salomon, he reioyced greatlye, and sayd. Blessed be the Lorde this daye whiche hath geuen vnto Dauid a wyse sonne, ouer thys myghtye people. And Hiram sente to Salomon, sayinge: I haue considred the thynges whyche thou sentest to me for, and I wyl accomplyth all thydesyre, concernynge tymbre of Cedar trees and firre. My seruautes shall bryng them from Libanon to the sea. And I wyll conuey them by shyppe vnto the place that thou shalt shewe me, and wyll cause them to be discharged there, and thou shalte receaue them. And thou shalte do me a pleasure agayne, if thou minister fode for myne house. And so Hiram gaue Salomon Cedar trees and firre trees accordynge to all his desyre. ¶ The.vi. Chapter.

1 AND it came to passe that in the foure hundred and four skore yeare (after the childzen of Israel were come out of the lande of Egipt) & in the fourth yere 2.Par.3.a of the raygne of Salomō dyd Israel, & i the moneth zipth, whiche is the second moneth, Acte.7.f. he beganne to buylde the house of the Lorde. And the house whiche Salomon buylt for the Lorde, was thre skore cubites long & twenty cubytes broade, & xxx. cubites hye. And he made a porche before John.1.c the bodye of the temple, which was twen- Act.iii.b tye cubites longe, after the breaderth of the and.5.c house, and ten cubites broade, euen in the forefronte of the house. And in the house he made windowes broade without, & narowe within. And in the wall of the house, he made chambers rounde aboute, (euen in the walles of the house) rounde aboute the temple and the quere, and made sydes rounde aboute. The nethermoste chamber 10 was fyue cubytes broade, and the myddle, was sixe cubytes brode, and the thirde was seuen cubytes brode. For without in the walle of the house he layed beames rounde aboute, that the beames of the chambers shoulde not be fastened in the walles of the house. And the house was buylte of stone, made perfect alredy before it was brought thither, so that there was neither hammer nor axe, either any tole of yrō heарde in the house, while it was in buylding. The doze of the middle chambre was in the eyghte syde of the house: And men wente by wyth windyng steares into the middle chambre and out of the middle, into the thirde. And so he buylte the house, and finished it and rouffte it with beames of Cedar tymber.

And then he buylte chambres to all the tāple of fiue cubytes heyghte, and they were ioyned to the house with beames of Cedar. And the woorde of the Lorde came to Salomon, saynge: concernynge the house which thou art in buyldinge, yf thou wilt C walche in myne ordinaunces, and execute my lawes, and kepe all my commaundementes, to walke in thē: then wyll I make 2.Re.7.d. good vnto the, my promes * whiche I pro- 9.Ex.25.b mised Dauid thy father. ‡ And I wyl dwell amonge the childzen of Israell, and wyll not forsake my people Israell. Salomon, therefore buylt the house, and fynished it, and filed the walles of the house wythin with bordes of Cedar tree: euen frome the pauemente of the house vnto the rofte dyd he file the walles of it within wyth Cedar tree, and bozded the flooze of the house with planches of firre. And he filed twētye cubytes in the sydes of the quere of the temple, bothe flooze and walles, with bozdes of Cedar, and dressed it within the secrete place of the tēple, euen in the moste holye. And the fyrste house, that is to saye: the bodye of the tēple without was fourtye cubytes longe. And the Cedar of the house within, was kerued with knoppes & grauen with floures, and all was Cedar tymbre, so that no stone was sene. And the quere that was within the temple, he prepared, to set there the arcke of the appoyntmente of the Lorde. And the quere before, was twentye cubytes longe, and twentye cubytes i breaderth, and twenty cubites in heighte. And he filed it with pure gold, and bozded the aulter with Cedar. And Salomon also syled the house within wyth pure golde. And he made golden barres runne alonge the quere, whiche he hadde couered with golde. And the whole house he ouerlayde with golde, vntyll he had ended it. And the aulter that was in the quere he ouerlayde with golde also. And within the quere he made two * Cherubyns of Olyue Ex.25.b tree, ten cubytes hye. Fyue cubytes longe was a wing of the one Cherub, and fiue cubytes longe was a wing of the other Cherub: so that frome the vttermoste parte of one wynge, vnto the vttermoste parte of the other, were ten Cubites. And the other Cherub was ten cubytes hye also: so that both the Cherubs were of one measure, and one fasshe. For the heyghte of the one Cherub was ten cubytes, and so was it of the other. And he put the Cherubs within the Ex.25.b inner house. * And the Cherubs stretched w oute their winges, so that the one wynge of the one touched the one walle, and the one wynge of the other touched the other walle. And the other two wynges of them touched one another in the mydres of the house. And he ouerlayde the Cherubs with golde. And in all the walles of the house rounde aboute, he made figures of carued and filed worke: as namelye, pictures of Cherubs and paulme trees and grauen floozes, both within, in the quere, and without in the temple. And the flowze of the house he couered with golde, bothe within in the quere, and also wythoute in the temple. And in the entrynge of the quere he made two doozes of Olyue tree: And bothe the vpper and two syde postes were fiue square. The two dozes also were of Olyue tree, and he graued them wyth grauynge of Cherubs and paulme trees: and grauen flowres, and couered the with golde, and laide thinne plates of golde vpon the Cherubs and paulme trees. And in lyke maner dyd he in the doze of the temple, sauynge that the postes were of olyue tree, foure square. The two dozes were of fyxre tree, and ether doze with two foldynge leues, he graued theron Cherubs, paulme trees and flowres, & couered them with golde, whiche was layed thynne vpon the carued wozcke. And he buylte the vnner courte wyth thze rowes of hewed stone, and one rowe of Cedar wod. In the fourthe yeare was the foundacion of the house of the Lozde layde: euen in the monethe Zif: And in the leuenthe yeare, in the moneth Bull (whyche is the eyghte monethe) was the house full fynyshed, thorowout al the partes therof, accozdinge to all the fashion of it. And so was he seuen yeare in buyldynge it.

A BVt Salomon was buyldynge hys owne house thirtene yeare, and fynished it all. And he built the house in the wod of Libanō, an hūdred cubites lōg, & fitie cubites bzoade, &. xxx. cubites hye. And there were windowes in thze rowes: & the windowes were one against another thze folde. And the dozes with the syde postes, & the vpper poste, were foure square, & had windowes one agaynste another thze folde.

And he made a pozche by the pyllers (that bare vp the house) fyfty cubites lōge, and xxx. cubites bzoade: and that pozche was before those and the other pyllers: Foz there was a thicke tre set before them. Thō he made a pozche to syt and iudge in, sided with Cedar thozowoute all the pauementes. And his owne house (that he kepte residence in: and that was another courte withoute the pozch) was made of the same

And al these were of the beste stones, hewed after a measure, and sawed with sawes, within and without, from the foundacion vnto the beames (that laye aboue, after the measure) and euen so on the outsyde towarde the great court. And the foundacion was layed vpon riche stones, and that verye greate stones, wherof some were ten cubites, and some eyghte cubytes. And aboue wer good stones, squared after a certayne rule, and couered with Cedar. And the great courte rounde about was with thze rowes of hewed stones, and one rowe of Cedar planckes, after the maner of the inner courte of the house of the Lozde, and of the pozche of the temple.

2. par. 2. a * And hynge Salomon sente and fet one Hiram oute of Tyze, a widowes sonne of the tribe of Nephthalim, his father beyng a man of Tyze. Which Hiram was a crafteslman in bzasse * full of wysedome, vnderstandynge and connynge: to wozke al maner of wozcke in bzasse. And he came to hynge Salomō, & wzought al his wozke. Foz he casse * two pylles of bzasse of. xviii cubites hie a pece, and a stryng of. xii. cubites did compasse ether of them aboute. And he made two heade peces of molten bzasse (after the fashion of a crowne) to set on the toppes of the pylles: The heigth of the one heade pece cōtayned fyue cubites, and the heigth of the other heade pece conteyned fyue cubytes also, he made also net wozcke, and garlandes of cheine wozcke, vpon the heade peces that were on the toppe of the pylles: euen seuen (rowes) vpon the one heade peace, and seuē vpō the other. And so he made the pylles, and two rowes rounde aboute, in the one wzethen wozke, to couer the headepeces that were vpon the pomgranates. And thus dyd he also foz the other heade pece. And the head peces that were on the toppes of the pyllers, covered heaboue with a curious wozk of roses, towarde the palace by the space of iiii. cubytes. Lykewyse, vnder the heade peces in those. ii. pylles beneathe, ouer against the middes, & before the net wozke: And vpon the seconde heade pece were there two hundzed pomgranates in two rowes rounde about. And he set vp the pylles in the pozche of the temple. And when he had set vp the eyghte piller, he called the name D therof * Jachin: and when he had set vp the lefte piller, he called the name ther of * Boaz. And in the toppe of the pylles was a wozke of roses, & so was the wozkemanshyp of the pylles fynyshed. And he made a molten lauatozy, ten cubytes wide from bzim to bzim, rōde in compase, and fyue cubites hye. And a stryng of thirtie cubites dyd compase it aboute, and vnder the bzym of it there were knoppes rounde about, ten in one cubite: and they compassed the lauatozy rounde aboute. And the knoppes were cast with it, in two rowes, when it was caste. And he made tē lockettes of braſſe, foure cubytes lõge, & foure cubites broade a pece, & thre cubytes hie. And the worke of the lokettes was on this maner: They had sides, and the sydes were betwene the ledges. And on the sides that wer betwene the ledges, were lyons, oxē and Cherubs. And lykewyse vpon the ledges that were aboue: and beneth the lions and oxē, were certayn additions made of thynne worke. And vnder euery loket were foure braſen wheles, and bozders of braſſe. And in the foure cozners therof, were vnderſetters (vnder the lauatozy) caſt eche ouer againſt his felow. And the ſtalcke of the lauatozye was in the middle of it, (where it is sene on the outſide) one cubite hye, and a cubite & an halfe rounde, and in the heygthe of it were grauen wozckes whoſe sydes were made foure ſquare, and not rounde. And vnder the sydes were foure wheles, and the axeltrees ioyned faſte to the bottome. And the heyght of euery whele was a cubite and an halfe. And the wozkemanſhip of the wheles was lyke the wozcke of a charet whele. And the axeltrees, the nauel les, ſpokes and chafres were all moulten. And there were foure vnderſetters in the foure cozners of one ſocket: and the vnderſetters were of the berye bottome it ſelfe. And in the heygth of the botome was there a rounde compaſſe of halfe a cubyte hye: and in that heygth of the bottome, there proceaded bothe ledgges and ſydes oute of the ſame. Foz in the bozdes of the ledges and on the ſydes he had grauen pictures of Cherubins, lyons and palme trees, one by another rounde aboute. Thus made he the ten lokettes after this maner: And they had all one faſhion of caſtynge: one meaſure, and one ſyſe. Thē made he ten lauerſe of braſſe, one lauer cōtayning fourty Bates: and one lauer was foure cubytes, and vpon euerye one of the ten lokettes, he put one lauer. And he put fyue of thoſe lokettes on the rightre ſyde of the houſe, & other fyue on the lefte: And he ſet the lauatozye on the right ſide of the houſe eaſtwarde and towarde the Southe. And Hiram made pottes, ſhouelles & baſens, & ſo finyſhed all the wozcke that he made vnto kynge Salomō foz the houſe of the Lozd: that is to ſaye, two pyllers and two roūde headpeces that were to be ſet on the toppes of the two pyllers. Two net wozkes to couer the two roūde head peces, ſet vpō the toppes of the pillers, and foure hūdred pomegranates foz the two net wozckes. The lauatozy, and twelue oxen vnder it, and pottes, ſhouelles and baſēs. And all theſe veſſelles whiche Hirā made to kynge Salomon foz the houſe of the Lozd, were of bzight braſſe. In the playne of Jozdan dyd the kynge caſte them: euen in the thycke claye betwene Socoth and Zarthan. And Salomon lefte all the veſſelles vnwayed, becauſe they were ſo excedynge many, neyther founde they out the weight of the braſſe And ſo Salomō made all the veſſelles that partayned vnto the houſe of the Lozde: the golden aultare, and the golden table, whereon the ſhewbrede was: And fyue candelſtikes, foz the ryght ſyde: and fiue foz the lefte befoze the queer, of pure golde: with flowzes, lampes, and ſnoffers of golde: and boulles, flat peces, baſons, ſpones, & maſoures of pure golde: and hyndges made he of golde borhe foz the dozes of the queer (the place moſt holye) and foz the dozes of the temple alſo. And ſo was ended al the wozke that kyng Salomon made foz the houſe of the Lozd. And * Salomon bzoughte in the thynges whiche Dauid hys father had dedicated: euen the ſiluer, golde, and veſſels, and layed them vp amonge the treaſures of the houſe of the Lozde. ¶ The. viii. geuē hym, and they pleased hym not. And he sayde: what cities are these, which thou

And Hiram sente the kynge .bi. scoze hunwhiche kynge Salomon raysed for a tribute, when he buylded the house of the Lorde, and hys owne house, and Millo, and the walle of Ierusalem, and Hasor, and Megeddo, and Gasar. For Pharao kynge of Egypte wente vp, and tooke Gaser, and burnt it with fyre, and slue the Cananites that dwelte in the cytye, and gaue it for a present vnto his doughter Salomōs wife.

And Salomon built Gaser and Beth Ho-the treasure cityes that Salomon hadde, and cities for hys charettes, and cities for

And all the people that were lefte of the Amorites, Hethites, Pherezites, Heuites, and Iebusytes, (whiche were not of the children of Israell) their children that were lefte after them in the lande, whome the his ministers, his lordes, his captaynes, & rulers of his charettes and hys horsmen.

And these were the Lordes, that were set ouer Salomons worke: euen fyue hūdred were they and fyftye, & they ruled the people that wrought the work. And Pharaos doughter came vp oute of the cytie of Dabuylt for her. And then dyd he also buylde Millo. And thrise a yeare dyd Salomon offre burnt offerynges and peaceoffrynges

Lorde: And he burnte incense vpon the aulter that was before the Lorde, and so he finished the house. And kynge Salomon made a nauye of shyppes in Asion Haber

Hiram sent by shyppe also of hys seruān-

A mat.12.b 2.par.9.a

AND the * quene of Saba hearinge the fame of Salomō (concernynge the name of the lozd) came to proue him with harde questions. And she came to Jerusalem with a verye greate trayne: with Camelles that bare swete odoures, and golde exceedynge muche, and precious stones. And she came to Salomō, & comuned with him of all that was in her herte. And Salomon declared vnto her all her questions, so that there was not one thing hyd frō the kynge, which he expouded not vnto her. And the quene of Saba consydzed al Salomons wisdome, and the house that he had buylded, and the meate of hys table, and the syttynge of his seruauntes, the ozdze of his ministers, & their apparel, his dzincke, and his burnt sacrifices that he offred in the house of the Lozde, and she was astonyed. And she sayde vnto the kynge. It was a true wozde that I herde 6 in myne owne lande of thy sayinges: and of thy wysdome. Howbeit I beleued it not tyll I came, and sawe it with myne eyes. And beholde, the one halfe was not tolde me: for thy wysedome & prosperyte exceadeth the fame whyche I herde of the.

Happye are thy men: and happye are these thy seruauntes, whiche stande euer before the, and heare thy wisdome. Blessed be the Lozde thy God, which loued the, to set the on the seate of Israell, because the Lozde loued Israel for euer, and made the kinge to do equitie & rightwisnes. And she gaue the kynge syxe scoze hundzeth weyght of golde, and of swete odoures exceadynge muche, and precious stones. There came no mooze suche aboundaunce, of swete odoures, as the quene of Saba gaue to kynge Salomon. The nauye also of the 3.re.6.b. * shyppes of Hiram (that caried golde frō Ophir) bzought lykewise great plentye of Almugetre and precious stones. And the kynge made of the Almuge trees, pyllers for the house of the Lozde, and for the kynges palace, and made harpes & Psalteries for syngers. There came no mooze suche Almuge trees, nor were any mooze sene vnto thys daye. And kynge Salomon gaue vnto the Quene of Saba accordyng to all her delyze what so euer she asked: besydes that he gaue her of a free wyll wyth hys owne hande. And so she returned vnto her 13 owne countrey: bothe she, and her seruauntes. The weight of golde that came to Salomon in one yere, was syxe hundzed thyrtescoze and syxe talentes of golde, besydes that he hadde of chapmen, and of marchauntes, and of Potycaryes, and of all the kynges of Arabye, and of the lozdes of the countrey. And kynge Salomon made two hundzed buckelers of beaten gold. vi. hundzed sicles of golde went to a buckler. And he made thze hundzed shildes of beaten gold, thze pounde of gold went to one shild, and the kyng put them in the * house of the 3.re.7.a wood of Libanon. And the kynge made a great seate of yuery, & couered it with the best golde. And the seate had syxe steppes. And the toppe of the seate was rounde behynde, and there were pomelles on eyther syde on the place of the seate, and two Lyons stode beside the pomelles. And there stode twelue Lyons on the steppes, syxe on a side. There was none lyke (wozche) sene in any kyngdome. * And all kynge Salo- deu.17.b mons drynckyng bessels were of gold, and likwise all the besselles of the house of the wood of Libanon were of pure golde. And as for syluer, it was nothyng wozth in the dayes of Salomon. For the kynges nauye of shippes went on the sea, vnto Tharsis, with the nauye of Hirams shyppes: euen 22 once in thze yeare went the nauy to Tharsis, and brought golde & syluer, Elephantes teeth, apes & peacockes. * And so kynge 2.par.9.f Salomon exceaded all the kynges of the earth, both in riches and wisedom. And al the worlde resorted vnto Salomon, to heare his wisdō, which God had put in hys hert. And bzoughte hym euery man his present, besselles of syluer, and besselles of golde, raymente, harnesse, and swete odoures, and hozses, and Mules, yeare by yeare. And Salomon gathered together charettes and hozsemen: and he had a thousande and foure hundzed charrettes, and twelue thousande hozsemen, whom he bestowed in the charette cities, and with the kynge at 2.par.1.b Jerusalem. * And the kynge made syluer in Jerusalem as plenteouse as stones, and Cedar as plenteouse as the wylde fygge trees that growe aboundauntly in the feldes. The bzyngynge of hozses also oute of Egypte: and the collecyon of the wares: dyd the kynges marchauntes take a gayne, and solde the stuffe for a prycе. A charett came vp out of Egypt for syxe hundzed sycles of syluer: that is, one hozse for an hundzed and fyfte. And euen so for al the kynges of the Hethytes, and for the kynges of Syria: dyd they bzynge them oute, thozowe their handes.

3.reg.3.a But kyng Salomon loued many out landi she wemen: and the doughter of Pharao: and wemē of the Moabites, Ammonites, Edomites, Zidomites, & Hethites. Where as yet (concerninge these nacyons,) the Lorde sayd vnto the children of Israell: come not ye at theym, nor let theym come at you: Elles wyll they tourne your hertes after theire goddes. Neuertheleſſe, Salomon claue vnto them in loue. And he had seuen hundred Quenes, and three hundred concubines, & hys wyues turned awaye hys hearte. For it came to passe when Salomon was olde, hys wyues turned hys herte after other Goddes: and hys herte was not perfecte with the Lorde hys God, as was the hearte of Dauid hys father: for Salomon folowed Astaroth the God of the Zidons, and Milcon, the abhominacyon of the Ammonites. And Salomon wrought wickednes in the sight of the Lorde, and folowed not the Lorde perfectly, as dyd Dauid hys father. For than did Salomon buylde an hye place for Chamos the abhompnacyon of Moab, in the hyll that is before Jerusalem, and vnto Moloch the abhominacion of the chyldren of Ammon. And lykewyse dyd he for al hys outlandysh wyues, which burnt incense, & offered vnto theyr goddes. And the Lorde was angry with Salomō, because his hert 3.reg.3.a was turned from the Lorde God of Israell 11.reg.11.a which had appeared vnto him twyse, and geue him a charge (concerning this thing) that he shoulde not folowe other goddes. But he kept not that, whyche the Lorde commaunded him, wherfore the Lord sayde vnto Salomon: for as muche as thys is done of the, and thou haste not kepte myne appoyntment, and my statutes (whyche I commaunded thee) I wyll rente the kyngdome from thee, and will geue it to thy seruaunte. Notwythstandynge in thy daies, I wyll not do it, because of Dauid thy father, but wyll take it from the hande of thy sonne. Howbeit, I wyl not take awaye all the kyngdome: But will geue one trybe to thy sonne, because of Dauid my seruaunte, and because of Jerusalem whyche I haue chosen. And the Lorde stered vp an aduersarye vnto Salomon: euen one Hadad an Edomite, of the kynges sede, whyche was in Edom. For when Dauid was in Edom, and Joab the captayne of the hooste was gone vp to burye them that were slayne, he smote all the men chyldren in Edom. For vi. monethes dyd Joab remayne there, and all Israell, til he had destroyed al the men chyldren in Edom. And this Hadad fledde and certen other Edomites of hys fathers seruauntes with him, to come into Egypt; Hadad beyng yet a lytle chylde. And they arose out of Madian, and came to Paran, and toke men with them out of Paran, and came to Egypte, vnto Pharao kynge of Egypte, whiche gaue him an house, and appoynted hym bytayles, and gaue hym lande. And Hadad gat great fauour in the syghte of Pharao, so that he gaue hym to wyfe, the syster of hys owne wyfe, euen the syster of Thahpenes the queue. And the sister of Thahpenes, bare hym Genubath hys sonne, whom Thahpenes noryssched in Pharaos house. And Genubath was at Pharaos houshold amonge the sonnes of Pharao. And when Hadad herde in Egypte, that Dauid was layde to slepe with his fathers, and that Joab the captayne of the hoste was deade also, he sayde to Pharao: let me departe, that I maye go to mine owne countrey. Pharao sayde vnto hym: what haste thou lacked here wyth me, that thou wouldest thus go to thyne owne cōtrey? He answered, nothyng: howbeit, let me go. And God stered him vp another aduersarye, one Rezon the sonne of Eliada, whiche fledde from hys Lorde Hadadezer kynge of Zoba. And he gathered men vnto him, and became captayne ouer the company, when Dauid slewe them. And they wēt to Damasco, and dwelt there, and reygned in Damasco. Therefore was he an aduersary to Israell all the dayes of Salomon: And thys was the myschef, in that Hadad dyd abhorre Israel, & reygned ouer Syria. And Jeroboam the sonne of Nebat, an Ephrathite of Zareda (whose mother was called Zeruah, whiche was a widowe, and he Salomons seruaunt: lyfte vp his hande agaynst the kyng. But this was the cause, that he lifte vp hys hand against the king: Salomon bilt Mello, and mended the broken places of the cyte of Dauid hys father. And thys felowe Jeroboam was a manne of warre. And Salomon sawe the yong mā, that he was able to do the worke, he made him ruler ouer all the charges of the house of Joseph. And it chaunsed at that ceason, that Jeroboam wente oute of Jerusalem, and the prophete Ahiab the Silonite, met him by the waye, hauyng a new mantell on hym, & they two were alone in the feld. And Ahiab caught the new mātel that was on him, and rent it in twelue peces, and sayde to Jeroboam: take the ten peces. For thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israell: beholde, I wyll rent the kingdome oute of the handes of Salomon, and wyll geue ten trybes to thee, * and he shal haue one, for my seruaunte Dauids sake, and for Jerusalem the cyte whyche I haue chosen out of all the trybes of Israell: be-

And I wil take the, and thou shalt raigne accordynge to all that thy soule desyreth, and shalte be kynge ouer Jsraell. And B yf thou harken vnto all that I commaūde the, and walke in my wayes and do that is rigore in my syght, that thou kepe my statutes & my commaundementes (as Dauid my seruaunte dyd) then wyll I be with the, and buylde the a sure house that shall contynewe, as I buylte for my seruaunte Dauid, and wil gene Jsraell vnto the. And I wyll for thys offence (which Salomon hath committed) vexe the sede of Dauid, but not for euer. Salomon sought therfore to kyl Jeroboam, and Jeroboam arose, and fled into Egypte vnto Sisake kynge of Egypte, and contynued there in Egypte vnt yll the deathe of Salomon. The reste of the wordes that concerne Salomon, and all that he dyd, and his wysdome: are they not written in the booke of the wordes of Salomon? The tyme that Salomon raygned in Jerusalē vpon al Jsrael, was fourtie yere. And Salomon slepte and he laide him with his fathers, and was buryed in the cytie of Dauid hys father, and Rehoboam hys sonne regned in his steade. The. xii. Chapter.

But he forsoke the councell that the olde men had geuen hym, and called vnto his coūcel yong mē, that were growen vp with him, and wayted on him. And he sayd vnto them: what coūcell gene ye, that we may answere this people? for they haue commoned with me, sayinge: make the yocke which thy father dyd put vpon vs, lyghter: And the yonge men that were growē vp with him, spake vnto him sayinge. Thus shalt thou speake vnto this people (that haue sayde vnto the: thy father made oure yocke heuy, but make thou it vs lyghter.) Euen thus shalt thou saye vnto them: My lytle fynger C

And so Jeroboam and all the people came to Rehoboam the thirde daye, as the kynge had appoynted, sayinge: come to me againe the thyrde daye. And the kynge answered the people cholerykly, and lefte the olde mens councell (that they gaue him) and spake to them after the councel of the yonge men, sayinge: My father made D

And the word of god came vnto Semaia the mā of God, sayinge: speake vnto Rehyboam the sonne of Salomon kinge of Juda, & vnto all the house of Juda & Ben Jamin, and to the remnaūte of the people, sayinge: Thus saieth the Lord. And beholde, there came a manne of God out of Juda (by the word of the Lozd) vnto Bethel, & Jeroboā stode by the aultare to put incense. And he cryed agaynst the aulter in the word of the lozd, and saide: O aulter, aulter, thus saieth the Lozde: Beholde, a child shal be bozne vnto the house of Dauid, (Josia by name) & vpō the shall he offer the priestes of the hil aultares that burne incense vpō thee, & mens bones shalbe brent vpon thee. And he gaue a token the same tyme, sayinge: this is the token that the Lozde hath spoken it. Beholde, the aultare shall rent, and the aches B that are vpon it, shall fall oute. And the kynge answered, and sayde vnto the mā of God. * Oh praye vnto the Lozde thy God, Ephe 8.b & make intercession foz me, that my hande Nu. 21.b may be restozed me agayne. And the man Actt. 8.c. of God besought the Lozd, and the kynges hande was restozed agayne, and became as it was afoze. Foz so was it charged me, throwe the wozde of the Lozde, sayinge: eate C no breade, noz dzyncke water, noz turne agayne by the same waye that thou camest. And so he wente another waye, and returned not by the waye that he came to Bethel. And there dwelte an olde Prophet in Bethel, and hys sonnes came, and tolde him all the wozkes, that the man of GOD had done that day in Bethel, and the wozdes whiche he had spoken vnto the kynge tolde they their father also. And their father sayde vnto them: what waye wente he? And hys sons shewed him what waye the man of God wente, whyche came from Juda. And he sayde vnto hys sonnes: sadle me the asse. Whiche whan they had sadled, he gat him vp thereon, and wente after the man of God, and founde hym sytynge vnder a tree. And he sayde vnto hym: arte thou the man of God that cammeste from Juda? And he sayde: I am. He sayde vnto hym: come home with me, and eate breade. He aunswered: I maye not returne wyth the, to go in with the, nether wyll I eate breade or drincke water with the in thys place. For it was sayde to me in the worde of the Lorde: Thou shalte eate no brede, nor drincke water there, nor turne agayne to go by the waye that thou cameste. He sayde vnto hym: I am a prophete also as well as thou, and an angell spake vnto me in the name of the Lorde sayinge: brynge him againe with the into thine house, that he maye eate breade and drincke water. And he lyed vnto hym. And so he went agayne with hym, and dyd eate breade in hys house and dranck water. And it fortuned, that as they satte at the table, the worde of the Lorde came vnto the prophete, that brought hym agayne. And he cryed vnto the man of God that came from Juda, sayinge: thus sayeth the Lorde: because thou haste disobeyed the mouthe of the Lorde, and haste not kepte the commaundemente whyche the Lorde thy God commaunded the: but cameste backe againe, and haste eaten breade and dronck water, in the place (concernynge the whyche the Lorde did saye vnto the. Thou shalte eate no bread nor drinke no water) thy carkasse shall not come vnto the sepulchre of thy fathers. And so it came to passe, that when he had eaten breade and dronck, the prophete whyche brought him agayne, sadled hym an asse. And whan he was gone, a Lyon met him by the waye, and slue him, and his carkasse was caste in the way, and the asse stode therby, and the Lyon stode by the corse also. And men that passed by, sawe the carkasse caste in the way, and the Lyō standynge therby: and they came and tolde it in the towne where the olde prophete dwelte. And when the prophete that brought him backe agayne from the way, harde therof, he sayde: it is the man of God: he was disobediente vnto the worde of the Lorde, and therfore the Lorde hathe delyuered hym vnto the Lyon, which hath rente him and slayne him accordinge to the worde of the Lorde, whyche he spake vnto hym. And he spake to his sōnes, saying: sadle me an Asse: and so they dyd. And he went, and founde his body cast in the way, and the Asse and the Lyon stode by the coarse. And the Lyon had not eaten the carkasse, nor hurt the asse. And the prophet toke vp the body of the man of God, and layed it vpon the Asse, and broughte it agayne: and the olde prophete came to the citie to lamente, and to burye hym. And he layed his bodye in his owne graue, & they lamented ouer hym. (Alas my brother.) And when he had buryed him, he spake to his sonnes, sayinge. When I am deade, se that ye bury me in the sepulchre wherein the man of God is buryed: laye my bones beside his bones. * For the sayinge which he cryed at the worde of the Lorde agaynst the aultare in Bethel (and agaynste all the houses of hyll aultares whiche are in the cyties of Samarie) shall come to passe. Howbeit, for all that, Jeroboam conuerted not from hys wycked waye: but turned backe, and made of the lowest of the people prestes of the hyll aultares. And who so pleased hym, he fylled hys hande, and became prieste of the hyll aultares. And thys thynge turned to synne vnto the house of Jeroboam euen to destroye hym, and to bringe hym to naught from of the face the earthe.

AT that tyme Abia the sonne of Jeroboam fell sicke. And Jeroboā said vnto his wife: dy (I praye the) and disguyse thy selfe, that thou be not knowē to be the wyfe of Jeroboā, & get the to Silo. And Jeroboams wife dyd so: & arose, and wente to Silo, and came to the house of Ahia. But Ahia could not se, for his eyes were waxen dymme for age. And when she came in, she fayned her selfe to be another woman. And beholde, J haue sent vnto the a present of syluer and golde, that thou come and breake the bonde that thou haste with Baasa kynge of Jsrael, that he maye departe from me. So Benhadad harkened vnto kynge Asa, and sent the captaynes of the hostes (whiche he had) against the cy-

And when Baasa hearde thereof, he lefte buildinge of Rama, and dwelt in Thirza. Then kyng Asa made a proclamacion throwoute all Juda, that none should be excused. And he dyd euell in the sight of the Lord, walkinge in the waye of his father, and in his synne wherwith he made Jsrael synne. And Baasa the sonne of Ahia (which) was of the house of Jsachar) conspired agaynst him, and Baasa smote him at Gibbethon whyche is a cyte of the Philistines for Nadab and al Jsrael layed siege to Gibbethon. Euen in the thirde yeare of Asa king of Juda, did Baasa slay him, and raygned in his stede. * And it fortuned that whan 3.kk.14.f

The rest of the wordes that concerne Nadab, and all that he dyd, are they not written in the booke of the chronicles of the kynges of Jsraell? And there was warre betwene Asa and Baasa kynge of Jsrael al their dayes. ¶ The. xvi. Chapter.

A Then the word of the lord came to Jehu the sonne of Hanani against Baasa, saying: for as much as J exalted the out of the duste, & made the captaine ouer my people Jsrael, & thou haste walked in the waye of Jeroboam, and haste made my people Jsrael to sinne, to angre me with their synnes: Beholde, J wyl roote out the posterite of Baasa, and the posteryte of his house, and wyll make hys house lyke the house of Jeroboam the sonne of Nebat. * That man of Baasa whiche dyeth 3.kk.14.k

B reste of the wordes that concerne Baasa, and what he did, and his power, are they not wryten in the booke of the chronicles of the kynges of Jsraell? And so Baasa slepte with his fathers, and was buried in Thirza. And Ela his sonne raigned in his stede. And by the hande of the prophete Jehu the sonne of Hanani, came the word of the Lorde against Baasa, and agaynste his house, and against all the wyckednesse that he dyd in the sight of the Lord (in angryng grynge hym wyth the worcke of his owne handes) that he shoulde be lyke the house of Jeroboam, and because he kylled hym, (that is to say, Jehu the son of Hanani the prophete.) The. xxbi. yere of Asa kynge of Juda, beganne Ela the sonne of Baasa, to raygne ouer Israell in Thirza, two yeare. And his seruaunt Zimri (whiche was capteyne of halfe hys charrettes) conspired against him, as he was in Thirza drinckig: and was dronchen in the house of Arza, stuarde of his house in Thirza. And Zimri came, and smote him, and killed him in the xxbii. yeare Asa, kynge of Juda, and raygned in his steade. And it fortuned that whan he was kyng * and sat on his seate, he slue all the house of Baasa, not leaynge therof, one to pysse agaynst a walle: yea, he slue hys kynsfolckes and frendes, also. And thus dyd Zimri destroye all the house of Baasa, accordynge to the worde of the Lorde, whyche he spake agaynste Baasa by the hande of Jehu the prophete, for all the synnes of Baasa, and sinnes of Ela hys sonne, whyche they synned, and made Israel to sinne, and angred the Lord God of Israel with theyr banities. The rest of the wordes that concerne Ela, & al that he did, are they not writtē in the boke of the Chronicles of the kinges of Israell? In the. xxbii. yeare of Asa kynge of Juda, dyd Zimri raigne seuen dayes in Thirza, and the people was then in the hoofte besigynge Gibbethon, a cytye of the Philistines. And the people of the hoofte hearde one saye: Zimri hath conspired, and slayne the kynge: Wherfore, all they of Israell made Amri (the Captayne of the hoofte) kynge ouer Israell that same daye, euen in the hoofte. And Amri departed vp frome Gibbethon, and all Israell wyth him, and they beslieged Thirza. And when Zimri sawe that the cytye muste nedes be taken, he wente into the palayce of the kynges house, and burnt him selfe and the kynges house with fyre, and so dyed, for his sinnes whyche he synned, in doynge that which is euell in the syghte of the Lorde, and in walkynge in the waye of Jeroboam, and in his synnes whiche he did, and in that he made Israell to synne. The reste of the wordes that concerne Zimri, and the treason that he wrought, are they not writtē i the boke of the Chronicles of the kynges of Israell? Then were the people of Israell deuided into two partes, for halfe the people folowed Thibni the sonne of Ginath, makynge him kynge: and the other halfe folowed Amri. But the people that folowed Amri, preuayled agaynst the people that folowed Thibni the sonne of Ginath. And so Thibni dyed, and Amri raygned.

In the. xxxi. yeare of Asa kynge of Juda, beganne Amri to reygne ouer Israell. xii. yeare. Syxe yeare raygned he in Thirza. He bought the hyll Schomrō, of one Schemar, for two talentes of syluer, and buylte in the hyll, and called the name of the cytye whyche he buylte, after the name of Schemar whiche hadde bene owner of the hyll Schomron. But Amri wrought that whiche es euell in the eyes of the Lorde, and dyd worse then all that were before hym. For he walcked in al the waye of Jeroboam the sone of Nabat, and in his synnes, that made Israell synne, to anger the Lorde God of Israell wyth their banities. The rest of the wordes that cōcerne Amri, and all that he dyd, and hys strength that he shewed, are they not wrytē in the boke of the Chronicles of the kinges of Israell? And so Amri slepte with hys fathers, and was buryed in Schomron, and Ahab his sonne raygned in his stead. In the. xxxbiii. yeare of Asa kynge of Juda, beganne Ahab the sonne of Amri, to raygne ouer Israel, & the same Ahab the son of Amri, raigned ouer Israell in Samaria. xxii. yeare.

And Ahab the sonne of Amri dyd euell in the syght of the Lorde, above all that were

And beholde, I am gatherynge two stycks for to go in, and dresse it for me and my sonne, that we maye eate it:

For thus sayth the Lord God of Israel: the mele in the barell shall not be wasted, neyther shall the oyle in the cruse be minished, vntyll the Lorde haue sent rayne vpon the earthe. And she went, and dyd as Elia sayde. And she and he, and her house dyd eate a good space, & the mele wasted not out of the barell, neyther was the oyle spent out of the cruse accordyng to the worde of the Lorde, whiche he spake by the hande of Elia.

And after these thynges, it happened, that the sonne of the wyfe of the house fell sycke. And hys sycknesse was so sore, that there was no breath lefte in hym. ¶ The. xx. Chapter.

A And Benhadad the kig of Syria gathered al his host together, hauing A xxxii. kinges with him, & hozses & charettes: & wēt vp, & beseged Samaria, & warred against it. And he sēt messēgers to Ahab kyng of Israel into the city, & said vn to hi: thus saieth Benhadad. Thy siluer & thy golde is myne & the fayrest of thy wyues, of thy children be myne. And the kyng of Israell answered and sayde: My Lorde kynge according to thy sayinge, I am thyne, and all that I haue. And when the messengers came agayne, they sayde: thus saieth Benhadad. For as muche as I haue sent vnto the, sayinge: thou shalte delyuer me thy siluer and thy golde, & thy wiues, and thy chyldren. I wyll therfore sende my seruauntes vnto the to morow this tyme: and they shall search thyne house, and the B houses of thy seruauntes. And whatsoeuer is pleasaunt in thyne eyes, they shall take it in their handes, and bryngе it awaye.
Then the kynge of Israell sent for all the elders of the lande, and sayde: Take yede I pray you and se, howe this felowe goeth aboute mischiefe. For he sente vnto me, for my wiues, for my children, for my syluer, & for my golde: and I denyed hym not. And all the Elders and all the people, sayde herken not vnto hym, nor cõsente. Wherefore he sayde vnto the messengers of Benhadad: tell my Lorde the king, al that thou dyddest sende for to thy seruaunte at the first tyme, that I wyll doe, but thys thyng I maye not do. And the messengers departed, & brought answere agayne. And Benhadad sente vnto hym agayne, and sayde: thus and thus do the Gods vnto me, yf the dust of Samaria be ynoughe for all the people that folowe me, to take euerye man an handfull. And the kynge of Israell answered, and sayde: Tell hym, let not hym that putteth on his harnelle bost him selfe, as he that putteth it of. And it fortuned, that when Benhadad hearde that tydynges, as he was with the kynges drinkynge within the pauilions, he sayde vnto hys seruauntes, put on your harnelle. And they set them selues in araye agaynste the citye. And beholde, there came a Prophete vnto Ahab kynge of Israel, sayinge: thus saieth the Lorde. Haste thou sene al thys greate multitude? beholde, I wyll delyuer it into thyne hande thys daye, and thou shalte knowe that I am the LORD. And Ahab sayde: By whome? He sayde: Thus sayeth the Lorde: Euen by the seruauntes of the gouernours of the shires. He sayd agayne: Who shall order the battell? And he answered, thou: Then he numbred the seruauntes of the gouernours of the shires: & they were two hundred and .xxxii. And after them also, he numbred all the people, all the children of Israel, euen seuen thousande. And they wẽt out at noone, but Bẽhadad dyd drincke tyll he was droncken in the pauilions bothe he and the kynges: euen .xxxii. kynges, that holpe hym. And the seruãtes of the gouernours of the shires went out first. An Bẽhadad sent out, and they shewed hime sayinge: There are men come out of Samaria. He sayde: whether they be come oute for peace, take them alyue: or whether they be come oute to fyght, take them yet alyue. And so those younge men of the gouernours of the shires came oute of the citye, and the hooste after them, and they slue euerye one hys enemye that came in hys waye. And the Syriens fled, and they of Israell folowed after them. And Benhadad the kynge of Syria scaped on a horsse, wyth hys horsemen. And the kynge of Israell wente oute, and smote the horsses and charettes, and with a great slaughter slue he the Syriẽs. And there came a Prophete to the kynge of Israell, and sayde vnto hym: Goe forth, and playe the man, be wise and take hede what thou doest: for when the yere is gone aboute, the kynge of Syria wyll come by agaynste thee. And the seruauntes of the kynge of Syria sayde vnto hym: The gods of the hylles are their Gods, and therefore they had the better of vs: but let vs fyghte agaynst them in the playne, and for what ye wyll, we shall haue the better of them. And thys do: take the kynges away euery man out of his place, & put dukes in theyr roumes. And thou do nombre the an hoste like the hooste that thou loste, such horsses and such charettes, & we wil fight against thẽ i the plaine, & thou shalt se vs get the better of thẽ. And he herkened vnto their voyce, & did euẽ so, & it fortuned, that after the yere was gone aboute, Benhadad numbred the Syrians, and went vp to Aphek to fyght agaynst Israel. And the children of Israell were numbred, and with their whole numbre went they agaynste them, and the children of Israell pyched before them, lyke two lytle flocches of kiddes: but the Syrias fylled the countreye. And there came a mã of God, and sayde vnto the kynge of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lord: because the Syrians haue sayde: the Lord is but God of the hilles, & not God of the balleys: therefore wyll I delyuer all this greate multytude into thyne hande, & ye shall knowe, that I am the Lord. And they pyched one ouer agaynste the other. dii. dayes. and it came to passe, that in the seuenth daye the batell was ioyned. And the children of Israell slue of the Syrians an hundred thousande fote men in one daye. But the rest fled to Aphek into the citie. And there fell a walle vpon .xxvii. thousande of the men that were lefte. And Benhadad fledde and came into the citie, fro one chambre to chambre. And hys seruauntes sayde vnto hym: beholde, we haue hearde saye, that the kynges of the house of Israell are mercyful kynges. We wyll therefore put sacke clothe about our loynes, and ropes about our neckes, and go out to the kynge of Israell: yf happely he wyll saue thy lyfe. And so they gyded sacke cloth about their loynes and put ropes about their heades, and came to the kynge of Israell, & sayde: Thy seruaũt Benhadad sayth, I praye the let me lyue. He sayde: is he yet alyue? He is my brother. And they toke that woorde for good lucke, and hastely caught it oute of hys mouthe, and sayde: yea, thy brother Benhadad. He sayd: Goe, bringe hym hyther. And Benhadad came out vnto hym, and he caused him to come vp into the charet. And he sayde vnto him: the cities whiche my father tooke frome thy father, I wyl restore agayne. And thou shalte make streates for thee in Damasco, as my father dyd in Samaria. And I wyll make an appoyntment

6 So the prophete went forth, and wayted for the kynge by the waye, and putte hym selfe out of knowled ge with ashes, whych he layed vpon his face. And when the king came by, he cryed vnto the kynge, & sayde: thy seruaunte wente out in the myddes of the battel. And beholde, there went awaye a man, whome another man brought vnto me, and sayd: kepe thys man. And if he be missed or lost, thy lyfe shal goe for hys: Or elsthou shalte paye a talent of syluer. And as thy seruaunt had here and there to doe, he was gone. And the kynge of Israell sayde vnto hym: euen so shall the iudgement be, as thou haste defyned it thy selfe. And he hasted, and tooke the ashes awaye frome hys face: and the kynge of Israell knewe hym that he was of the prophetes. And he sayde vnto hym: Thus sayeth the Lorde: Because thou haste let goe a man that is in my curse, thy lyfe shall goe for his lyfe, and thy people for hys people.
And the kyng of Israel went to his house, wayworde, and in displeasure, and came to Samaria.

And he layed hym downe vpon hys bedde, and turned awaye hys face, & to the wolde eate no breed. But Jezabel his wife came to hym, and sayde vnto hym: why is thy spirit so waywarde, that thou eatest no breade? And he sayd vnto her: For I spake vnto Naboth the Jezraelite, and sayde vnto him: Geue me thy vineyarde for money: or els yf it please thee, I wyll geue the another vineyarde for it. And he answered: I wyl not geue the my vineyarde. And Jezabell his wife sayde vnto hym: Doest thou C thus gouerne the kyngdom of Jsrael? Vp and eate breade, and let thine heart be rest, I wyll geue thee the vineyarde of Naboth the Jezrahelite. And so she wrote a letter in Ahabs name, and sealed it with hys seale, and sent the letter vnto the elders, and to the nobles that were in his cytye dwelling with Naboth. And she wrote in the letter, sayinge: proclayme a faste, and set Naboth on hye amonge the people, and set two vnthryftes before hym, to beare false wytnesse agaynste hym, sayinge: thou dyddest blaspheme God and the kynge. They proclaymed fastynge, & set Naboth amonge the chiefe of the people, and there came in two men (the childzen of Belial) & sat before hym. And then they sent to Jezabel, sayinge: Naboth is stoned to deathe. And whē Ahab heard that Naboth was deade, he stode vp to goe downe to the vineyarde of Naboth the Jezraelyte, and to take possession of it. And the worde of the Lorde came vnto Elia the Thesbite, sayinge: vp, and go downe to mete Ahab kynge of Jsraell, whiche is in Samaria. good vnto the kynge, with one mouthe: let thy woorde therefore (I praye the) be lyke the woorde of euerye one of them, to speake that whiche is good. And Michea sayde: as truely as the Lorde lyueth, whatsoe-euer the Lorde sayeth vnto me, that wyl I speake. And so he came to the kynge, and the kynge sayde vnto him: Michea, ought we to goe agaynste Ramoth in Gilead to battayle, or to styll? He answered to hym: * Goe and prospere, the Lorde shall delyuer it into the hande of the kyng. 2.pa.18.a And the kynge sayde vnto hym: So and so many tymes do I charge the, that thou tell me nothynge, but that whyche is true, in the name of the Lorde. He sayde: I sawe all them of Israell scattered vpon the hylles, as shepe that haue not a shepe-hearde. And the Lorde sayde: These haue no maister, let euerye man retourne to hys house in peace. And the kynge of Israell sayde vnto Iehosaphat: Dyd not I tell thee, that he woulde prophecye no good vnto me, but euell? And he sayde agayne: heare thou therefore the woorde of the Lorde. I sawe the Lorde syt on hys seate, D and all the hoofte of heauen stode aboute him on his ryghte hande and on hys lefte.
And the Lorde sayde: * Who shall per-swade Ahab, that he maye goe, and fall at 2.pa.18.b

a certayne spirite, & stode before the Lord & sayde: I wyl perswade him. And the Lorde sayde vnto him: wherwith? And he said: I wyll go out, & be a false spirit in the mouth of all hys Prophetes. He sayde: thou shalt

Now therfore behold * the lorde hath put a lying spirite in the mouth of all these thy prophetes, & the Lord hath spoken euyl towarde the. But Zedekia the sone of Canaana, wente to, & smote Michea on the cheke, & sayde: whan went the spirite of the Lord frō me, to speake vnto the? And Michea sayd: behold, thou shalt se in that day, whē thou shalt go from chambre to chābre to hyde the. And the kynge of Israel sayde: take Michea, and carye hym vnto Amon the gouernour of the cytie, and vnto Joab the kynges sonne, and saye: thus sayeth the kynge: Put this felowe in the prysō house, and feede hym wyth breade of affliccyon, and wyth water of trouble, vntil I retourne in peace. And Michea sayde:
E yf thou retourne in peace: the Lorde hath not spoken by me. And he sayde: herken ye people euerye one of you. And so the kynge of Israell, and Jehosaphat the kynge of Juda wente vp to Ramoth in Gilead. And the kynge of Israell sayde to Jehosaphat: chaunge thee, whan thou goest to warre: and put on thyne apparell. And the kynge of Israell chaunged hym selfe, and went to battell. But the kynge of Siria commaunded the .xxxii. Captaynes (that hadde rule ouer hys charrettes,) sayinge: fyghte neyther wyth smale nor greate, saue onelye agaynste the kynge of Israell. And when the Captaynes of the charettes sawe Jehosaphat, they sayde: Surely it is the kynge of Israell, and they turned to fyghte agaynst hym. And Jehosaphat cryed. And so it came to passe, that F when the captaynes of the charrettes saw that he was not the kynge of Israell, they turned backe from him. And a certayne man drewe a bowe vnwarnyly, and by chaūce smote the kyng of Israell betwene the ribbes, & hys harnes. Wherfore he said vnto the driuer of his charettes: turne thy hande, & cary me out of the hoste, for I am sore hurt. And the battel encreased that day, & the kynge stode vpright in hys charet agaynst the Siriens, & died at euē. And the blood ran out of the woūde into the myddes of the charet. And there went a proclamaciō throwout the hoste about the going downe of the sunne, saying: euerye man to his cytie, & to his own countrey. And so the kyng of Israel died, & they came to Samaria. and buried him there. And one washed

And Jehosaphat made teme shippes in the sea, to come throwe Tharsis to Ophir for golde, but they wente not, for the shippes brake at Ozion Gaber. Then said Ahazia the son of Ahab to Jehosaphat, let my seruauntes go with thy seruātes i the shippes. But Jehosaphat wold not. For he serued Baal, and worshypped hym, and prouoked the Lorde God of Israell vnto wrath, accordyng vnto al that his father had done.

AND Moab dyd wyckedlye agaynste Israell after the death of Ahab. And Ahazia fell thorowe a latres wyndowe of hys vpper chambre that he hadde in Samaria: And whyle he was in hys sickenes he sent messegers, and said vnto the: go, & enquire of Beelzebub the God of Ekrō, whether I shall recouer of thys my disease. But the Aungell of the Lorde spake to Elia the Thelbite: Aryse, and goe vp agaynste the messengers of the kynge of Samaria, and saye vnto the: Is there not a God in Israell, that ye goe to aske councell at Beelzebub, the God of Ekrom? Wherefore, thus sayth the Lorde: thou shalt not come downe from the bedde on whiche thou art gone vp, but shalt dye the death. And Elia departed. And when the messengers turned backe agayne vnto him, he sayde vnto them: why are ye nowe come agayne? They aunswered him: there came a man vp agaynste vs, and sayd vnto vs: go and tourne agayne vnto the kynge that sent you, and saye vnto hym: Thus sayeth the Lorde: is there not a God in Israel, that thou sendest to enquire of Beelzebub the God of Ekrom? Therefore thou shalt not come downe frō the bed on which thou art gone vp, but shalt dye the deathe. And he sayde vnto the: what maner of mā was that whiche came vp in youre waye, and tolde you these wordes? And they answered him: It was an hearye man, + and girde wyth a girdle of leather about hys loynes. And he sayde: It is Elia the Thelbite. Then the kynge sente vnto hym a captayne ouer fiftye (with his fiftye mē) whiche came to hym, and beholde, he sate on the toppe of an hyll. And he spake vnto him: Thou man of God, the kynge hathe sayde: come downe. Elia answered, & sayde to the captayne ouer the fyftye: If I be a mā of God, fire come downe from heauen, and consume the and thy fyftye. + And there came fire of God, and consumed hym and hys fyftye. And the kynge wente agayne, & sent him another captayne ouer fiftie, with his fiftye. And he answered, and sayd vnto hym: O man of God, thus hathe the kynge sayde: Make haste, and come downe. Elia aunswered and sayde vnto them: If I be a man of God, fire come downe frome heauē, and consume the and thy fyftye. And there came fire of God downe frome heauen, and cōsumed him and his fiftye. And the kyng went agayne, and sent the thirde captayne ouer fyftye with hys fyftye men. And the thyrd captayne ouer fyftye went vp, & came & fell on hys knees before Elia & besought him, and sayde vnto hym: O man of God, lette my lyfe and the lyfe of the fyftye, thy seruauntes be precyouse in thy syghte Beholde, there came fire downe from heauen, and burnt vp the two fore captaynes ouer fyftye with their fiftyes: Therefore let my lyfe nowe be precious in thy syghte. And the angel of the lord said vnto Elia: go downe with hym, and be not afrayde of hym. And he arose and wente downe wyth him vnto the kynge. And he sayde vnto hym, thus sayeth the Lorde: for asmuch as thou hast sent messengers to aske councell at Beelzebub the G O D of Ekrom as though there had bene no God in Israell, whose woorde thou myghtest seke after: therfore thou shalt not come downe of the bed on whiche thou art gone vp, but shalt dye the deathe. And so dyed accordynge to the woorde of the Lorde, whyche Elia had spoken. And Iehozam (hys brother) began to reygne in hys steade, in the seconde yere of Iehozam the sonne of Iehosaphat kynge of Iuda, because he had no sonne.

The reste of the woordes that concerne Ahazia, what thynges he dyd, are they not written in the booke of chronicles of the kynges of Israel.

AND it chaūced that when the lord wolde take vp Elia into heauen by a whyrle wynde, Elia wente wyth Elisa frome Gilgall. And Elia sayde vnto Elisa: tarye here I praye the, for the Lorde hathe sente me to Bethell. Elisa sayde vnto hym: as surely as the Lord lyueth, and as thy soule lyueth, I wyll not leaue the. And they came downe to Bethell, and the children of the prophetes that were at Bethel came out to Elisa, and sayd vnto him: knowest thou not, howe that the Lord wil take away thy master from thy head thys daye? He sayde: I knowe it also: holde ye your peace. And Elia sayd vnto hi: Elisa, tary here I pray the, for the Lord hath sēt me to Jericho. He sayde: as surelye as the Lord liueth, & as surely as thy soule liueth I wyll not leue the, & so they came to Jericho. And the children of the prophetes that were at Jericho came to Elisa, and sayde vnto him: knowest thou not, that the Lord wyl take awaye thy master from thy head thys daye? He answered: I knowe it also, holde ye youre peace. And Elia sayde vnto hym:

hym: tarye I praye the here, for the Lorde hath sent me to Jordan. And he sayde: as surely as the lord liueth, & as thy soule liueth, I will not leaue the. And so they two wēt together. And fiftie men of the sons of the prophetes came and stode on the other side a farre of, & they two stode by Jordā. And Elia tooke his mantel, and wrapte it together, and smote the waters, and they were deuided, part the one way, and parte the other, so that they two went ouer thorowe the drye lande. And it fortuned, that as sone as they were ouer, Elia sayde vnto Elisa: aske what I shall doe for thee, per I be taken awaye from the. And Elisa sayd: I praye the let thy spirite be double vpō me. And he sayd: thou hast asked an hard thig. Neuertheles, if thou se me whē I am takē away frō the thou shalte haue it so: yf thou do not, it shal not be. And it fortuned, that as they went walkyng & talkyng: behold, there appeared a charet of fire and horses of fire, & parted them both a sundie. * And Elia wente by thorowe the whole wynde into heauen. And Elisa sawe, and cryed: O my father, O my father, the charet of Israel, and the horsemen thereof, and he sawe hym no more: and he tooke hys owne clothes, and rente them in two peces. He tooke vp also the mantell of Elia that fell frome hym, and wente backe agayne, and stode by Jordans syde, & toke the mantel of Elia (that fell frome hym,) and smote the waters (and they parted not a sundēr,) and he sayde: Where is the Lorde God of Elia, and he hym selfe? And when he had smyten the waters, they parted this way and that waye, and Elisa wente ouer. And when the children of the prophetes, which were at Jericho sawe hym frome a farre, they sayde: The spirite of Elia doeth reste on Elisa, and they came to mete hym, and fell to the grounde before hym, and sayde vnto hym: See, there be wyth thy seruauntes fiftie strong men, let them go and seke thy master: happlye the spirite of the Lord hath taken him vp, and cast him vpō some mountayne or into some valleye. And he sayde: Ye shall sende none. And whan they laye vppon hym tyll he was ashamed, he sayde: Sende. They sent therefore fiftye men, whiche soughte him three dayes and three nyghtes, but founde hym not. And when they came agayne to hym, whiche taryed at Jericho, he sayde vnto thē: dyd I not saye vnto you, that ye shuld not goe? And the menne of the cytye sayde vnto Elisa: Beholde sir, the dwellynge of this cetie is pleasaunte, as thou thy selfe seest: but the water is naught & the groūde barren. He sayde: bryngge me a newe cruse, and put salt therein. And they brought it to him. And he went vnto the spryngе of the waters, and caste in the salte therin, and sayde: thus sayeth the Lorde. I haue healed this water, there shall not come hence forth eyther deathe or barrennesse. So the waters were healed vnto thys daye, according to the sayinge of Elisens, whiche he spake. And he wente vp from thence vnto Bethel. And as he was goyng vp the way, there came little children out of the citie, and mocked him, and sayde vnto hym: Goe vp thou bald head, go vp thou bald head. And he tourned backe, and loked on them, and cursed thē in the name of the lord. And there came two she Beares out of the wood, and tare .xlii. children of thē. And he went from thence to mount Carmell, & from thence he turned agayne to Samaria.

¶ The .iii. Chapeter.

IEhoram the sonne of Ahab beganne to raygne vpon Israell in Samaria the .xviii. yeare of Jehosaphat kynge of Juda, & raygned .xii. yeres. And he wrought euel in the sight of the Lorde: but not lyke his father, & like his mother, for he put away the pamages of Baall, that his father had made. Neuertheles, he cleaued vnto the sinnes of Jeroboam the sonne of Nebat (which made Israell to synne) and departed not therefrom. And Mesa kynge of Moab was a lorde of shepe, and rendred vnto the kynge of Israel an hundred thousande lambes, and an hundred thousande rammes with the wolle. But whē Ahab was deade it fortuned, that the kynge of Moab rebelled agaynste the kynge of Israell. And kynge Jehoram went out of Samaria the same ceason, & nūbred al Israel, & wente & sent to Jehosaphat the kyng of Juda, sayng: the king of Moab hath offered againste me, wilt thou come with me against Moab to batel? he answered: I will come by, for as I am, so arte thou: and as my people be, so are thy people, and thy hosses as myne. And he sayde: what waye shall we goe by? And he aunswered: The waye thorowe the wyldernesse of Edom. And so the kynge of Israel toke his iourneye, and the kynge of Juda, and the kynge of Edom. And whē they had compassed the waye seuen dayes, they hadde no water for the hoaste, and for the cattell that folowed them. And the kynge of Israel sayde: Alas, the LORDE hath called these three kynges together, to delyuer them ouer into the hand of Moab. But Jehosaphat sayde: * is there not here a prophet of the lord, that we may enquire of the LORDE, by him? And one of the kynge of Israels seruauntes aunswered, and sayde; Here is Elisa the sonne of Sa-phat, which powred water on the hādes of Elia. And Iehosaphat sayde: Is not the worde of the Lorde with him? And so the kynge of Israell, & Iehosaphat, & the kinge of Edō wēt downe to him. And Elisa sayde vnto the kinge of Israell. What haue I to do wyth thee? Get thee to the prophetes of thy father, and to the prophetes of thy mother. And the kyng of Israel said vnto him. Oh naye. For the Lorde hathe called these three kynges together to delyuer thē into the hande of Moab. And Elisa sayde: as sure as the Lorde of hoostes lyueth (in whose syghe I stande) and it were not, that I regarde the presence of Iehosaphat the kyng of Juda, I wold not loke toward the, nor yet se the. But nowe bringe me a mynstrel. And whā the minstrel played, the hād of the Lorde came vpō hym. And he sayde: Thus sayeth the Lorde. Make thys playne grounde full of diches. For thus saieth the Lorde: ye shal se neither wynde nor rayne, and yet the broke shalbe filled with water, that ye maye drincke, both ye, & youre beastes, & youre catell. And thys is yet but a smale thinge in the syght of the Lorde, for almuch as he will geue ouer the Moabites also into youre handes. And ye shall smyte euery stronge towne, & euery goodly citie, and shall fell euery pleasaunt tree, & stoppe euery well of water, & marre euerye good platte of grounde wyth stones. And in the mornynge, whan the meate offeryng was offered, it fortuned, that there came water by the waye from Edom, and the countrey was fylled wyth water. And when all the Moabites hearde that the kynges were come vp to fyght against thē, they gathered al together, from the yongest that was able to put on harnesse, and so vpward, and stode in the border of the lande. And they were vp early in the morning, and the sūne shone vpon the water, that the Moabites sawe the water a farre of, as red as bloud, and they sayde: Thys is the bloude of slaughter: the kynges are slayne, and one hath smytten another. Nowe therfore Moab gette thee to the spoyle. And whan they came to the hoostes of Israell, the Israelites stode vp, and smote the Moabites, so that they fled de before them, but they folowed vpō them, and smote Moab. And they ouerthrewe the cytyes, and on euerye good parcell of lande, caste euery man hys stone, and fylled it, and they stopte all the welles of water, and felled all the good trees. Onely in the cytie of Kyrcke, left they the stones therof, howbeit they wēt about it with slynges, and smote it. And whē the kynge of Moab sawe, that the battell was sore against him, he toke wyth hym seuen hūdred mē that drewe the sword, to haue gone thorowe, euen vnto the kyng of Edō: but they could not. And thē he toke his eldest sonne, that shuld haue raygned in his steade, and offered him for a burntofferyng vpon the wall. And there was great indignacyon against Israel, and they departed frō him, and returned to theyr owne lande.

AND there cried a certayne womā of the wiues of the prophetes vnto Elisa, sayinge: thy seruaunte my husband is dead, & thou knowest, that thy seruaunte did feare the Lorde. And the creditor is come, to fette my two sonnes, to be hys bondemen. Elisa sayde vnto her. Tell me what I shall do for the: what hast thou in thine house? She sayde, thine handemayde hath nothing at all in the house, saue a pitcher with oyle. He sayd vnto her: Go, & borowe vessel for the, of thē that are without, euen of al thy neyghbours, emptie vessels, and that not a fewe. And when thou arte come in, thou shalt shut the doze after the, and after thy sonnes, and powre oute into al those vessels, and set aside that whiche is full. And so the woman went from hym, and shut the doze after her, and after her sonnes. And they brought to her, & she powred out. And it came to passe, that when the vessels were full, she sayde vnto her sonne: bringe me yet a vessell. And he sayde vnto her: I haue no mo. And the oyle ceased. Then she came, and tolde the man of God, And he sayd: go and sell the oyle, and paye thē that thou art in det vnto, but liue thou and thy children of the rest. And it fell on a daye, that Elisa came to Sunē, where was a great womā, that tobe him in, for to eate bread. And so it came to passe, that frō that tyme forth (as often as he came that way) he turned in thither to eate bread. And she said vnto her husband. Behold, I perceaue, that this is a holy man of God, that commeth so oft by our place. Let vs make him a chambre (I praye the) wyth walles, and let vs set hym there a bedde, and a table, a stole and a candelsticke, that he may turne in thither when he commeth to vs. And it fortuned on a daye, that he came thither, & turned into the chambre, and laye therein, and sayde to Gehezi his seruaute: call thys Sunamite. And when he called her, she presented her selfe before him. And agayne he sayde vnto hym: Tell her. Beholde, thou hast bene careful for vs, and hast made all this prouision. What shall we nowe do for the? wouldest thou be spoken for to the kynge, or to the Captayne of the hoostes?

She answered, I dwel among myne owne people. And he sayde agayne, what is to be done for her? Gehezi answered. Verely she hath no childe, and her husband is old. And he sayde: call her. And whan he hadde called her, she stode in the doore. And he sayde: + by suche a tyme, and as sone as the frute can lyue, thou shalt embrace a sonne. And she sayde: Oh naye my Lorde, thou mā of God, do not lye vnto thine hādmayd. And the wife conceaued, and bare a sonne that same season that Eliseus hadde sayde vnto her, as sone as the frute coulde haue lyfe. And when the childe was growne, it fell on a day, that he wēt out to his father and to the reapers. And he sayde vnto hys father, my heade, my heade. And he sayde to a ladde. Carye hym to hys mother. And whan he had taken him, and brought him to his mother, he saron her knees til noone, and then dyed. And she went vp, and layde hym on the bed of the man of God, & shute the doze aboute hym, and wente oute, and called vnto her husbande, and sayde: sende wyth me (I praye thee) one of the younge menne, and one of the Asses. For I wyll runne to the manne of GOD, and come agayne. And he sayde: wherfore wylt thou go to hym, seynge that to daye is neyther newe Moone nor Sabboth daye. She answered: For healthe. Then she sadeled an Asse, and sayde to her seruaunte: leade awaye the Asse, and make her not to goe slowly (because I ryde vpon her) but whan I bydde thee. And so she wente, and came vnto the man of God, to mounte Carmel. And it fortuned: that when the manne of God sawe her farre of, he sayde to Gehezi his seruaunte. Beholde yonder is the Sunamite. Ruune therefore to mete her, and saye vnto her: Is all well wyth thee and with thy husbande, and wyth the lad. And she answered: Al is wel. And whē she came to the man of God vp to the hyll, she caught him by the fete. But Gehezi wente to her, to thruste her awaye. And the mā of God sayde: lette her alone, for her soule is vexed within her, and the Lorde hath hid it from me, and hath not tolde it me. Then she sayde: dyd I desyre a sonne of my Lorde? dyd I not require thee, that thou shouldest not dysceaue me? Then he sayde to Gehezi: + gyrde vp thy loynes, and take my staffe in thyne hande, and go thy waye. + If thou mete anye man, salute hym not. And yf any salute thee, answere him not agayne. And laye my staffe vpon the face of the childe. And the mother of the childe sayde: + as sure as the Lorde liueth, and as thy soule liueth, I will not leaue the. And he arose, and folowed her. Gehezi wente

before them, and layed the staffe vpon the face of the childe. But there was neyther voyce nor anye feleynge. Wherfore he wente agayne to mete hym, and told him, sayeng: the childe is not awaked. And when Eliseus was come into the house: Beholde, the childe was dead, and layde vpon his bedde. He went in therfore, and shutte the doore to the ladde and hym, and prayde vnto the Lorde. + And went vp, and laye vpon the ladde, and put his mouth on his mouth, & his eyes vpō his eyes, and his handes vpō his handes and whan he so laye vpon the childe, the flesche of the childe wared warme. And he went agayne, and watched ones vp and downe in the house, and then went vp, and layde hym selfe vpon hym agayne. And then the childe gaped seuen tymes, and opened his eyes. And he called Gehezi, and sayd: Call for this Sunamite. So he called her: which whē she was come in vnto him, he sayde vnto her: + take thy sonne. Therfore she went in, & fell at hys fete, and bowed her selfe to the grounde, and toke vp her sonne, & went oute. Eliseus came agayne to Gilgal, and there was a derth in the lande, & the childrē of the prophetes dwelt with him. And he sayde vnto his seruaunt. Set a greate pot on the fyre, and make porrage for the chyldren of the prophetes. And one went out into the felde to gather herbes, and founde (as it were) a wilde vine, & gathered therof wylde Colocynthydas his lappe ful, and came, & shred theym into the potte of porage: for they knewe it not. So they powred oute for the men to eate. And it fortuned: that whē they tasted of the porrage, they cried oute, and sayde: O thou manof GOD, there is death in the pot: and they coulde not eate therof. But he sayde: bryng meale. And he cast it into the potte, and sayde: fill for the people, that they maye eate, & there was no more harme in the pot. There came a man from Baal Salisa, and brought the mā of God breade from the first frutes, euē. xx. loaues of barlie, & new corne which was yet in his bagges. And he sayde: Geue vnto the people, that they maye eate. And his minister answered: why, shall I set thys before an hundred men? He sayd againe: geue it vnto the people that they maye eate. For thus sayth the Lorde: + they shal eate, and there shalbe left ouer. And so he dyd set it before thē, and they dyd eate, and left ouer, accordynge to the worde of the Lorde.

healeth vnto Syria. He was also a myghty man, and expert in warre, but he was a leper. And the Syrians had gone out by cõpanies, & had brought out of the contrey of Israell a lytle mayde, and she was wyth Naamans wyfe. And she sayde vnto her ladye: I would to GOD my lorde were wyth the prophete that is in Samaria: for he woulde deliuer him of his leprosie. And he wente in, and tolde his lorde, sayinge: thus and thus sayde the mayde, that is of the lande of Israell. And the kynge of Syria sayde: Come, and entre in, and I will sende a letter vnto the kynge of Israel. And he came, and toke wyth hym ten talentes of syluer, and syxe thousande peces of gold, and tenne chaunge of raymentes, and brought the letter to the kynge of Israell, contaynynge thys tenoure: Nowe when this letter is come vnto the: Behold, I haue therwith sent Naamã my seruaũte to the, that thou mayest rydde hym of hys leprosie: & it fortuned that when the kynge of Israell had redde the letter, he rent hys clothes, and sayde: * am I GOD, that I shoulde slaye, & make alyue? For he doeth sende to me, that I shoulde delyuer a man from his leprosie. Wherefore consyder (I praye you) and se howe he seketh a quarell agaynst me, which when Elisa the man of God hadde hearde, howe that the kynge of Israell had rent hys clothes, he sent to the kynge, sayinge. Wherfore haste thou rent thy clothes? let him come nowe to me, and he shall know, that there is a prophet in Israel, & so Naamã came with his horsses & with his charettes, & stode at the dore of the house of Elisa, & Elisa sent a messenger vnto hym, saying: go & washe the in Iordã seuen tymes, & thy flesche shall come againe to thee, & thou shalt be clensed. But Naaman was wroth, & went away, & sayd. Behold, I thought wyth my selfe: he woulde surely come out, and stande and call on the name of the Lorde his GOD, and put his hande on the place that he might heale the leprosie. Are not Abana and Parphar, riuers of Damasco, better than all the waters of Israell? If I washe me also in them, shal I not be clensed? And so he turned him, and departed wyth dyspleasure. And hys seruauntes came and communed wyth him, and sayde: Father, If the prophet had bydde the to do some great thing, oughtest thou not to haue done it? Howe muche rather then, whan he sayeth to the: washe and be cleane? Then went he down and washed him seuen tymes in Iordan, accordyng to the saying of the man of God, and his flesche chaunged, lyke vnto the flesche of a lytle chylde, * and he was clensed. And he turned agayne to the man of God, he and all hys companye, and stode before him, and sayde: Beholde, I knowe nowe that there is no God in all the worlde, but in Israell. Nowe therefore take a blessynge of thy seruaunte. But he sayde: *as surely as the Lorde lyueth (before whõ I stande) I wyl receaue none. And whan the other woulde haue constrayned him to receaue it, he woulde not. And Naaman sayde: (Suen as thou wylte, but I beseche the.) Shall there not be geuen to thy seruaunt, as much of this earth as two mules maye beare? For thy seruaunt wyll hence forth offer nether burne sacrifyce nor offeryng vnto any other God, saue vnto the Lorde. But herin the Lorde be mercyful to thy seruaũt, that whẽ my master goth into the house of Rimmon, and doth worshippe there, & leaneth on my hande, & I also worshippe in the house of Rimmon. (Whan I do worshyp, I saye:) in the house of Rimmõ, the Lord be mercyful vnto thy seruaũt because of this thing. Vnto whõ he sayde: go in peace. And whẽ he was departed frõ hym as it were a furlonge of grounde. Gehezi the seruaunt of Elisa the mã of God, sayd: behold, my master hath spared Naamã this Syrian, that he wolde not receaue of his hande those thynges that he offred. As surely as the Lorde lyueth, I wyl rũne after him, & take some what of hym. And so Gehezi folowed Naaman. And when Naaman sawe hym runnynge after hym, he lyghte downe from the charette, to mete him, and sayde: * is all well? He answered All is well. Beholde, my master hath sente me, sayinge: see, there be come to me euen nowe from mount Ephraim two yong mẽ of the children of the prophetes: geue them I praye the, one talent of syluer, and two chaunge of garmentes. And Naaman sayde: with a good wil. Take two talentes, and he compelled hym to bynde two talentes of syluer in two bagges, wyth two chaũge of garmentes, and layed theym vpon two of hys seruauntes, to beare theym before hym. And whan he came into a secrete place, he toke them from theyr hande, and bestowed it in the house, and the men were let go, and they departed. But he went in, & stode before his master. And Elisa sayde vnto hym: whence commest thou Gehezi? He sayde: thy seruaunt went no whither. But he sayd vnto him: went not mine herte with the, when the man turned againe frõ hys charet to mete thee? Is it nowe a time to receaue moneye, to receaue garmentes, olyue trees, vynyardes, sheepe and Oxen, men seruauntes, and maydẽ seruauntes? The leprosie therefore of Naaman shall

A The childzen of the prophetes said vnto Eliſa: Behold, the place where we dwell with the, is to lytle for vs. we wyll therfore go vnto Jordane, and take thence euery man a beame, and builde vs a place, to dwel in. And he answered: goe.
And one sayde: be contente I pray the, and come with thy seruauntes. And he answered: I wyl come, & so he wente with them.
And when they came to Jordan, they cut downe wod. But it fortuned, that as one was fellynge downe of a tre, the axe heade fell into the water. And he cryed, and said: Alas master, it was lente me. And the man of God sayde, where fell it? and he shewed him the place. And he cut downe a stycke, and cast it thyther, & immediatlye the yron dyd swymme. Therfore sayde he: take it vp. And he stretched out his hande, & toke it vp. But the kynge of Siria warred agaynst Jsrael, & toke councell wyth hys seruauntes, and sayde: In ponder secrete place shalbe my remaynynge. And the man of God sente vnto the kynge of Jsraell, saynge: Beware, that thou go not ouer to suche a place, for there the Sirians are lurkynge. Therfore the kynge of Jsraell sente to the place whyche the man of God tolde him, and warned hym of, and saued hym selfe from it, not once nor twyse. And the hert of the kynge of Siria was troubled for this thynge, and he called for hys seruauntes and sayde vnto them: wyll ye not shew me, which of oure men betrayeth me to the kynge of Jsrael? And one of his seruauntes sayde: none my Lord o kynge.
But Eliſa the prophete, that is in Jsrael, telleth the kynge of Jsrael, yea, euen the wordes that thou speakest in thy pryuye chambre. He sayde: go, and spye where he is, that I maye sende and fet hym. And one tolde hym, saynge: beholde, he is in Dothaim. Therfore sent he thither horses and charettes, and a mighty hoste. And they came by nyght, and cōpassed the citie about. And when the seruaunt of the man of God rose vp earlye to go oute: Behold, there was an hoste rounde about the towne with horses & charettes. And his seruaūte sayde vnto hym: Alas master, what shall we do? He answered + feare not, for they that be with vs, are mo then they that be with them. And Eliſa prayed and sayde: Lord (I beseche the) open his eyes, that he may se. And the Lorde opened the eyes of the yōge mā. And beholde, the mountayne was full of horses, & charettes of fire rounde about Eliſa. And when they came downe to him, Eliſa prayed vnto the Lorde, and sayde: Smyte this people (I praye the) with + blindnesse. And he smote thē with blindnesse, accordige to the desire of Eliſa.
And Eliſa sayde vnto them, this is not the way, neyther is this the towne: folow me, and I wyll bringe you to the man whome ye seke. But he led them to Samaria. And it fortuned, that when they were come to Samaria, Eliſa sayde: Lorde, open theyr eyes that they maye se. And the Lord opened theyr eyes, and they saw. And behold, they were in the myddes of Samaria. And the kynge of Jsrael said vnto Eliſa, when he sawe them: My father, shall I smyte them: And he answerd: Thou shalte not smite thē. But smyte those that thou haste taken with thine owne swearde, and with thyne owne bowe. But rather set breade and water before them, that they may eate and dryncke, and go to their master. And he prepared a greate refection for them.
And when they had eaten and dronckē, he sente them awaye: and they wente to their master. And so the souldyoures of Syrya came no more into the lāde of Jsrael. After this it chanced, that Benhadad kynge of Siria gathered al his hoost and went vp, and besieged Samaria. But there was a great dearthe in Samaria: and behold they besieged it, vntyl an Asses head (was solde) for foure score syluer pence, and the fourth parte of a Cab of doues donge, for fyue sycles. And as the kynge of Jsrael was goynge vpon the wall, there cryed a woman vnto him saynge: helpe, my Lorde O kynge. He sayde: yf the LORD do not succoure the: wherwith can I healpe thee? with the barne, or wyth the wyne presse?
And the kynge sayde vnto her: what wylte thou? She answered: ponder woman sayde vnto me: bringe thy sone, that we may eat him to daye, and we wyl eate myne to mo-rowe. + And so we dressed my sonne, & dyd eate him. And I said to her the other daye, bring thy sonne that we may eate him, & she hath hid her sone. And it came to passe that when the kynge herde the wordes of the woman, he rent his clothes, and wente vpon the wall. And the people loked: and behold, he had a sackecloth vnder vpō hys flesshe. Then he sayde: + God do so and so to me, yf the heade of Eliſa the sonne of Saphat shal stande on him this day. But Eliſa sat in his house, and the elders sat by hym, and the kynge sente a man before hym. But yer the messenger came to hym, he sayde to the elders: haue ye not sene howe that the sonne of thys murtherar hath sent, to take away myne heade be circumspecte when the messenger commeth, and shut the doze, and holde him at the doze: is not the sounde of hys masters fete behinde hym? Whyle he yet talcked with them: Beholde, the messenger came downe vnto him, and said: beholde, thys euyll is of the Lozde, and what moze shal I loke foz of the Lozde?

A Then Elisa said: heare ye the wozde of the Lozde: thus sayeth the Lozde, * to mozowe thys tyme shall a buchell of fyne floure be solde foz a sycle, & two buschels of barley foz a sicle, in the gate of Samaria. Then a certayne lozd (on whose hãd the kyng leaned,) answered the mã of god, and sayde: beholde, yf the Lozde woulde make wyndowes in heauen, myghte thys sayinge come to passe? he sayde: Beholde, thou shalte se it wyth thine eyes, but shalt not eate therof. And there were foure leprous men at the entring in of the gate. And they sayd one to another, why syt we here vntil we die? If we say: we wyl entre into the cytie, beholde: the dearth is in the citie, and we shall die therin. And yf we sit still here, we dye also. Now therfoze come, and let vs fal vpõ the host of the Syriãs: If they saue oure lyues we shall lyue: If they kyll vs, thõ are we dead. And so the arose in the nyght, to go to the host of the Syriãs. And when they were come to the vtmoste parte of the host of Syria: beholde, there was no mã there. For the Lozde hadde made the host of the Syrians * to heare a noyse of chariottes, and a noyse of hozses, and the noyse of a great host. In so much that they sayde one to another, lo the kynge of Israel hath hyred against vs the kynges of the Hethites, and the kynges of the Egipcians, to come vpon vs. Wherfoze they arose & fledde in the nyght, and left their tentes, their hozses, and their Asses, and the felde whiche they had pitched, euẽ as it was, and fledde foz their lyues. And whẽ these lepers came to the edge of the hoste, they wente into a tent, and dyd eate, and dzynke, and caried thence syluer, and golde, and rayment, and went and hyd it: came agayne, and entred into another tente, and caryed thence also, and went and hyd it. Then sayde one to another: We do not well thys daye, foz as muche as it is a daye to bryngе good tydynges, and we holde oure peace. If we tary tyll the daye lyght, some mischefe wil come vpon vs. Nowe therefoze come, that we maye go, and tell the kynges houshold. ¶ And so they came, & called vnto the porter of the citie, and tolde thẽ, saying: we came to the pauylions of the Syrians: and se, there was no mãn there, neyther voyce of mã. but hozses and asses tyed, and the tentes were, euen as they were wont to be. And so the man called vnto the porters, & they tolde the kynges house wythin. And the kynge arose in the nyght, & sayde vnto hys seruauntes. I wyll shewe you nowe, what the Syrians haue done to vs. They knowe that we be hungry, and therfoze are they gone out of the pauilions, to hid them selues in the felde, saying: whan they come out of the cytie, we shal eate them alyue, & get into the citie. And one of his seruauntes answered, & sayd: Let mẽ take (I praye you) fyue of the hozses that remayne, and are lefte in the multitude. Beholde, they are euen as all the multytude of Israell that are lefte in the cytie: beholde, (I saye) they are euen as the multytude of the Israelites that are consumed, and we wyll sende, & se. They toke therefoze the hozses of two charettes, and the kynge sente after the hoost of the Syrians, saying: go, and se. And they went after thẽ, euẽ vnto Jozdã, and lo, all the waye was full of clothes and besselles whiche the Syrians had cast from them in theyr haste. And the messengers returned, and told the kynge. And the people went out, and spoyled the tentes of the Syrians. And so it came to passe, that a buschel of fine floure was solde foz a sicle, and two buschelles of barley foz a sycle, * accozdyng to the wozde of the Lozd. And the kyng appointed the lozde (on whose hãd he leaned) to be at the gate. And the people trode vpon him in the gate, and he died: accozdynge to the wozde of the man of God, which he said, when the kyng came downe to him. And so came the thing to passe, that the man of God hadde spoken to the kyng, saying: two buchels of barley foz a sycle, & a buchel of fyne floure foz another, shall be * to mozow this time in the gate of Samaria. Whereunto that lozde answered the man of God, and said: Yea, & yf the Lozde made windowes in heuẽ, might it come to passe? And he sayd: Behold, thou shalte se it wyth thyne eyes, and shalt not eate therof. And euẽ so chaunsed it vnto hym: foz the people troade vpon hym in the gate, and he dyed.

Then spake * Elisa vnto the woman (whose sõne he had restored to lyfe againe,) saying: vp, & go thou & thyne houshold, and sojourne whersoeuer thou canst, foz the Lozde hath called foz a dearth, and the same shall come vpon the lande seuen yeares. And the woman arose, and dyd after the saying of the man of God, and went both she and her houshold, and sojourned in the lande of the Philistines seuen yere. And at the seuen yeres ende, it fortuned, that the woman came agayne oute of the lande of Philistines, & went out to call vpon the kynge for her house & for her lande. And the kynge talked with Gehezi the seruaūt of the man of God, sayinge: tell me I praye the all the greate dedes that Elisa hathe done. He tolde the kynge, howe he had restored a deade man to lyfe agayne: but in the meane tyme the woman (whose sonne he had rayſed vp agayne) cryed to the kyng for her house, & for her lande: And Gehezi sayde: My Lorde O kynge this is the woman, and this is her sonne whome Elisa rayſed vp agayne. And when the kynge asked the woman, she tolde hym. And so the kynge delyuered her a chamberlayne, sayinge: restore thou vnto her all that are hers, and all the frutes of the felde, sence the daye that she lefte the lande, vnto this time. And * Elisa came to Damasco, and Benhadad the kynge of Syria was sicke. And one tolde him sayinge: The man of God is come hither. And the kynge sayd vnto Hazael: * take a present in thyne hande, and go mete the man of God, that thou mayest aske the Lorde by hym, whether I shall recouer of this disease, and so Hazael wēt to mete him, and toke the present with him, and of euery good thinge of Damasco, euen as much as fourtye camels coulde beare, and came & presented him selfe before him, and said: Thy sonne Behadad kyng of Siria hath sent me to the, saying: shal I recouer of this disease? And Elisa sayde vnto hym: go, and saye vnto hym: thou shalte recouer, howebeit the Lorde hath shewed me, that he shall surely dye. And he loked aſyde, and was ashamed, & the man of God wepte. And Hazael sayd: why weepeth my Lorde? He answered: for I knowe the euell thinges that thou shalt do vnto the children of Israell, for theyr stroge cities shalt thou set on fyre, & theyr yonge men shalt thou slay with the sweard, & shalt dasshe out the brasnes of their suckekynge children, & al to rente theyr wemen with chylde. But Hazael sayde: what is thy seruaūt a dogge, that I should do this greate thynge? And Elisa answered: the Lorde hath shewed me, that thou shalt be kynge of Siria. And so he departed from Elisa, and came to his master, which said to hym. What said Elisa to the? He answered: he tolde me, that thou shouldest re-couer. And on the morow it fortuned, that he take a thycke cloth, and dypte it in water, and spredde it on his face, and he dyed, and Hazael reygned in his steade. The fyfthe yeare of Jehozam the sonne of Ahab kynge of Israell. Jehosaphat beynge also kynge of Juda, Jehozam the sonne of Je-hosaphat kyng of Juda, begāne to raigne. 2.pa.21.a xxxii. yere olde was he, when he beganne to raygne, and he raygned eyghte yere in Jerusalem. And he walked in the wayes of the kynges of Israel, as they that were of the house of Ahab: for the doughter of Ahab was hys wyfe, and he dyd euell in the syght of the Lorde. And the Lorde wolde not destroye Juda, and that because of Dauid his seruaūt, * as he promysed hym to geue him alwaye a lyghte amonge hys chyldren. * In those dayes Edom dyd wickedly whē he was vnder the hande of Juda. For they made them a kynge of theyr owne. So Jehozam went to zaier, he and all his charrettes with hym. And he rose by nyghte, and smote the Edomites, which cōpassed hym in, with the captaines of his charettes, and the people fled into their tentes. But Edom rebelled, so that he would not be vnder the hande of Juda vnto this daye. And then Lobnah began to be dysobedyente euen that same tyme. The reste of the wordes that concerne Jo-ram and all that he did, are they not written in the booke of the chronicles of the kynges of Juda? And Jozam rested wyth his fathers, and was buried beside his fathers in the city of Dauid. And * Ahaziahu his sonne reigned in his steade. In the.xii yeare of Jozam the sonne of Ahab kynge of Israel, dyd Ahaziahu the sonne of Jehoram kynge of Juda begyn to raigne. Two and twentye yeare olde was Ahaziahu when he beganne to raygne, & he raigned one yeare in Jerusalem, and hys mothers name was Athaliahu the doughter of Omri kynge of Israel. But he walked in the waye of the house of Ahab, and dyd euell in the syghte of the Lorde, euen as dyd the house of Ahab. For he was the sonne in lawe of the house of Ahab. And he went with Jozam the sonne of Ahab to warre against Hazael kyng of Siria, in Ramoth Gilead, and the Sirians wounded Jozam. And * kynge Jozam wente backe agayne to be healed in Jesrahel of the woundes whyche the Sirians had geuen hym at Ramoth, when he fought against Hazael kyng of Siria. And Ahaziahu the sonne of Jehozam kynge of Juda went downe to se Joza the sonne of Ahab in Jesrael, because he was sycke there.

commeth thether, loke where is Jehu the sonne of Jehosaphat, the sone of Nimsi, and go to him, & make him aryse vp frō amōge his brethren, & carie him to a secret chābre.
Then take the boxe of oyle, & powre it on his heade, & say: thus sayeth the Lorde: I haue anointed the to be kynge ouer Israel.
And then open the doze, and flee wythoute any tarynge. And so the seruaunte of the prophete gat him to Ramoth Gilead, and when he came in, beholde, the captaines of the hooste were syttynge togethet. And he sayd: I haue an errande to the, o captaine.
And Jehu saide: vnto whiche of all vs?
He sayde: to the, o captaine. And he arose and went into the house. And he powred the oyle on his heade, and said vnto him: thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel: * I haue annoynted the to be kynge ouer the people of the Lorde, euen ouer Israell.
Thou shalte smyte the house of Ahab thy master, that I maye aduenge the bloude of my seruauntes the prophetes, & the bloude of all the seruauntes of the Lorde, of the hande of Jezabel, for the whole house of Ahab shall be destroyed, and * I wyll destroye from Ahab, euē him that maketh water againste the wall, and hym that is prisoned and forsaken in Israel: and I wil make the house of Ahab lyke the house of Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat, and lyke the house of Baesa the sone of Ahia. And as for Jezabel * the dogges shall eate her in the felde of Jezrael, and there shall be none to burye her. And he opened the doze, and fled. Jehu came oute to the seruauntes of his lorde, and one sayde vnto hym, is all well? Wherfore came this madde felowe to the? And he sayde vnto them: ye knowe what maner of man it is, and what his communications is. They sayde vnto hym againe: is it not so, tell vs. He said: thus & thus spake he to me, sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde: I haue annoynted the to be kynge ouer Israel. Then they besyde the hozologie hasted, & toke euery man his garmēt, and put it vnder him, and blewe with trompettes, sayinge: Jehu is kynge. And so, Jehu the sonne of Jehosaphat the sonne of Nimsi, cōspired againste Joram. Joram kepte Ramoth Gilead, he and all Israel because of Hazael kynge of Syria: and * kynge Joram returned to be healed in Jezrahel, of the woundes which the Syrians had geuē him, whē he fought with Hazael kynge of Syria. And Jehu sayde: If it be youre myndes, then let no man departe & scape out of the citie, to go: and tell in Jezrahel. So Jehu gate hym into a charette, and wente to Jezrahel, where Joram laye, and Ahaziahu king of Juda was come downe thyther to se Joram.
And the watchmā that stode on the towre in Jezrael, spyed the companye of Jehu as he came, and sayed: I se a companye. And Jehoram sayde: take an horsemā, and sende to mete thē, that he maye aske whether it be peace, & so there went one on horsbacke to mete hym, and sayde, thus sayeth the kynge: is it peace? & Jehu sayd: what hast thou to do with peace? turne the behynde me. And the watchemā tolde, sayinge: the messenger came to them, but he commeth not agayne. Then he sent oute another on horsbacke, which came to them, and sayd: thus sayeth the kynge: is it peace? Jehu answeered: what haste thou to do wyth peace? turne the behynde me. And the watcheman tolde, sayinge: he came to them also, and commeth not agayne, and the drivinge is lyke the drivinge of Jehu the sonne of Nimsi: for he dryueth the charet as he were madde. And Jehoram sayde: make readye. And the charet was made readye. And Jehoram kynge of Israhel, and Ahaziahu kynge of Juda wente oute ether of them in his charet, agaynst Jehu, and met hym in the furlonge of Naboth the Jezraelite. And it fortuned, that when Jehoram sawe Jehu, he sayde: is it peace Jehu? He answered: What peace thoulde there be, so longe as the whoredoms of thy mother Jezabel, and her witchecraftes are so greate? And Jehoram turned his handes, & fled, & said to Ahaziahu: there is falsheed o Ahaziahu. And Jehu tokē a bowe in his hādes, & smote Jehoram betwene the armes, and the arowe wente thozow hys hearte.
And he fell downe flat in hys charet. Then said Jehu to Bidkar a captaine, take him and cast him in the plat of the grounde of Naboth the Jesraelite. For I remembre that whan I and thou rode together in a charet after Ahab his father, the Lorde layed this heuy burthē vpon him. I haue sene yesterdaye the bloude of Naboth, and the bloude of his sonnes, sayde the Lorde & I wil quite it the in this grouñd, saith the Lorde. Now therfore take him, & cast him in the plat of grouñd, accozding to the wozd of the Lorde. But whē Ahaziahu the king

The.x. Chapter.

Ahab had .lxx. sonne in Samaria. And Jehu wzot letters, & sét to Samaria vnto the rulers of Jezraell, to the elders, and to them that bzought vp Ahabs children, sayinge: Nowe whan thys letter commeth to you, ye that haue with you your masters sons, ye haue with you both charettes and hozses: a stronge citie haue ye also, and harnesse: loke whiche of your masters sonnes is beste and moste mete, & set him on his fathers seate, & fight foz youre lozdes house. But they were exceadyngly afrayed & sayde: se, two kynges were not able to stande before hym, howe shal we then be able to stande? And he that was gouernoure of Ahabs house, & he that ruled the citie, the elders also, and the tutoures sente to Jehu, sayinge: We are thy seruauntes: And wyll doe all that thou shalt byd vs: we wyl make no man kynge, therefoze doe thou what semeth good in thine eyes. Then he wzot another letter to thé sayinge: Yf ye be myne, and wyll herken vnto my voyce, then take the heades of the men that are youre masters sonnes, & come to me to Jezraell by to morowe thys tyme. And the kynges sonnes wer. lxx. personnes, and they were with the greate men of the citie, whiche bzought them vp. And when the letter came to them, they toke the kynges chyldren and slue them, euen .lxx. persons, and layed their heades in basshettes, and sent them to him to Jezraell. And there came a messenger, and tolde him, sayinge: they haue bzought the heades of the kynges sonnes And he sayd: let them laye them on two heapes in the entrynge in of the gate, vntyll the morynge. And when it was daye, he went out, and stode, and sayde to all the folke: ye be righteous. Behold, I conspired agaynst my maister, and slue him. But who slue all these? Lerne here, that there shal fall vnto the earthe nothynge of the woorde of the Lozde, which he spake concernig the house of Ahab. Foz the Lozde hathe bzoughte to passe thy thinges that he spake by the hãde of his seruaunte Elia. And so Jehu slue al that remayned of the house of Ahab, in Jezraell: And all that were greate wyth hym, and his kinsfolkes and hys preestes, so that he lette nothynge of hys remayne. And he arose, & departed, & came to Samaria. And when Jehu was in the way to the house wher the shepherdes dyd shere their shepe, he met with the brethrẽ of Ahaziahu kynge of Juda, & sayd: what are ye? They answered: the brethrẽ of Ahaziahu are we, and goe downe to salute the children of the kyng & of the quene. And he sayd: take thẽ alyue. Whom whẽ they had takẽ thẽ alyue, they slue them at the well, whiche was besyde the house where the shepe are thozen, euen two & fourtye men, nether left he any of thẽ. And when he was departed thence, he met with Jehonadab the sonne of Rechab, cõminge agaynst him. And he blessed him, and sayd to him: is thine heart right, as mine heart is true with thine? And Jehonadab answered: Yea, that it is, (yf it be sayth he) then geue me thine hãd. And whẽ he had geuen him his hande, he tooke hym vp to him into the charet, and sayde: come with me, & see the zeale that I haue foz the lord: & so they made him ride in his charet. And whan he came to Samaria, he slue all that remayned vnto Ahab in Samaria, til he had wyped hym oute, accozdynge to the saying of the Lord, which he spake to Elia. And Jehu gathered al the people together, & sayde vnto thẽ: Ahab serued Baal a lytle. But Jehu shall serue him moze. Nowe therefoze call vnto me all the prophetes of Baal, al suche as serue hi, & al hys preestes and lette none be lackynge. And he sayd vnto him that was the keper of the vestry, bringe forthe the garmentes for all the seruauntes of Baall. And he broughte them out garmentes. And when Jehu wente with Jehonadab the sonne of Rechab into the house of Baall, he sayde vnto the seruauntes of Baal: Searche, and looke that there be here with you none of the seruauntes of the LORDE, but the seruauntes of Baal onelye. And when they went in, to offer sacrifice, and burnte offerynge: Jehu appoynted .lxxx. men with out, and sayde: yf any of the men whome I haue broughte vnder youre handes escape, he that letteth F hym go, shall dye for hym. And it fortuned that as soone as they had made an ende of offerynge the burnt sacrifice, Jehu sayd to the men of warre, and to the captaynes: go in, and slepe them, let none come oute. And they smote thē with the edge of the swerd. And the men of warre and the captaynes cast thē out, and went vnto the citye of the temple of Baal, and fette the ymages oute of the temple of Baal and burnte them. And the LORDE sayde vnto Jehu: because thou hast done right well in bringinge to passe the thynge that is right in myne eyes, and hast done vnto the house of Ahab, accordyng to all thinges that are in myne heart, therfore shall + thy children vnto the fourth generacion, syt on the seate of Israell. But Jehu cared not for thys, to walke in the lawe of the LORDE GOD of Israell wyth all hys hearte: For he departed not from the synnes of Jeroboam, whyche made Israell to synne: In those 16 dayes the LORDE beganne to cutte Israell shorte: * And Hazael smote them in all the coastes of Israell, from Jordan eastward, euen all the lande of Gilead, the Gadithes the Rubenites, & them that were of Ma-nalles, from Aroer vnto the riuer of Arnō: euen Gilead and Basan. The reste of the wordes that concerne Jehu, and al that he dyd, and al his power, are they not writtē in the booke of the Chronicles of the kynges of Israel? And Jehu slept wyth his fathers, and they buried hym in Samaria, & + Jehoahaz his sonne raygned in hys steade. And the tyme that Jehu raygned vpon Israel in Samaria, is .xxviii. yeres.

¶ The .xi. Chapter.

AND Athalia the mother of Ahazia-hu when she sawe that her son was deade, she arose, & destroyed all the kinges sede. But Jehoiada the doughter of kyng Joram, & sister of Ahaziahu, toke Joas the son of Ahaziahu, & stale him from amōge the kinges sons that were slayne, & his nource with him, out of a slepinge chābre, and hyd hym frome Athalia, that he was not slayne. And he was with her hyd in the house of the LORDE. vi. yeare. And Athalia dyd raygne ouer the lande. And the seuenth yeare Jehoiada sent and fet the rulers ouer hūdreds, with the captaines, and them of the garde, and tooke them to him into the house of the LORDE, and made a bonde with them, and tooke an othe of them in the house of the LORDE, and shewed them the kinges sonne. And he cōmaunded them, sayinge: this is it that ye muste doe: one thirde parte of you, whole dewtye is to come on the Sat both daye, shall kepe the watche of the kynges house. But Jehoiada the prieſt commaunded the captaynes of the hundredes that hadde the rule of the hoofte: and ſayde vnto them: haue her out without the temple, that ſhe may be within the ranges, and yf any folowe her, kill him with the ſwearde: for the prieſt hadde ſayd, ſhe maye not be ſlayne in the houſe of the Lorde. And they layde handes on her, tyll ſhe came into the waye, by the whych the horſes wente into the kynges palace: and there was ſhe ſlayne: * And Jehoiada made a bonde betwene the Lorde and the kynge, and the people, that they ſhoulde be the Lordes people, and alſo betwene the kynge and the people. And al the people of the lande went into the houſe of Baal, and deſtroyed it, his hil altares alſo, & hys images brake they downe luſtely, and ſlue Mathan the Prieſte of Ball before the aultars. And the prieſte ſet a watch ouer the houſe of the Lord, and toke the rulers ouer hundredes, the captaynes, and them of the garde, and all the people of the lande. And they brought the kynge from the houſe of the LORD: and came by the waye of the gate of them of the garde to the kynges palace. And he ſat hym downe on the ſeate of the kynges. And all the people of the lande reioyſed, and the cytie was in quyet. And they ſlue Athalia wyth the ſwearde beſide the kynges palace. Seuen yere olde was Jehoas, when he began to raygne.

¶ The. xii. Chapter.

And he began to reygne in the .vii. yeare of Jehu. xl. yere raigned he in Jeruſalē: & his mothers name was Zebiah of Beerſeba. And he did that which was good in the ſight of the lord, as longe as Jehoiada the prieſt enfourmed him. But the hylaulters were not taken awaye, for the people offered and burnt incēſe yet vpon the hylaulters. And Jehoas ſayde to the prieſtes: al the ſiluer of the dedicate thynges that be brought vnto the houſe of the Lorde, in currant money, that is to ſaye, the money that euery man is ſet at, and all the money that euery man with a wyllyng hert geueth, and bringeth into the houſe of the Lorde, let the prieſtes take it to theym euery man of his aquaintaunce, to repayre the broken places of the houſe, where ſo euer any decaye is founde. And ſo it came to paſſe, that vnto the .xxiii. yere of kyng Jehoas, the prieſtes hadde mended nothyng, that was decayed in the temple. Then kyng Jehoas called for Jehoiada the Bishoppe, and the prieſtes, and ſayde vnto them: why repayre ye not the broke places of the temple? Nowe therfore, ſe that ye receaue no more money of your aquayntaunce, except ye delyuer it to repayre the temple withal. And the prieſtes conſented to receaue no more money of the people: except to repaire the decayed places of the temple. But Jehoiada the prieſte toke a cheſt, and boored an hole in the lydde of it, and ſet it beſyde the altare on the ryghtelyde, as enerye man commeth into the temple of the Lorde. And the prieſtes that kept the veſſels, put there in all the moneye that was bronghte into the houſe of the Lorde. And it fortuned, that whē they ſaw there was much money in the cheſte, * the kynges ſcribe and the hye prieſte came vp, and tolde the money that was founde in the houſe of the Lord, and put it into a bagge. And they gaue the money ſealed into the hādes of theym that executed the worcke, and that had the ouerſyght of the houſe of the Lorde: and they brought it out to the carpenters, & buylders (that wroughte vpon the houſe of the Lorde) and to maſons and hewers of ſtone: And they boughte tymbre & free ſtone, to repayre the decaye in the houſe of the Lorde, & to all that went out to mende the temple: howbeit there was not made for the houſe of the Lorde, bowlles of ſyluer, inſtrumentes of Muſycke, baſens, trompettes, for any veſſelles of gold: or veſſels of ſyluer, of the money that was brought into the houſe of the Lord: But they gaue that to the worke men, & repaired therewith the houſe of the Lorde. Moreouer, they reckened not wyth them, into whoſe handes they deliuered the money to be beſtowed on worke men: for they dyd theyr buſyneſſe faythfullye. Howbeit treſpaſſe money, and ſynne money was not brought into the houſe of the Lorde, for it was the prieſtes. Then came Hazael, kynge of Siria vp, and foughte agaynſte Geth, and toke it, and Hazael ſette his face to go vp to Jeruſalem. And Jehoas kyng of Juda, toke all the halowed thynges, that Jehoſaphat, Jehoram, and Hoziahu his fathers, kynges of Juda, had dedycate, and that he him ſelfe hadde dedicated, and all the golde that was founde in the treaſures of the houſe of the Lorde, and in the kynges houſe, and ſent it to Hazael kynge of Siria, and ſo he departed from Jeruſalem. The remnaunte of the workes that concerne Jehoas, and al that he dyd, are they not wrytten in the boke of the Chronicles of the kynges of Juda? ¶ The. xiii. Chapter.

A In the. xxiii. yere of Joas the son of Ahaziahu kyng of Juda, Jehoahaz the sonne of Jehu, began to raygne ouer Israel in Samaria seuetene yeare. And he wrought that whyche was euell in the syghte of the Lord, and folowed the sinnes of Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat, which made Israel to sinne, and departed not therfrom. And the Lord was angrye with Israel, and deliuered them into the hande of Hazaell kynge of Siria, and into the hande of Benhadad the sonne of Hazaell all their dayes.

B And Jehoahaz besoughte the Lorde: And the Lorde heard him. For he consydred the trouble of Israell, wherwith the kynge of Siria troubled them. And the Lorde gaue Israel a delyuerer, so that they wente oute from vnder the subiection of the Sirians. And the children of Israell dwelte in their tentes as before tyme. Neuertheles, they departed not frome the synnes of the house of Jeroboam, whiche made Israell synne, but walcked in them. And there remayned an Idolles grone styll also in Samaria. And Elisa putte hys handes vpon the kynges handes, and said: open a window eastward, and when he hadde openedit. Elisa sayde: shote: and he shote. And he sayde: the arow of health of the Lorde: and the arowe of healthe agaynst Siria: for thou shalt smite Siria in Aphek, tyll thou haue made an ende of the. And he sayde, take the arowes: And he tooke them. And he sayde vnto the kynge of Israell: smyte the grounde: And he smote thrise and ceased. And the manne of God was angrye wyth hym, and sayde: thou shouldest haue smitte fyue or syxe tymes [or seuen tymes] and then thou haste smitten Siria tyll thou haddest made an ende of them, where nowe thou shalt smite Siria but thrise. And so Elisa dyed, and they buryed hym, and the souldiers of the Moabites came into the lande, the same yeare. And it chaunced as some of them were buryenge a man, and spyed the souldiers, they caste the man into the sepulchre of Elisa. And the Lord had mercy on them: and pitied them & had respecte vnto them, because of his appoyntmente made wyth Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and wolde not destroy the, neither caste he them from him as yet. So Hazael, the kynge of Siria dyed, and Benhadad his sonne raygned in his steade. And Jehoas the sonne of Jehoahaz went agayne, and tooke out of the hande of Benhadad the sonne of Hazaell, the cities which he had taken awaye out of the hand of Jehoahaz his father, in warre: for thre times did Joas beate him, & restored the cities vnto Israel agayne.

These be also the wordes of the 4.reg.x.f Lorde: which he spake vnto Jehu, sayinge *thy sonnes shal syt on the seate of Jsrael in the fourthe generacion after the. And it came so to passe. Sallum the sonne of Jabes began to raygne in the. xxxix. yere of Azaria kynge of Juda: and he raygned a moneth in Samaria. For Menahem the sonne of Gadi went vp from Thirza, and came to Samaria, and smote Sallum the sonne of Jabes in Samaria, and slue hym and raygned in his steade. The reste of the wordes that concerne Sallum, and the treason whiche he conspyred, behelde, they are wrytten in the booke of the chronicles of the kynges of Jsraell. The same tyme Menahem destroyed Thiplah, and all that were therein, and the coastes thereof from Therzahi. And (because they opened not to hym) he smote it, and rypte vp all theyr wemen with childe. The. xxxix. yere of Azaria kynge of Juda began Menahẽ D the sonne of Gadi to raygne vpon Jsrael, ten yeare in Samaria. And he dyd euell in the sight of the LORDE, and turned not awaye all his dayes from the synne of Jeroboam, the sonne of Nabat, whiche made Jsraell to synne. And Phul the kynge of Assiria came vpõ the lande. And Menahẽ gaue Phul a M. talẽtes of syluer that hys hande myghte be wyth him, and stablyshe the kyngdome in his hãde. And Menahem made a proclamacion for the money in Jsraell, that all men of substaunce shoulde geue the kynge of Assiria sixtye sycles of syluer a pece. And so the kynge of Assiria turned backe againe, and tarryed not there E in the lande. The reste of the wordes that concerne Menahem, and all that he dyd are they not wrytten in the boke of the chronicles of the kynges of Jsraell? And Menahem slepte with hys fathers, and Pekahia hys sonne dyd in hys steade succede hym in the kyngdome. In the fiftyeth yere of Azaria kynge of Juda, beganne Pekahia the sonne of Menahem to raygne ouer Jsrael in Samaria two yere, and did that whiche was euell in the syght of the lorde: and lefte not of from the synnes of Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat, whiche made Jsrael sinne. But Pekah the sonne of Remaliahu, which was a captayne of his, cõspired against him, and smote him in Samaria, euen in the palace of the kynges house with Argob and Aria: and with hym were fiftye men of the Gilaadites: and he kylled him, & raigned in his rowme. The reste of the wordes that cõcerne Pekahia, & al that F he did, behold, they are wrytten in the boke of the Chronicles of the kynges of Jsraell. In the. lii. yere of Azaria kynge of Juda, beganne Pekah the sonne of Remaliahu, to raygne ouer Jsraell in Samaria. xx. yeare, & dyd euel in the syght of the Lord, and turned not awaye from the synnes of Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat, that made Jsrael sinne. In the dates of Pekah kynge of Jsrael, came Thiglath Peleser kynge of Assiria, and toke Jion, Abel, Bethmaacha, Janoah, Kedes, Hazor, Gilead, Galile, and all the lande of Nephthali, and caried the G awaye to Assiria. And Hosea the sonne of Ela conspired treason against Pekah the sonne of Remaliahu and smote hym, and slue hym: and raigned in hys steade in the. xx. yeare of Jothan the sonne of Vziahu. The rest of the wordes that concerne Pekah and all that he dyd, behelde, they are wrytten in the booke of the Chronicles of the kynges of Jsraell. The seconde yeare of Pekah the sonne of Remaliahu kynge of Jsrael, beganne Jotham the sonne of Vziahu kynge of Juda to raygne. Fyue & twentye yeare olde was he when he began to raygne: and he raygned sixtene yere in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Jerusa the doughter of Zadok. And he dyd that whyche is ryghte in the syght of the Lorde: euen accordynge to all as dyd his father Vziahu, so did he. But the hyll auters were not put away: for the people offered & burnt incẽse vpõ the hyllauters: he buylt the hyther dore of the house of the Lorde. The rest of the wordes that concerne Jotham, and all that he did, are they not wrytten in the boke of the Chronicles of the kynges of Juda. In those dayes the Lorde beganne to sende into Juda. Rezin the king of Syria, and Pekah the sonne of Remaliahu. And Jotham slepte with hys fathers, and was buryed with his fathers in the citie of Dauid hys father, and Ahaz his sonne raygned in his steade.

2.Par.a. xxviii.a. THe.xvii.yeare, of Pekah the sonne of Remaliahu kynge of + Israell, Ahaz the sonne of Iotham kynge of Juda, beganne to raygne. Twentye yeare olde was he, when he was made kynge & raygned sixteene yere in Ieruſalem, and did not that whiche was ryghte in the eyes of the Lorde his God, lyke Dauid his father:

Deu.18.b 4.re.21.a But walked in the waye of the kynges of Israell, yea, and made + hys sonne to go thorowe the fyre, after the abhominacions of the Heithen, whome the Lord caste out before the childzen of Israell.

Mat.7.a And he offred and burnte incense in the hil aulters, and on the hylles, and vnder euery thicke tree. * Then Rezin kynge of Syria, and Pekah sonne of Ramaliahu kynge of Israell came vp to Ieruſalem to fight. And they fought against Ahaz. But coulde not ouercome him. At the same time Rezin kynge of Syria broughte Elath agayne to Syria, and rid the Jewes thence.

4.re.14.f And the Sirians + came to Elath, and dwelt therin vnto this daye. So Ahaz sent messengers to Thiglath Pelezer kynge of Assiria, sayinge. I am thy seruaunte and thy sonne, come vp and delyuer me oute of the hande of the kynge of Syria, and oute of the hande of the kynge of Israel, which ryse vp agaynst me. And Ahaz toke the siluer and the golde, that was founde in the house of the Lorde, and in the treasures of the kynges house, and sente a rewarde Esai.8.b to the kynge of Assiria. + And the kynge of Assiria consented vnto hym. For the kynge of Assiria wente vp agaynste Damasco. And when he had taken it, he caryed the people awaye to Kyr, and slue Rezin.

C And kynge Ahaz wente to Damasco, to mete Thiglath Peleser kynge of Assiria. And when kynge Ahaz sawe an aulter that was at Damasco, he sente to Uria the prieſt the paterne of the aulter, and the fashion of it, and all the workemanshyp therof. And Uria the prieſt made an aulter in all poyntes like to the paterne which kynge Ahaz had sente from Damasco: euen so dyd Uria the prieſte make it, agaynste kynge Ahaz came from Damasco. And so, when the kynge was come from Damasco, he sawe the aulter, and the kynge wente to it, and offred theron. And he burnte his burntoffringe, and hys meatoffringe and powred his drincheoffrynge: and sprincheled the bloude of his peaceoffringes, beſyde the aulter, that was by the brasen aulter which was before the Lorde, & set it with out the temple betwene the aulter and the temple of the Lord: and put it on the north syde of the aulteare. And kynge Ahaz commaunded Uria the prieſt, and sayd: vpō the greate aulter set on fyre in the morninge the burntoffringe, & in the euen the meatoffrynge, and the kynges burntsacrifyce D and hys meateoffrynge, with the burntoffrynge of all the people of the lande, and theyr meateoffrynge, & their drincoffringes: and powre therby al the bloude of the sacrifyce offringes. But the brasen aulter wyll I come and se. And Uria the prieſte dyd accordynge to al thinges as kyng Ahaz commaūded him. * And kinge Ahaz brake 3.reg.7.d the sydes of the botomes, and toke the lauer from of them, and toke downe the lauatorye from of the brasen oxē, that were vnder it, and put it vpon a pauemente of stones. And the beyle for the Sabboth (that they had made in the house) and the kynges entrey without turned he to the house of the Lorde for feare of the kynge of Assiria.

The reste of the wordes that conterne Ahaz, what he dyd, are they not wrytten in the boke of the Chronicles of the kynges of Juda? And Ahaz slept with his fathers, and was buryed with hys fathers in the cytye of Dauid: & Hezekias hys sonne raigned in his stede.

In the.xii. yere of Ahaz kynge of Juda, began Hosea the sonne of Ela to raigne in Samaria vpon Israel. ix. yeare, & did that which was euel in the syghte of the lorde, but not as the kynges of Israel that were before him. And Salmanasar kynge of Assiria came vp agaynste him, & Hosea became his seruaunte, & gaue him presentes. And the kyng of Assiria founde treason in Hosea: for he had sent messēgers to Sua kynge of Egypt, and brought no presente vnto the kynge of Assiria, from yeare to yeare: and therfore the kyng of Assiria toke + re.17.f him: & put him in prison. * And then the kynge of Assiria came vp thorowout al the lāde & gat vp against Samaria, and besieged it thre yeare. In the nynthe yeare of Hosea, the + kynge of Assiria toke Sama- 3.Esr.13.f ria, and caryed Israel away vnto Assiria, and put them in Hala, in Habor by the riuer of Goza, & in the cityes of the Medes. For it came to passe, that the chyldren of Israel synned against the Lord their God, whiche had broughte them out of the lāde of Egypte, from vnder the hande of Pharao kynge of Egypt: and feared other gods, & they walked in the ceremonyes of the heathen, whome the Lord cast out before the childrē of Israell, and in the ceremonies, whyche the kynges of Israell had made. And the chyldren of Israell wente about to hyde thyse thynges that were not well, from the Lorde theyr GOD.

And

And they built thē hyl aulters in al their cities, both in the townes where they kept watche, and also in the stronge townes.
And they made thē ymages and groues in euery hye hyl, and vnder euery thicke tre.
And there they burnt incense in all the hil-aulters, as dyd the hethen (whom the lord caried away before them) and wrought wicked thinges to angre the Lorde withal: for they serued mooste vile ydolles, where-Deu.4.c of the Lorde had sayde vnto them. * ye shall do no suche thynge. And the LORD testified in Israell and in Juda, by all the Jer.25.b prophetes, and by all the sears, sayinge: * turne from your wicked wayes and kepe my commaundementes and my statutes, accordynge to all the lawe, whiche I commaunded your fathers, and whiche I sente to you by my seruauntes the prophetes.
Notwithstādyng, they wouldē not heare, Deu.31§ * but rather hardened their neckes lyke to Mal.3.b. the vnbuernesse of their fathers, that dyd not beleue in the lorde their God. For they refused his statutes, and his appoyntment that he made with their fathers, and the ¶ wytnesses (wherewith he wytnessed vnto them) and they folowed vanitie, & became vayne, and went after the hethen that were rounde about them: concerning whom the Lord had charged them, that they shoulde not do lyke them. But they lefte the commaundementes of the Lorde their God, and 3.Re.14.f made them ymages of metall * euen two calues: and made ydoll groues, and worshipped all the hoost of heauen, and ser-Deu.18.b ued Baal. * And they sacrificed their sonnes and their doughters in fire, and vsed witchcrafte and enchauntmentes, euen selynge themselues to worke wyckednesse in the syght of the Lord, and to angre him.
And the Lord was exceadyng wroth with 3.Re.12.d Israel: and put thē out of his syght, * that there was left but the tribe of Juda only.
Neuertheleße, Juda also kepte not the D commaundementes of the Lorde their god, but walked in the ceremonies of Israell, whiche they made. And the Lorde caste vp all the seed of Israell, and vexed them, and delyuered thē into the handes of spoylers, vntyll he had caste them out of hys syghte.
For Israel deuided them selues frome the house of Dauid, and made them a kynge, euen Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat. And Jeroboam drewe Israel awaye, (that they shoulde not folowe the Lorde) and made them sinne a greate sinne. For the children of Israell walcked in all the synnes of Jeroboam, whiche he dyd, and departed not there frome, vntyll the Lorde put Israell awaye out of his syght, as he had sayde by all hys seruauntes the prophetes. And so was Israell caried away out of their owne lande to Assiria, euen vnto thys daye. And 10 the kynge of Assiria brought men frō Babilon, from Cutha, from Aua, frome Hamath, and from Sepharuaim, and put thē in the cities of Samaria, in steade of the childrē of Israell. And they possessed Samaria, and dwelt in the cities therof. And it foxtuned, that at the begynnynge of their dwellynge there, they feared not the Lorde. And the Lorde sent Lyons amonge them, whiche slue them. Wherefore men sayd to the kynge of Assiria: The nations which thou hast translated, and put in the cities of Samaria, knowe not the lawe of the God of the lande, therefore he hathe sent Lyons vpon them: And behold, they slay them, because they knowe not the maner of worshyppynge of the GOD of the land. Then the kynge of Assiria commaūded, sayinge: cary thither one or twayne of the Priestes, whome ye brought thence, and let them go, & dwel there, & teache thē the fashion howe to serue the God of the countreye. And then one of the Priestes whiche they had caryed thence came, and dwelte in Bethell, and taught them howe they shoulde feare the Lorde. Howbe it, F euery nacion made them Goddes of their owne, and put them in the houses of the hilaulters, whiche the Samarians had made, euery nacion in their cities wherein they dwelte. The men of Babylon made Socoth, Benoth: And the men of Cuth made Nergall: And the men of Hamath made Asima. The Auites made Nibbaz, and Tharthake. And the Sepharnites burnt their childrē in the fire for Adrameslech & Anamelech, the Goddes of Sepharnaim. And so they feared the Lorde, and made them priestes of the hylaulters, whiche sacrifyced for them in the houses of the hylaulters. And so they feared the Lorde, and serued their owne Goddes after the maner of the people, whome they caryed thence. And vnto this day they do after the olde maner: and neither feare god, neither do after their ordinaunces and customes, and after the lawe & cōmaundement, which the G lord cōmaūded the childrē of Jacob, * whō Ge.32.c he called Israel. And the lorde made an appoyntment with them, and charged them, sayinge: * Feare none other Goddes, nor Judi.6.b bowe your selues to them, nor serue them, Jer.10.a nor sacrifice to them: but feare the Lorde whiche brought you oute of the lande of Egypt with great power, and a stretched out arme: hym feare, and to hym bowe, and to hym doe sacrifice. The statutes, ordynaunces, law and commaundement which he wrote for you, see that ye be dilygente to do for enemyes, and feare not anye other goddes. And the appoynemente that I haue made with you, see ye forget not, and feare none other Goddes: But the Lorde youre God ye shall feare, and he shall delyuer you out of the handes of all your enemies. Howbe it, they dyd not herken, but did after their olde custome. And so these nacyons feared the Lord and serued their ymages also: lyke as did their children, & their childrens children: euen as dyd their fathers, so do they vnto this daye.

For he claue to the Lord, and departed not from him, but kepte his commaundementes, whiche the Lord commaunded Moses. And the Lord was with hym: So that he prospered in all thynges whiche he tooke in hande. And he rebelled agaynste the kynge of Assiria, and serued hym not. Ecc.48d of kynge Hezekia dyd Sennacherib kyng of Assiria come vp agaynste all the stronge cities of Juda, and tooke them. And Hezekia kynge of Juda, sente to the kynge of Assiria to Lachis, saying: I haue offended: departe from me, and all that thou puttest on me, that wyl I beare. And the kynge of Assiria appoynted vnto Hezekia kynge of Juda thre hundred talentes of syluer, and thirtye talentes of Golde. And Hezekia

And the kyng of Assiria sent Tharthan and Rabsaris, and Rabsake from Lachis to kynge Hezekia with a great hoost against Jerusalem. And they went vp, and came to Jerusalem, and gat them vp, and stode by the conduite of the vpper poole, whiche is in the waye of the fullers felde. And when they hadde called to the kynge, Mat.1.b there came oute to them, Eliakim the sonne of Elkia, whiche was stuarde of houshoulde, and Sabna the scribe, and Joah the sonne of Asaph, the recorder. And Rabsake sayde vnto them: Tel ye Hezekia, I praye you: thus saieth the great kynge, euen the kynge of Assiria: What confidence is thys that thou haste? Nowe therfore, delyuer the wardes to my Lorde the kynge of Assiria, that ye rebell not, and I wyll delyuer the two thousande horsses, yf thou be able to set ridders vpon them? Why thynkest thou scorne at the presence of one of the leaste Dukes of my masters seruauntes, and trustest to Egypt for charettes and horsmen? Moreouer, am I nowe come without the biddynge of the Lorde to thys place, to destroye it? the Lorde sayde to me: Goe vp to this lande, and destroy it. And Eliakim the F sonne of Helkia, and Sobna, & Joab sayde vnto Rabsake: speake (I praye thee) to thy seruauntes in the Syrians language, for we vnderstande it: And talke not with vs in the Jewes tongue, in the eares of thys people that are on the walle. And Rabſake ſayde vnto them: hath my maſter ſent me to thy maiſter and to thee, to ſpeake theſe wordes? Hathe he not ſente me bycauſe of the men, whiche ſyt on the walle, that they maye eate their owne donge, and drynche their owne pyſſe with you? And ſo Rabſak ſtode, and cryed with a loude voyce in the Jewes language, and ſpake ſayinge: heare the ſayinge of the greate kynge of Aſſira: Thus ſayeth the kynge: Let not Hezekia begyle you, for he ſhall not be able to delyuer you out of myne hande: Neyther let Hezekia make you to truſte in the Lorde, ſayinge: the Lorde ſhall ſurely delyuer vs, and this citie ſhall not be geuen ouer into the hande of the kynge of Aſſiria. Herken not vnto Hezekia, for thus ſayeth the kynge of Aſſiria. Weale kyndelye with me, and come out to me. And then eate euerye man of hys owne vyne, and of hys owne fygge tree, and drynche euerye man of the water of hys owne welle, tyll I come, and fette you to as good a lande as youres is: A lande of corne and wyne, a lande of breade and vineyardes, a lande of oyle, of olyue trees, and of honye: that ye maye lyue and not die. And herken not vnto Hezekia, for he begyleth you ſayinge: The Exod.7.d Lorde ſhall delyuer vs. * Hath euerye one of the Goddes of the nacions delyuered hys lande oute of the hande of the kynge of Aſſiria? Where is the God of Hamath, and of Arphad, and where is the GOD of Sepharuaim, Hena and Iua? did they deliuer Samaria oute of myne hande, and what GOD is it amonge al the Goddes of the nacions, that hath delyuered his lande oute of myne hande. Shall, the Lorde delyuer Jeruſalem oute of myne hande? But they that were of the people healde their peace, & anſwered hym not a worde: for the kynge had commaunded, ſayinge: anſwere him not. Thē Eliakim which was the ſteward of the houſhold, & Sobna the ſcribe, & Joad the ſon of Aſaph the recorder, came to Hezekia, with their clothes rent, & tolde hym the wordes of Rabſake.

A ¶ The. xix. Chapter.

SO it came to paſſe, that whē king Hezekia heard it, he rent his clothes, and Eſa.37.a put on ſacke, and came into the * houſe of the Lorde, & ſente Eliakim, whiche was the ſteward of his houſhold, & Sobna the ſcribe, & the elders of the prieſtes clothed in ſacke, to Iſay the prophete, the ſonne of Amoz. And they ſayde vnto hym, thus ſayeth Hezekia: this daye is a daye of tribulacion, and of rebuke and blaſphemye. For the chyldren are come to the byrthe, & there is no ſtrēgth to be delyuered. Peradventure the Lorde thy God wyll heare all the wordes of Rabſake, whome the kynge of Aſſiria his maiſter hath ſent, to raple on the liuinge God, and to rebuke hym with wordes, whiche the Lorde thy God hathe hearde: And lyfte thou vp thy prayer for the remnaūt that are lefte. So the ſeruaūtes of kynge Hezekia came to Iſay: And Iſay ſayde vnto them: So ſhall ye ſaye to youre maiſter: Thus ſayeth the LORD: be not afrayde of the woordes whiche thou haſt heard, with whiche the yonge men of the kyng of Aſſiria haue rayled on me. Beholde, I wyll put him in another mynde, & he ſhall heare tydynges, and ſo returne to Eſa.37.c hys awne lande: * And I wyll bringe to paſſe, that he ſhall fall vpon the ſwearde, * euen in hys owne lande. And Rabſake 2.pa.32.b went backe agayne, and founde the kynge of Aſſiria fyghtyng agaynſt Libna: for he had hearde, how that he was departed frō Lachis. And when he hearde men ſaye of Thirhaka kynge of the blacke mores. Beholde, he is come out to fyght agaynſt the, he departed, and ſente meſſengers vnto Hezekia, ſaying: Thus ſpeake to Hezekia kyng of Juda, ſayinge: let not thy God diſceaue the, in whome thou truſteſt, ſayinge: Jeruſalem ſhal not be delyuered into the hande of the kynge of Aſſiria. Beholde, thou haſt hearde what the kynges of Aſſiria haue done to all landes, howe they haue vtterlye deſtroyed them. And ſhalt thou alone eſcape? Haue the Goddes of the heathen delyuered them, whiche myne auncetriēs C haue wtſtroyed? As Gozan and Haran, Rezeph, and the chyldren of Eden, which were in Bithlaſar? Where is the kynge of Hamath, and the kynge of Arphad, the kynge of the citye of Sepharnaim, and of Hena, and Iua? So Hezekia receyueth the letter of the hande of the meſſengers, and reade it: And Hezekia wente vp in to the houſe of the Lord, and layed it abrode before the Lord. And Hezekia prayed before the lord, and ſayde: O Lorde God of Iſraell whiche dwelleſt betwene the Cherubs, thou arte God alone ouer all the kyngdomes of the earthe, thou haſte made heauen and earth: Lorde, bowe downe thyne eare, and heare: Open Lord thyne eyes (I beſeche the) and ſee: and heare the wordes of Sennacherib, whiche hath ſent thys man to raple on the lyuynge GOD. Of a trueth LORDE, the D kynges of Aſſiria haue deſtroyed nacions, and their landes, & haue ſette fyre on their Goddes. For they were no Godes, but the worke of the handes of man: euē of woode and ſtone. And they deſtroyed them. Nowe therefore, O Lorde our God, I beſeche the, lane thou vs out of hys hande, that all the kyngdomes of the earth may knowe, that thou onely arte the Lorde God. And, Iosiah the sonne of Amos sente Hezekia, sayinge: thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel: that whiche thou haste prayed me, concernyng Sennacherib kynge of Assiria, I haue hearde it. Thys is therfore the worde that the Lorde hathe sayde of him: The virgin, euen the doughter of Sion, hathe despysed the, & laughed the to scorne (O thou kyng of Assiria) the doughter of Jerusalem hath shaken her heade at thee. * Whome haste thou rayled on, and whome hast thou blasphemed? Agaynst whome haste thou exalted thy voyce, and lyfted vp thyne eyes on hie. Euen agaynst the holy of Israell. By the hand of thy messengers thou hast rayled on the Lorde, and sayd: with the multitude of my charettes I am come vp to the toppes of the mountaynes, euen alonge by the sides of Libanon, & I wyll cutte downe the hye Cedar trees, & the lusty fyrre trees therof, and I wyl goe into the lodgynge of his neste, and into the wod of hys playne. I haue digged, and dronke straunge waters, and with the steppe of my going, wyl I drye all the water pooles that are besieged. Hast thou not heard, howe I haue ordeyned suche a thinge a great while a go, and haue prepared it from the begynnyng? And shall I not now bryng it forthe, that it may destroy, and to bryng the strong cities into waste heapes of stones? And the enhabiters of thē shall be of litle power, & faint hearted, and confounded, and * shalbe like the grasse of the felde, or grene herbe, or as the hey on the toppes of the houses: or as the corne that is dmyde, and smittē with blasting, I know thy dwellyng, thy comming out, and thy goying in, (and thy way) and thy furye agaynste me. And because thou ragest agaynste me, & thynkest thy selfe so blessed: Thys is come vp vnto myne eares, and I wyl put my hoke in thy nastrels and my byt in thy lippes, and wil bringe thee backe agayne, the same waye thou camest. ¶ The. xx. Chapter.

ABout that time * was Hezekia sicke vnto the death. And the prophet Isay the son of Amos came to him, & sayd vnto hi: thus sayth the lorde: put thine houshold in an ordre, for thou shalte dye, & not liue. And Hezekia turned his face to the wal, & prayed vnto the lorde, sayinge: I beseech the now, o lorde, remēbre how I haue walched before thee in trueth, and with a perfecte hearte, and haue done that whiche is good in thy sight. & Hezekia wepte sore. And it fortuned, that afore Isay was gone out into the middle of the courte, the word of the Lorde came to him, sayinge: tourne agayne, & tell Hezekia the captayne of my people: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Dauid thy father: I haue hearde thy prayer, & sene thy rearcs. And beholde, I wyll heale thee, so that on the thirde daye thou shalte goe vp into the house of the Lorde. And I wyl adde vnto thy dayes yet fiftene yeare, and wyll delyuer thee and this citie onte of the hande of the kynge of Assiria, and wyll defende this citie for myne owne sake, and for Dauid my seruauntes sake. And Isay sayde: Take a lompe of hygges. And they tooke it & layed it on the booze, & he recouered. And Hezekia sayde vnto Isay. What shal be the signe, that the Lorde wyl heale me, and that I shall goe vp into the house of the Lorde the thirde daye? Isay answered: thys signe shalt thou haue of the lord, that the Lorde wyll do that he hathe spoken. * Shall the shadowe go forwarde ten degrees, or go backe agayne ten degrees? Hezekia answered: it is a lighte thynge for

And Isay the prophete called vnto the Lorde, and he brought the shadow ten degrees backe warde, by whiche it had gone downe in the Dyall of Ahaz. The same season Berodach Baladan the sonne of Baladan kynge of Babilon sent letters & a present vnto Hezekia, for he had heard how that Hezekia was sicke. And Hezekia was glad of them, and shewed them all his treasurehouse, syluer, golde, odoures, precious oyntmente, all the house of his armoury, and al that was founde in his treasures: there was nothyng in his house, and in all his realme, that Hezekia shewed them not. And Isay the prophete came vnto kynge Hezekia, and sayde vnto him. What said these men, and from whence came they to the? And Hezekia sayde: They be come from a farre countrey, euen from Babilon. And he sayde agayne: what haue they sene in thy house? Hezekia aunswered: all the thynges that are in my house haue they sene: there is nothynge amonge my treasures, that I haue not shewed them. And Isay sayde vnto Hezekia: heare the worde of the Lorde: Beholde, the dayes come, that al that is in thine house, & whatsoeuer thy fathers haue layed vp in stooze vnto thys daye, shalbe caryed into Babilon, & nothynge shall be lefte, sayeth the Lorde. And of thy sonnes (that shall proceade out of the, and whiche thou shalte beget) shall they take away. and they shalbe chamberlaynes in the palace of the kynge of Babilon. And Hezekia sayde vnto Isay: welcome be the worde of the Lord which thou hast spoken: And he sayde: shall there not be peace and trueth in my dayes? the remnaunt of the woordes that concerne Hezekia, and all his power, and howe he made a poole, and a conduit, and brought water into the citie, are they not written in the booke of the Chronicles of the kynges of Juda? & Hezekia slept with his fathers, & Manasse hys son raygned i, hys steade.

Manasse was. xii. yere old when he begā to raygne, & raigned. lv. yere in Jerusalē: hys mothers name also was Hephziba. And he did euel in the sight of the lord. euē after the abhominacions of the hethē. whō the lord cast out before the childrē of Israell. For he wente & built vp the hyaulteres, which Hezekia hys father had destroyed. And he reared vp aulters for Baal, and made Idolgroues (as dyd Ahab kynge of Israell,) and worshipped al the hoste of heauen, and serued thē. And he builte aulters in the house of the Lorde, of whiche the Lord sayde: in Jerusalem wyll I put my name. And he builte aulters for all the hoste of heauen, euen in two courtes of the house of the LORDE. And he offered hys sonnes in fire, & gaue hede vnto witchecrafte and sozcerye, and mayntayned wozkers with spirites, & tellers of sozetunes: and brought muche wyckednesse in the syght of the Lorde to angre hi. And he put an ymage of a grone (that he had made) euen in the temple, of whiche the Lord had sayde to Dauid and to Salomon hys sonne, in thys house, & in Jerusalē (whyche I haue chosen out of all trybes of Israell) wyll I put my name for euer. Neyther wyll I make the fete of Israell moue anye mooze out of the lande, whyche I gaue their fathers: so that they will obserue and doe all that I haue commaunded them, and accozdynge to all the lawe that my seruaunte Moses commaunded thē. But they harkened not: & Manasse led them out of the way, to do moze wyckedly then did the heathē people, whom the Lorde destroyed before the children of Israell. And the Lord spake by his seruantes the prophetes, sayinge: Bycause Manasse kynge of Juda hath done suche abhominacions, and hath wrought moze wyckedlye then all that the Amozytes (whiche were before hym) dyd: & hath made Juda synne also with his ydolles. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde GOD of Israell. Beholde, I wyll brynge suche euell vpon Jerusalem and Juda, that whoso heareth of it, bothe his eares shall tingle. And I wyll stretche ouer Jerusalem the squarynge lyne of Samaria, and the plummet of the house of Ahab. And I wyll wype oute Jerusalem, as a man wypeth a dyshe, and whan he hath wyped it, and turned it vp syde downe. And I wyll leaue the remnaunte of myne enherytaunce, and delyuer them into the handes of their enemyes, and they shall be robbed and spoyled of all their aduersaries: euen because they haue done euell in my syghte, and haue angred me, sence the tyme their fathers came outo of Egypte, vnto thys daye. And Manasse shed innocent bloude exceadynge muche, tyll he replenished Jerusalem frome corner to corner, beside his sine wherwyth he made Juda to synne, and to do euell in the sight of the Lorde. The rest of the woordes that concerne Manasse, and all that he did, and his syn that he sinned, are they not writē in the booke of the Chronicles of the kynges of Juda? And Manasse slept with his fathers, and was buried in hys owne house, euen in the garden Vza: and A-nasse did,) & walked in al the way that his father walked in: and serued the idols that his father serued, and worshipped them.

And he forsoke the Lord god of his fathers, and walcked not in the waye of the Lorde.
And the seruauntes of Amon conspired a-gaynst him, and slue the kynge in his own house. And the people of the lande slue all

And the souldyoures of the Chaldees folowed after the kynge, and toke hym in the playne of Jericho, and all his armye were scatered away from hym, (and left hym). So they toke the kynge, and bzoughte hym to Nabuchadnezar the kynge of Babilon, to Ribla, where they reasoned with him. And they slue the sonnes of Zedekia before hys eyes: And he put out the eyes of Zedekia, and fettered hym with two chaynes, and caryed him to Ba-

And the.vii. daye of the.v. moneth whiche is the.xix. yeare of kynge Nabuchadnezar kinge of Babilon, came Nebusaradan a seruaunte of the kynge of Babilon, and chiefe captayne of the men of warre, vnto Ierusalem: & burnt the house of the Lozde, and the kynges house and all the houses of Ierusalem, & all the greate houses burnt he with fyze. And all the soul-diers of the Chaldees that were with the chefe captayne of the men of warre, bzoke downe the walles of Ierusalem rounde about. But the rest of the people that were lefte in the citie, and them that were fledde to the kynge of Babilon, with the remnaunte of the comen people, dyd Nabusaradan the chiefe captayne of the menne of warre carye away: but the captayne of the

And the kynge of Babilon smote them, and slue them at Ribla in the lande of Hamath. And so Juda was caryed awaye oute of their lande. Howe be it, F there remayned people in the lande of Ju-da, whome Nabuchadnezar kynge of Ba-bilon lefte, and made Gedalia the sonne of Ahikam the sonne of Saphan ruler ouer them. And all the captaynes of the soul-dyers, and other men heard, that the kyng of Babilon had made Gedalia gouerner: and therre came Gedalia, to Mazphah: Ismaell the sonne of Nethania, Johannan the sonne of Karea, Saraia the sonne of Thanhumeth the Netophatite, and Jezrania the sonne of Maachati, and their men. And Gedalia sware to them, and to the men whome they had with them, and sayde vnto them: feare not ye bycause ye are the seruauntes of the Chaldees, dwell in the lande and serue the kynge of Babilon and ye shalbe well. But it chaunced in the seuenth moneth, that Ismael the sonne of Nathania, the sonne of Elisama, of the kynges blonde, came and tenne men with him, and smote Gedalia, that he dyed: and so dyd he the Jewes and the Chaldees that were with hym at Mizpa. And al the people, bothe smale and great, and the captaynes of warre arose, and came to Egypt, for they were afrayed of the Chaldees.

Notwithstandynge yet in the seuen and thirtye yeare after Jehoachim kynge of Juda was caryed awaye, the seuen and twenty day of the twelueth moneth, Euilmerodach kyng of Babilon, the same yeare that he began to raygne, dyd lyfte vp the heade of Jehoachim kynge of Juda, out of the prison, and spake kindelye to him, & set his seate aboue the seate of the kynges that were with him in Babilon: & chaunged his prison garmentes. thre hundred, and wounded theym at one tyme. After him was Eleazar hys vncles sonne an Ahohite whiche was one of the three myghtyeſt. He was wyth Dauid at Pasdammim, and there the Philistines were gathered together to battayle. And there was there a parcell of grounde full of barley, and the people fledde before the D Philistines. And they (the three afore said) stept forth into the myddes of the feld, and saued it frō burning, and slue the Philistines. And the Lorde gaue a great bic-torye. And the three of the thyrtie chiefe captaynes wente to a rocke to Dauid, into the cane Adullam.

And the hooste of the Philistines abode in the valley of Rephaim. And whan Da-uid was in the holde, the Philystynes watche was at Bethlehem the same time.
And Dauid longed, and sayde: * Oh that 2.re.23.c one woulde geue me drynche of the water of the well that is at the gate at Bethlehem. And they three brake thorowe the hooste of the Philystynes, and drew water oute of the well, that was by the gate at Bethlehem: and toke it, and broughte it to Dauid. Neuertheleſſe, Dauid woulde not drynche of it, but rather offered it to the LORDE, and sayde: my God forbydde it me, that I should do this thing.
Shall I drynche the blonde of these men, that haue put theyr lyues in leopardye?
(for wyth the leopardye of their lyues they broughte it) therfore he would not drinch E it. And thys dyd these three myghtyeſt.
And Abisai the brother of Joab, he also was Captayne amonge three: for he lyfte vp his speare agaynſte three hundred, and wounded theym, and hadde a name among the three: yea, among thre, he was more honourable than the two, for he was theyr Captayne. Howbe it, he attayned not vnto the (fyrſte) three. Banaia the sonne of Jehoiada (the sonne of a derye strong man) dyd greater actes than Cabzeel: for he slew two stronge Lyons of Moab, and wente downe, and slue a Lyon in a pyt in tyme of snowe. And he slewe an Egyptyan, whose stature was euen fyue cubites long, and in the Egyptyans hande was a speare lyke a Weauers beame. And the other wente downe to hym wyth a wasser, and plucked the speare oute of the Egyptyans F hand, and slewe hym wyth his own speare.
Suche thynges dyd Banaia, the sonne of Jehoiada, and hadde the name amonge the three myghtyeſt, and was honourable amonge thyrtie, but attayned not vnto the (fyrſte) three. And Dauid made hym of hys counsayll. The other menne of armes were these: Asahel the brother of Joab, Elha-nam hys vncles sonne of Bethlehem: Sa-moth the Harodite. Helez the Pelonite: Ira the sonne of Ikes the Thekoite, A-bieser the Anatothite: Sibacai the Huſa-

¶ The. xii. Chapter.

THese are they that came to Dauid to Zikleg, while he yet kepte hym selfe close, because of Saul the son of Cis: and they were very stronge helpers in battel. They were weaponed with bowes, and couldе hurle stones with their right hãd & with the left & shote arowes out of a bow, & were of Sauls brethzẽ, euẽ of Beniamin. The chefest were Ahiezer, and Joas the sonnes of Simaa a Gibeonite, and Iezziel and Pelet the sonnes of Almaneth. Beracah and Iehu of Anathoth. And Ismaia a Gibeonite a mighty mã amonge thirtye and moze then the thirtie. Ieremiah, Iehaziel, Johanan, and Iosabad of Gedoz. Eleusai, Ierimoth, Bealia, Semaria, and Seaphatia, the Haraphites, Elcana, Iesia, Azarael, Joezer, Iosebeam, Hakozim, Joela and Zebadiah the sonnes of Ieroam of Gedud. And of the Gadites there separated them selues, some vnto Dauid into the houlde of the wyldernesse, men of myght, and men apte foz warre, and that couldе handle shilde and speare, whose faces were lyke the faces of Lions, and they were as swifte as the Roes in the mountaynes: Ezer the first, Obdia the seconde, and Eliab the third, Masmana the fourth, Ieremia the fyfthe. Atthai the sixte, Eliel the seuenth, Johanan the eyght, Elisabath the nynth, Ieremia the tenth, and Machbanai the eleuenth. These were of the sonnes of Gad, and were captaynes ouer the mẽ of warre, the smale pursued an hũdzed, and the great a thousande. These are they that wente ouer Jozdan in the fyrste moneth, when he had fylled ouer all hys banckes. And they put to flyght all them of the valey bothe towarde the Easte and west. And there came of the childzẽ of Benjamin and Juda to the holde vnto Dauid. And Dauid went out to mete them, and answered, and sayde vnto them, yf ye be come peasablye vnto me, to helpe me, myne hert shalbe knyte vnto you: But and yf you come to betraye me to myne aduersaryes (seynge there is no wyckednes in myne handes) the God of oure fathers lohe theron and rebuke it. And the spirite came vpon Amasai, which was the chefe amõge thirtye, and he sayde, thyne are we Dauid, & on thy syde thou sonne of Isai: * Peace, peace be vnto thee, and peace be to thyne healpers, foz thy God is thyne helpe. Thẽ Dauid receiued them, and made them heades of companies of the men of warre. And there fell some of Manasse to Dauid whẽ he came with the Philistines against Saul to battell, * but they helped them not. Foz the Lozdes of the Philistines toke aduisement, and sente hym awaye agayne sayinge: he wyll fal to hys master Saul to the ieopardye of our heades. As he went to Zikleg, there fel to him of Manasseh: Adna, Iozabad, Jediel, Michael, Iozabad, Elihu and Zilthai, heades of the thousandes that were of Manasse. And they holpe Dauid against the rouers. Foz they were all myghtye men of warre, and captaynes in the hoste. Foz at that tyme there came one oz other to Dauid, daye by daye to healpe him, vntyl it was a greate hoste lyke the hoste of God. And thar is the numbze of the chefe captaynes that were prepared to battayle, & came to Dauid to Hebzon, to turne the kyngdome of Saul to him, accozdynge to the worde of the Lozde. The chyldzen of Juda that bare shylde and speare, were syxe thousãd and eyght hundzed readye prepared to the warre. Of the chyldzen of Simeon, men of might to warre, seuen thousande and one hundzed. Of the chyldzen of Leui, foure thousande and syxe hũdzed. And Iehoiada was the chefe of them of Aaron, and wyth him thze thousande and seuen hundzed. And Zadock a ponge man stronge and baleaunte, and of his fathers houshoulde, xxii captaines. And of the chyldzen of Benjamin the bzethzen of Saul, thze thousande. And a greate parte of them dyd (vnto that tyme) folowe the house of Saul. And of the chyldzen of Ephzaim. xx. thousãd and eyght hundzed mighty men of war, and famous men in the houshoulde of theyr fathers. And of the halfe trybe of Manasseh xviii. thousande, whyche were appoynted by name to come and make Dauid kynge. And of the chyldzen of Issacar, which were men that had vnderstandynge in the right tyme, to know (how to commaunde) what Israel ought to do. The heades of them were two hundzed, and all theyr bzethzen were at theyr wyll. And of Zabulon that wente out to the battaile, & proceded forth to the warre, wyth al maner of instrumentes of warre, fyftie thousande that were prepared to the warre, without any doublenesse of hert. And of Nephthali a thousãde captaynes, and with them (with thilde and spcare) xxbii. thousande. And of Dan prepared to battayle. xxbiii. thousande & syxe hundred. And of Asser that wente oute to the warre, and kepte the forefronte of the battayle, fourtie thousande. And of the other syde of Jozdā, of the Rubenites and Gaddites, and of the halfe trybe of Manasse, wyth all maner of instrumentes of warre, an hundred and twentye thousande. All these were men of warre, kepynge the forefrōte of the battayle with perfect herte, and came to Hebzon to make Dauid kyng ouer all Israel. And all the reste of Israell was of one accorde, to make Dauid kyng. And ther they wer with Dauid thze daies eatynge and dzinkynge: for their brethren had prepared for them. Moreouer, they that were nye them, vntil Isacar, Zabulon and Nephthali, brought breade on asses, cameles: mules & oxē, & meate, floure, fygges, reasinges, wyne, & oyle, oxen, & shepe, abundauntly. For ther was ioye in Israel.

And Dauid counsayled with the captaines of thousandes & hūdredes, & with all the Lordes, & said vnto all the congregacion of Israel. If it seme you good & to be of the Lord our god, we will take & sende vnto our brethren that are left in all the lāde of Israel, & with thē also, to the priestes & Leuites which are in theyr cyties & suburbes, to gather thē together vnto vs. And we wil bring again the arke of the Lorde to vs: for we regarded it not in the dayes of Saul. And all the congregacio was contente that he shoulde do so, for the thynge semed good in the eyes of all the people. So Dauid gathered all Israell together from Sihor in Egypte, vnto the entrynge of Hemath, to bringe the arke of the Lorde frō Kiriath Jarim. And Dauid went vp & al Israel to an hye place toward Kyriath Jarim, that was in Juda, to fet thence the arcke of the Lorde GOD, that dwelleth bet wene the Cherubes: wher his name is called on. And they caryed the arke of God in a newe carte, oute of the house of Abinadab. And Vza and hys brother guided the carte. And Dauid and al Israell, played before the arcke of GOD with al their might, wyth singynge & harpes, psalteries, and tymbzels, and trompetes. And when they came to the threshing flooze of Chidon, Vza put forth his hande to holde the arke, for the oxen [beynge a lytle wylde] stombled. And the Lord was wroth with Vza, and smote hym, bycause he put his hande to the arke. And there he dyed before God. And Dauid was oute of quyete, bycause the Lorde had rent a rente in Vza, and he called the name of that place, the rentinge of Vza vnto this daye. And Dauid was afraied of God that daye, sayinge: howe shall I bringe the arke of God home to me? And so Dauid brought not the arke home to him to the cytye of Dauid: But caryed it into the house of Obed Edom a Gethite. And the arke of god remayned wyth Obed Edom, euen in hys house thze monethes. And the Lord blessed the house of Obed Edom, and all that he had.

So Hyram the kynge of Tyre sent messengers to Dauid, and tymbze of Cedze trees, with masons & carpenters, to buylde hym an house. And Dauid perceyued that the Lord had confirmed hym kynge bpō Israell, & that his kyngedome was lift vp on hie, bicause of his people Israel. And Dauid toke yet moe wiues at Jerusalem, & begat mo sonnes & doughters. These are the names of his chyldze which were bozne vnto hym at Jerusalem: Samua, Sobab, Nathan and Salomon Jibhar, Elisua, and Eliphalet, Noga, Nepheg, and Japhia, Elisama, Beeliada, and Eliphalet. And when the Philistines heard that Dauid was annoynted kynge vpon all Israel, all the Philistines wente vp to seke Dauid. And Dauid hearde of it, and wente oute agaynste them. And the Philistines came in, and pzaunsed thozow the daley of Rephaim. And Dauid asked counsayle at God, sayinge: shall I go agaynste the Philistines, and wilt thou delyuer them into myne hande? And the lord sayde vnto him: go vp, for I wyll delyuer them into thyne hande. And so they came vp to Baal Perazim, and Dauid smote them there. And Dauid sayde: God hathe deuyded myne enemyes with myne hande, as a man wouldе deuyde water. And ther fore they called the name of that place Baal Parazim. And when they had lefte theyr goddes there, Dauid gaue a commaundemente, and they were burnt with fyre. And the Philistines came together agayne, and ruisched in to the valley. And Dauid asked agayne at God. And God sayde to hym: go not vp after them, but turne awaye from them, that thou mayeste come vpon them, ouer agaynste the perettrees. And when thou heareste a sounde go in the toppes of the perettrees, then go oute to battayle: for God is gone forthe before the, to smyte the hoste of the Philistines, Dauid therefore dyd as God commaunded hym: and they smote the hoste of the Philistines, from Gibeon to Gazer. And the fame of Dauid wente oute into all landes, and the Lorde made all nacions feare hym.

¶ The.xb. Chapter.

A AND Dauid made him houses in the citie of Dauid, and prepared a place for the arke of God, and pitched for it a tente. Then Dauid said: The arke of God ought not to be caried but of the Leuites. For the hath the lord chosen to beare the arke of the Lorde, and to minister vnto him for euer. And Dauid gathered al Israel together to Ierusalem, to fetche the arke of the Lord, vnto his place whiche he had ordeined for it. And Dauid brought together the children of Aaron & the Leuites. Of the sonnes of Cahath was Vriel the chiefe, & of his brethren there were an hundreth .xx. Of the children of Merari, Asaia the chefe: & of his brethren two hundred .xx. Of the sonnes of Gerson, Joel the chefe: & of his brethren an hundred and thirtie. Of the children of Elizaphan, Semaia the chefe: & of his brethren, two hundred. Of the sonnes of Hebron, Eliel the chefe: & of hys brethren, eyghtye. Of the sonnes of Vziel, Amminadab the chefe: and of his brethren an hundred and twelue. And Dauid called Zadock and Abiathar the priestes, and the Leuites, Vriel, Asaia, Joel, Semaia: Eliel and Aminadab: and sayde vnto them: ye that are the principal fathers of the Leuites, se that ye be holy with your brethren, that ye maye bringe in the arke of the lord God of Israel, vnto the place that I haue prepared for it. For bycause ye were not there at the fyrste, the Lorde our God made a rente amonge vs, for that we sought him not as the fashion oughte to be. So the priestes and the Leuites sanctifyed them selues: to fet the arke of the Lorde God of Israell. And the children of the Leuites bare the arche of God vpon theyr shoulders with staues theron, as Moses commaunded, accordynge to the worde of the Lorde. And Dauid spake to the chefe heedes of the Leuites, that they shoulde appoynte certayne of their brethren to synge with instrumentes of musycke, psalteries, harpes & cymbales: that they myght make a sounde, & to synge on hye with ioyfulnesse. And the Leuites appointed Heman the sonne of Joel: and (of his brethren) Asaph the sonne of Berechia: And of the sonnes of Merari and of theyr brethren, Ethan the sonne of Cusaiahu. And with the their brethren of the seconde degree: zacharia & Iaazel: Semiramoth, Jehiel, Vnni, Eliab, Benaiahu, Maasiah, Mathathiahu, Eliphalehu, Mikneiahu, Obed Edom, & Jeiel, porters. So Heman, Asaph and Ethan the singers made a sounde with cymbals of brasse. And zacharia, Aziel, Semiramoth, Jehiel, Vnni, Eliab, Maasiahu and Banaiahu played with psalteryes on an alamoth. Mathathiahu, Eliphalehu, Mikneiahu, Obed Edom, Jeiel and Azaziah, played vpon harpes, an eyght aboue with courage. And Chenaniahu the chefe of the Leuites, was master of the songe, for he taughte other to synge, because he was a man of vnderstandynge. Berechia and Elcana kept the doze of the arke. And Secaniahu, Jehosaphat, Methanael, Amasai, zachariahu Banaiahu, and Eliezer the priestes dyd blowe with trompettes before the arke of God. And Obed Edom & Jehia were keepers of the doze of the arke. * And Dauid and the elders of Israell, & the captaynes ouer thousandes went to fet the arke of the appoyntment of the Lord out of the house of Obed Edom with gladnesse. And when God helped the Leuites that bare the arke of the appoyntmente of the Lorde, they offred seuen oxen, and seuen rammes. And Dauid had on him a lynnen garment, lyke as had also all the Leuytes that bare the arke, and so had the syngers, and Chenania the ruler of the soge, with the singers. And Dauid had vpon hym an Ephod of lynnen. And all they of Israel brought the arke of the Lordes couenaunte with showtynge: and blowinge of the shawme and trompettes, makynge a noyse wyth cymbales, psalteries and harpes. And as the arke of the appoyntemente of the Lorde came into the cytye of Dauid, Michol the doughter of Saul, lokynge oute at a windowe, sawe hynge Dauid daunsinge & playnge, & she despised him in her herr.

¶ The.xbi. Chapter.

SO they brought in the arke of God & set it in the myddes of the tente, that Dauid pitched for it. And they offred burnt sacrifices & peace offerynges before God. And when Dauid had made an ende of offerynge the burnte offerynges & peace offriges, he blessed the people in the name of the Lorde. And he dealte to all Israell (bothe man and woman) a cracknell of breade, and a good pece of flesshe, and a flacket of wine. And he appointed certeine of the Leuites to minister before the Lord, and to repete, and to thanke and praise the Lorde God of Israel. And Asaph was the chefe, and nexte to hym zacharia, Jeiel, Semiramoth, Jehiel, Mathathia, Eliab, Benaia, * Obed Edom, and Jeiel wyth psalteries and harpes. But Asaph made a sounde with cymbales. Banaiahu and Jahaziel priestes blewe with trompettes continually before the Arcke of the couenaūte of God. And that same tyme Dauid dyd be done daye by daye, (and that by theyr courses.) And Obed Edom and hys bre-

Priestes and hys brethren the Priestes, to all that whyche is wrytten in the lawe

Iedithun, and other that were chosen (whose names were expressed) to geue thāof Iedithun were porters. And all the people departed, euery man to his house: and Dauid returned to blesse his house.

¶ The.xbii. Chapter.

AND it fortuned that when Dauid dwelte in his house, he said to Na- 2.Re.7.a than the prophet: lo, I dwel in an house of Cedar tree: but the Arcke of the Lordes couenaunte remayneth vnder cur-taynes. And Nathan sayde vnto Da-uid: do all that is in thyne hert, for God is with the. And the same nyght it fortuned, that the worde of God came to Nathan, sayinge: go, and tel Dauid my seruaunte, thus sayeth the Lord: thou shalt not build me an house to dwel in. For I haue dwelte in no house sence the daye that I brought oute the chyldren of Israel vnto this daye: but haue gone from tent to tente, and from one habitacio to another. And whersoeuer I haue walked wyth all Israell, spake I euer one woorde to anye of the iudges of Israel (whome I commaunded to fede my people,) saying: why haue ye not builte me an house of Cedar tree? Nowe therefore, thus shalt thou say vnto seruaunt Dauid: thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes: I toke the out of the pastures whan thou wētest after sheepe, that thou shouldest be captayne ouer my people Israel. And I haue bene with the, whether soeuer thou haste walked, and haue weded out al thyne ene-myes oute of thy syght and haue made the a name, lyke the name of one of the greatest men that are in the earthe. And I haue ordeyned a place for my people Israel, and made it faste, so that now they may dwell in theyr place, and moue nomore.

Neither shall the chyldren of wyckednes vexe them anye more as at the beginnyng. And sence the tyme that I commaunded Iudges to be ouer my people Israell, I haue subdued all thyne enemyes, & I tolde the, that the Lorde wolde buylde the an house. This also shall come to passe: when thy dates be expired, that thou must go vn to thy fathers, I wyll rayse vp thy seade after the, which shalbe of thy sonnes, and I wyll prepare for hym the kyngdome. He shall buylde me an house, and I wyll stablyshe hys seate for euer: I wyl be his father, and he shalbe my sonne, and I wil not take my mercy awaye from him, as I toke it from hym that was before the. But I wyl set hym in myne house, & in my kingdome for euer, and his seate shalbe sure for euermore. Accordynge to all these wordes, and accordynge to all this vision, dyd Nathan tell kynge Dauid. And Dauid the kynge came and sat before the Lorde, and sayde: what am I (O Lorde God,) and what is myne housholde, that thou haste promoted me thus farre? And yet this semed lytle in thine eyes, O God: But thou haste spoken also of thy seruauntes house, for a greate whyle to come: and haste loked vpon me as vpon a man of hye degre (O Lorde God.) What shall Dauid delyre more of the, for the honour of thy seruaut? For thou haste knowen thy seruaunte: O LORDE for thy seruauntes sake, enõ accordynge to thyne owne heart, haste thou done all thys magnificence, to shewe all greate thynges. Lorde, there is none lyke the, neither is there any God saue thou, accordinge to al that we haue harde with our eares. Moreouer, what naciõ on the earthe is lyke the people Israell, to whome God hath vouchsafed to come and redeme them to be his owne people, and to make the a name of excellencye and terrybleines, with castynge oute nacions from before the people, whõ thou haste delyuered out of Egipte? Thy people of Israell dyddest thou make thyne owne people for euer, and thou becamest theyr God. Therfore nowe Lorde, let the thynge that thou haste spoken concernynge thy seruaunte and hys house, be true for euer, that thou do as thou haste sayde: let it come to passe, that thy name maye be magnyfyed for euer, that it maye be sayde: the Lorde of hoostes is the God of Israell (euen the God of Israell) and the house of Dauid thy seruaunte endureth stable before the. For thou (O my God) haste tolde thy seruaunte, that thou wylte buylde him an house. And therfore thy seruaunte hath founde in his heart to praye before the. ¶ The. xviii. Chapter.

AND after this it fortuned, that Dauid smote the Philistines, & subdued thẽ, and toke Geth & the townes that longed therto, oute of the handes of the Philistines. And he smote Moab, & the Moabites became Dauids seruaũtes, and payde hym tribute. And Dauid smote Hadarezer king of Zoba vnto Hanath, as he went to stablish his dominiõ by the ryuer Euphrates. And Dauid toke from hym a thousãde charrettes, & seuẽ thousãde horsemen, & twentie thousande fotemẽ, & lamed al the charet horses, and reserued of them an hundred charrettes. And when the Syriens of Damasco came to helpe Hadarezer kynge of Zoba, Dauid slue of the Syriens, xxii. thousande, and Dauid subdued Syria Damasco: And the Syriens becãe Dauids seruauntes, and brought him tribute. And the Lorde preserued Dauid in all that he wente to. And Dauid toke the shyldes of golde that were on the seruauntes of Hadarezer, and brought them to Ierusalem. And from Tebhath, and frõ Chun (cytyes of Hadarezer) brought Dauid exceadynge muche brasse. Wherwith Salomon made the brasen lauatorye: + the pyllers, and the belles of brasse. And when Thou kynge of Hemath, hearde how Dauid had beaten all the strength of Hadarezer kynge of Zoba: he sente Hadurã hys sonne to kynge Dauid, to make peace with hym, and to blesse hym, because he had fought against Hadarezer, and beaten him (for Thou had war with Hadarezer) and Dauid brought all maner of iewels of golde, syluer, and brasse with him. And kynge Dauid dedicated them vnto the Lorde, with the siluer & golde that he brought from all nacions: from Edom, from Moab, from the children of Ammon, from the Philistines, and from Amelec. And Abisai the sonne of Zeruia slue of the Edomites in the salte valley. xviii. thousande, and put soulders in Edõ, and al the Edomites became Dauids seruauntes. ¶ The. xix. Chapter.

A 2.Sa. 10.a. AFter this it chaunced that * Nahas the kyng of the childrē of Amon died, & his sonne raygned in his stead. And Dauid saide: I will shewe kindnes to Hanō the son of Nahas: bicause his father dealt kyndly wyth me. And Dauid sente messengers to comforte him ouer the death of hys father. And the seruauntes of Dauid came into the lande of the childrē of Ammon to Hanon, to comforte hym. But the lordes of the childrē of Ammon sayde to Hanon: thynkest thou that Dauid doth honoure thy father in thy syght: that he hath sent cōforters vnto thee? Are not his seruā B tes come to searche, to loke and espye oute the land? Wherefore Hanon toke Dauids seruauntes, (and polde them) and shaued them, and cut of their coates harde by their buttockes, and sent them awaye. And there went certayne, and tolde Dauid, howe the men were serued. And the kyng sent to mete them (for the men were exceadyngly ashamed) and the kynge sayde: tarye at Jericho, vntyll your beardes be growen: & thē returne. And whan the childrē of Ammon sawe that they stanke in the syghte of Dauid: Hanon, and the chyldren of Ammon, sente a thousand talentes of syluer to hire them charettes and horsemē, oute of Mesopotamia, and out of Syria, Maacha, and out of Zoba. And they hyred. xxxii. thousāde charettes, and the kynge of Maacha, and his people, whiche came and pytched before Medeba. And the childrē of Ammon gathered them selues together from their cities, and came to battayll. And when Dauid hearde of it, he sent Joab, and al the hooste of stronge men. And the chyldren of Am C mon came out, and put thē selues in araye to battayle before the gate of the cytye. And the kynges that were come: kepte thē by theym selues backe in the felde. When Joab alsō sawe that the fronte of the battayll was agaynste him before and behind: he chose oute of all the cholen menne of Israell, and put them in aray against the Syriens. And the rest of the people he delyuered vnto the hande of Abisai hys brother, and they put them selues in araye agaynst the childrē of Ammon. And he sayde: If the Syriens be to strong for me, thou shalt socoure me: and yf the childrē of Ammon preuayle agaynste thee: I will helpe thee. Plucke by thyne heārte, and let vs playe the men: for oure peoples sake, and for the cyties of oure God, and the Lorde shall do that which is good in his owne syght. So Joab and the people that were with hym, droue nye before the Syriens vnto the battayle, and they fledde before hym. And whē the childrē of Ammon sawe that the Syriens were fledde, they ran awaye likewise before Abisai his brother, & gat them into the citye. And Joab came to Jerusalem. And when the Syriens saw that they were D put to the worse before Israell, they sente messengers, & set out the Syriēs that were beyonde the riuer, & Sophach the captaine of the hoste of Hadarezer, went before thē. And it was tolde Dauid: & he gathered all Israell, & went together ouer Jordan, and came & set vpon thē. And when Dauid had put him selfe in araye agaynst the Syriēs: they fought wyth hym. But the Syriens fledde before Israell. And Dauid destroied of the Syriens seuen thousande charettes, & xl. thousande fotemen, & killed Sophach the captayne of the hoste. And whē the seruauntes of Hadarezer, sawe that they were put to the worse before them of Israel: they made peace with Dauid: & became hys seruauntes. Neither would the Syriens helpe the childrē of Ammon any more.

ANd it came to passe, that after the A yere was expired, (* about the tyme 2.Sa.11.a that kinges go out a warfare.) Joab caried out the armye of the hoste: & * destroyed the countrey of the childrē of Ammon, and came & besieged Rabba, & destroyed it. But Dauid taried at Jerusalē while Joab smote Rabba, and destroyed it. * And 2.Sa.12 Dauid toke the crowne of theyr king, from of his head, & fonde that it had the weyght of a talēt of gold, & there were precious stones in it: and it was ordeyned for Dauids head. And he brought also exceding muche B spoile out of the citie. And he brought out the people that were in it: & tormēted thē with sawes, & harowes of yrō, & wythother sharpe instrumentes: and so dealte Dauid with al the cyties of the childrē of Ammō. And Dauid, & al the people came againe to C Jerusalē. * After this it fortuned that there 2.Sa.21.b arose warre at Gazer with the Philistines. At whiche tyme, Sobokai, the Husathite, slue Sippai, that was of the childrē * of Ge. 14.a Rephaim: & they were subdued. And there was a battail againe with the Philistines: & Elhanā, the sonne of Jair, slue Lahemi the brother of Goliah the Gethite, whose speare was lyke a weuers beme. And there chaunced yet againe warre at Geth, where as was a mā of a great stature with .xxiiii. fyngers and toes, syxe on euery hande, and syxe on euery foote, and was the sonne of Raphah. But when he defyed Israell, Jehonathā the sōne of Simea, Dauids brother slue hym. These were borne vnto Raphah at Geth, and were ouerthrowen in the hande of Dauid: and in the hand of his seruauntes.

A And Satan stode vp agaynst Israel, & prouoked Dauid to numbre Israel. And Dauid sayde to Joab, and to the rulers of the people: Go ye & numbre Israel frō Beersaba to Dan, & bring it to me that I may know the nūbre of thē. And Joab answered: the Lorde make his people an hundred tymes so manye mo as they be. But my Lorde, O kynge, are they not all my lordes seruauntes? why then doth my Lorde requyre thys thinge? why wyll my Lorde be a cause of trespasse to Israell? Neuertheles, the kynges worde preuayled agaynst Joab. And Joab departed, and walcked thorowout all them of Israel, and came to Jerusalem agayne, and gaue the numbre of the coumpte of the people vnto Dauid. And all they of Israell were a thousande thousande, & an hundred thousande men that drue swearde: and Juda was. cccc. lxx. thousande menne that drue swearde: But the Lewites and Benjamin counted he not amonge them. For the kynges worde was abhomynable to Joab. And the Lorde was displeased wyth thys thyng, and smote Israel. And Dauid sayde vnto God: I haue synned exceadynglye in doynge thys thynge. And nowe (I beseche thee,) do awaye the wyckednesse of thy seruaūte, for I haue done very foolysshly. And the Lorde spake vnto Gad, Dauids sear, saying: goe, and tell Dauid, saynge: Thus sayeth the Lorde: I geue thee the choyse of thre thynges: choose the one of them, that I may do vnto the. And Gad came to Dauid, and sayde vnto hym: Thus sayeth the Lord: Choose the, either thre yeares famyshmente, or three monethes to be destroyed before thyne aduersaryes, and that the swearde of thyne enemyes maye ouertake thee, or elles the swearde of the Lorde, and pestylence in the lande three dayes: and the aungel of the Lorde destroyng thorowout all the coastes of Israell. And nowe aduyse thy selfe, what worde I shall bring againe to hym that sente me. And Dauid sayd vnto God. I am in an exceadynge straite: Let me fall nowe into the hande of the Lorde, for passynge greate are hys mercyes: but let me not fall into the hande of men. So the Lorde sente pestilence vpon Israel, and there wer ouerthrowē of Israel. lxx. thousande men. And God sente the aungell in C to Jerusalē to destroy in it. And as he was aboute to destroy, the Lorde beheld, & had compassyon on the euyll, and sayde to the aungell that destroyed it: it is ynoughe, let nowe thyne hande cease. And the aungell of the Lorde stode by the threshynge flooze of Oznan the Jebusite. And Dauid lyft vp his eyes, and sawe the aungel of the Lorde stande betwene the earth and heauen, hauynge a drawen swearde in his hand, stretched oute towarde Jerusalem. Then Dauid and the elders of Israel, whyche were clothed in sacke, fell vpon theyr faces. And Dauid sayd vnto God: is it not I that commaunded the people to be numbred? It is I that haue synned and done euell in dede, and what haue these sheepe done? let thyne hande (O Lorde my God) be on me, and on my fathers houle, but not on thy people, that they shoulde be punyshed. And the aungell of the Lorde commaūded Gad, to saye to Dauid, that Dauid shoulde goe vp, and set vp an aultare vnto the Lord, in the threshynge flooze of Oznan the Jebusite. And Dauid wente vp, accordynge to the sayynge of Gad, whyche he spake in the name of the Lorde. And Oznan turned aboute, and sawe the aungel, and his foure sōnes were with him, & hid thē selues: But Oznan was threshynge wheate. And as Dauid came to Oznan, Oznan loked, and sawe Dauid, & went out of the threshyng flooze, and bowed hym selfe to Dauid, with his face to the grounde. And Dauid sayde to Oznan: gyue me the place of the threshynge flooze, that I maye buylde an aulter therin, vnto the Lorde. Thou shalte geue it me for as much money as it is worth, that the plage may ceasse frō the people. And Oznan sayde vnto Dauid: take it to thee, and let my Lorde the kynge do that whyche semeth good in his eyes. Lo, I geue the oxen also for burntesacrifyces, and the threshyng sleades for woode, and wheate for meatoffrynges: I geue it all. And kyng Dauid sayde to Oznan: not so, but I wyll bye it for as muche money as it is worthe. For I wyll not take that whyche is thyne D for the Lorde, nor offre burntoffrynges without cost. And so Dauid gaue to Oznan for that place, sixtes of golde. vi. hundred by weyght. And Dauid buylte there an aultes vnto the Lorde, and offred burntoffrynges and peaceoffrynges, and called vpon the Lorde, and he hearde hym from heauen in fyre, vpon the aultre of burntoffryng. And when the Lorde had spoken to the aungell; he put vp hys swerd agayne into the sherd of it. At that tyme when Dauid sawe that the Lozd had hearde him in the threschyng flooze of Oman the Jebusite, he vsed to offre there. Foz the tabernacle of the Lozde which Moses made in the wildernesse, and the aultare of burntofferyng, were at that season in the hyll of Gibeon. And Dauid coulde not goe befoze it, to aske counsail at God, foz he was afrayde of the swerd of the aungel of the Lozde.

A Nd Dauid sayde: this is the house of the Lozde God, and this is the alter foz the burntoffryng of Israell: And Dauid cõmaunded to gather togither the straũgers that were in the lande of Israel, and he set malons to hewe fre stone foz the buylding of the house of God. And Dauid prepared plẽtie of yron foz nayles: and dozes of the gates, & to ioyne withall, and aboũdaũce of brasse without weight, & Cedze trees without numbze: foz the Zidons and they of Tyze broughte muche Cedze wood to Dauid. And Dauid sayde: Salomon my sonne is yong and tender, and the house that is to be buylte foz the Lozde, muste exceade in greatnesse, that it may be spoken of, and praysed in all landes. I wyll therfoze make ordynaunce foz it. And so Dauid prepared manye thynges befoze his deathe. And he called Salomon hys sonne, and charged him to buylde an house foz the Lozde God of Israell. And Dauid sayde to Salomon: *my sonne, I thoughte (as it was in myne herte) to buylde an house vnto the name of the Lozde my God. But the wozde of the Lozd came to me, saying: thou hast shed much blond, and hast made great battayles: thou shalte therefoze not buylde an house vnto my name: foz thou hast shed much blond vpon the earth in my sight. Beholde, a sonne is bozne to the, and he shall be a man of reste, foz I wyll geue him rest frõ al his enemies rounde about. Foz hys name is Salomon, & I wyll sende rest and peace vpon Israell in hys dayes. He shall buylde an house foz my name, and he shalbe my sõne, and I wylbe hys father, and will prepare the seate of his kyngdome vpon Israell foz euer. Nowe therfoze my sonne, the Lozde be with the, and prosper the, and thou shalt buylde the house to the name of the Lozde thy God, as he hathe sayde of the. And the Lozde shall gyue the wisedome and vnderstandyng, & shal geue the commaundementes foz Israell that ye maye kepe the lawe of the Lozde thy God. Foz then thou shalte prospere: euen when thou takest hede, and fulfyllest the statutes and lawes whiche the Lozde charged Moses with foz Israell. Plucke by thyne herte therfoze, and be stronge, dreade not, nor be dyscouraged. Beholde, in myne aduersite haue I also prepared foz the house of the Lozde, an hundred thousande talentes of golde, and a thousande thousande talentes of syluer, and as foz brasse and yron, it can not be numbred: foz it is very muche. And I haue prepared tymbre and stone, & thou mayest prouyde moze thereto. Moreouer, thou hast workemen with thee ynow, and malons and carpenters to worke in stone & tymbre, and many men that be actyue foz euery worcke. And of gold, syluer, brasse, & yron, there is no numbre. Vp therfoze, and be doynge, and the Lozde shalbe with thee. And Dauid commaunded all the Lozdes of Israell to helpe Salomon hys sonne, sayinge: Is not the Lozde your God with you? And hathe he not geuen you reste on euery syde? Foz he hath geuen the enhabitoures of the lande into my hande, and the lande is subdued befoze the Lozde, and befoze hys people. Nowe therfoze set youre hertes & your soules to seke the Lozd your God. Vp, and buylde ye the temple of the Lozde God, to bryng the arcke of the couenaunt of the Lozde, and the holy vessels of God, into the house so buylte foz the name of the Lozde.

SO when Dauid was old & ful of dayes, *he made Salomon his sonne kynge ouer Israel. And then he gathered togither al the lozdes of Israel, with the prestes & the Leuites. ¶ The. xxix. Chapter.

AND Dauid the kynge saide vnto all the congregacyõ: God hath specyally chosen Salomõ my sonne, whyche is yet yong & tender, and the worck is great: for the house shall not be for mã, but for the Lord god. Moreouer, I haue prepared with al my might for the house of god, golde for vesselles of golde, syluer for them of syluer, braste for thynges of braste, yron for thynges of yron, and wood for thynges of wood: and Onix stones, and stones to be set, glysterynge stones, and of dyuerse colloure, and all maner of precyous stones, and marble stones in greate aboundaunce. And because I haue lust to the house of my God: I haue of myne owne proper good, of golde & syluer, which I haue seuerally, geuen to the house of my God, beside all that I haue prepared for the holy house, euen thre thousande talentes of golde, of Ophir, and seuen thousande talentes of tryed syluer, to ouerlaye the walles of the

And whosoeuer is wylling, may thys daye consecrate his hande vnto the Lorde. And so the auncyente fathers, and the lordes of the tribes of Israell, the captaynes of thousandes and hundredes, wyth the lordes that were rulers ouer the kynges worcke, were willyng, and gaue for the seruice of the house of God, fyue thousande talentes of golde, and ten thousande peces of golde, and ten thousande talentes of syluer, and. xviii. thousande talentes of braste, and one hundred thousande talentes of yron. And they wyth whom precious stones were founde, gaue them to the treasure of the house of the Lorde, by the hande of Jehiel the Gersonite. And the people reioysed, when they were so wyllyng to geue C their goodes, and with a perfect herte they offered vnto the Lorde. And Dauid the kynge reioysed with great gladnesse. And Dauid blessed the Lorde before al the congregacyon, and sayde: Blessed be thou Lorde God of Israel, our father from euer and for euer. Thyne (O Lorde) is greatenesse, and powre, glorye, byctorye, and prayse: for all that is in heuē, and in earth is thine, and thyne is the kyngdome, (O Lorde) and thou excellest aboue al, euen as the heade of all. And richesse, and honour come of the, and thou raygnest ouer al, and in thyne hande is power and strength, and in thyne hande it is to make greate, and to geue strength vnto all. Our dayes on the earthe also, are but as a * shadowe, and there is none abydinge. O Lorde our God, al this stuffe that we haue prepared to buyld the an house for thy holy name, commeth of thine hande, and is al thyne. (I wote also my GOD) that thou tryest the heartes, and hast pleasure in vnfaynednesse. And in the vnfaynednesse of myne heart. I haue willigly offred al these thinges. And nowe I haue sene thy people whiche are founde here, to offre vnto thee wyllyngly, and with gladnes. O lord god of Abrahām, Isahac, and of Israell oure fathers, kepe thys for euer. As the begynnynge of the thoughtes of the hearte of the people, and prepare theyr heartes vnto the. And geue vnto Salomon my sonne, a perfect heart to kepe thy commaundementes, thy testymonies, and thy statutes, and to do al, & to buyld the house for the which I haue made prouision. And Dauid sayde to all the congregacyon: Nowe blesse the Lorde your God. And al the congregacion blessed the Lorde GOD of theyr fathers, and bowed downe theyr heades, and worshipped the Lord, and the kyng. And they offred offerynges vnto the Lorde. And on the morowe after the sayde daye, they offered burntofferinges vnto the lord, euen a thousande younge oxen, a thousande rammes, and a thousande shepe, wyth theyr drynkeoffrynges. Many sacrifyces offred they for all Israel, and dyd eate & dryncke before the Lord the same daye: wyth great gladnes. And they made Salomon the sonne of Dauid kynge the seconde tyme, and annoynted him prynce before the lord, and Sadock to be the hyghe preste. * And Salomon sate on the seate of the Lorde, and was kynge in steade of Dauid hys father, and prospred: and all they of Israell obeyed hym. And all the lordes and men of power, and all the sonnes of kyng Dauid, submitted them selues: And were vnder kynge Salomon. * And the LORD magnified Salomon in dignitie, in the sight of all them of Israell, and gaue hym so glorious a kyngdom, as no kynge had before him in Israell. And so Dauid the sonne of Isay raygned ouer al Israel. And the space that he raygned ouer Israell was, fourtie yeare, seuen yeare raygned he in Hebron, & xxxiii. yeare raygned he in Ierusalem. And he died in a goodage: Full of dayes, ryches and honour. And Salomon his sonne raygned in hys steade. The actes of Dauid the kynge, first and laste: beholde, they are written in the boke of Samuell the sear, and in the booke of Nathan the prophete, and in the booke of Gad the sear, wyth all hys kyngdome, and power and tymes, that wente ouer hym, and ouer all Israell, and ouer al the kyngdomes of the earth.

Nowe therfore, the wheat and barley, oyle, and wine, which my Lo:de hathe spoken of, let hym sende vnto hys seruauntes. And we wyll cut wood in Libanon, as muche as thou shalt nede, & wyl bringe it to the, in shippes by sea to Japho, frome whence thou mayest cary them to Ierusalem. bred. And they were founde an hundred and liij. thousande and fyre hundred. And he set lxx. thousande of them to beare burthens, and. lxxx. thousande to hewe stones in the mountaine: and three thousande, & fyre hundred officers, to set the people a worcke.

A And Salomon began to buylde the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem, in i. par. 21. d mount Moria, * where (the Lord) appeared vnto Dauid his father, euen in the place that Dauid prepared in the threshynge floure of Oman the Jebusite. And Acte. 7. f. & 13. rr. 6. a he * began to buylde in the seconde daye of the seconde moneth, & the fourth yere of his reigne. And these are the paterns whereby Salomon was instructe to buylde the house of God. The length was threscore cubytes after the old measure, & the bredth. xx. cubites. The porch, that was in bredth as large as the temple, had. xx. cubites: & the heigth was an hundred and. xx. cubites: And he ouerlayed it on the inner syde wyth pure B golde. And the greater house he syled wyth firre tree, which he ouerlayed with the best gold, & graued therto palme trees & cheynes. And he ouerlaid the house wyth precious stone beautifully. And the golde was gold of Parnaim. The house (I say) the beames, postes, walles and doores thereof, ouerlayed he wyth golde, and made grauen worke vpon the walles. And he made the house most holy, whose length was twenty cubites, lyke to the breadeth of the house, and the breadeth therof was also twentye cubytes. And he ouerlayde it with good golde, euen with syxe hundred talentes. And the weyght of the nayles of golde was fyftie sycles. And he ouerlayed the vpper chã- C bres wyth golde. * And in the house most Exr. 25. b. holye, he made two Cherubins of ymage worcke, lyke children, and ouerlayed them with golde. And the wynges of the Cherubs were. xx. cubites long. The one wing was fyue cubytes, reachynge to the wal of the house, and the other wynge was lykewyse fyue cubites, reachynge to the wyng of the other Cherub. And euen so the one wynge of the other Cherub was fiue cubites, reachynge to the wall of the house, and the other wynge was fiue cubytes also, and reached to the wynge of the other Cherub. So that the wynges of the sayde Cherubs were stretched out twentye cubites.

And they stode on their fete, and looked inwardes. And he made a fore hangynge of Exod. 25. 2. Reg. 3. 7 yelow silck, purple, cremosin, & fine white, & caused the pictures of cherubs to be brodred theron. And he made before the house two pylleres of fyue and thyrtye cubytes hygh. And the head that was aboue on the toppe of euery one of thē, was fiue cubites, and he made chaynes of wrethen worcke for the quere, and put theim on the heades of the pylleres, and made an hundred pomegranates, and put them on the cheynes. And he reared vp the pylleres before the temple: one on the righte hande: and the other on the left: and called the right, Jachyn, and the lefte, Boaz.

And he made an aulter of brasse. xx. cubites longe, & xx. cubites brode, A and. x. cubites hie. * And he caste a 3. rr. 7. d brasen Lauatory of. x. cubites frō brym to brym, round in cōpasse, and. v. cubites hiet & a line of. xxx. cubites did cōpasse it roūde about. And vnder it was the fashion of oxen, which the dyd compasse it rounde about: with. x. cubites dyd they compasse the Lauatory rounde about, and there were two rowes of oxen which were cast of lyke molten worke. And it stode also vpon. xii. oxē: thre loked toward the North, thre toward the west, thre towarde the south, and three towarde the East: and the Lauatory was set vpon them, and all theyr backes were toward the Lauatory And the thickest of it was an hand bred, & the brim like the brim of a cuppe with floures of lylyes. And it re- B ceyued and helde thre thousande bates. 3. rr. bii. c * And he made ten lauers, and put fiue on the right hand, & fiue on the left, to washe and clense in them, suche thynges as they offered for a burntoffryng. But the greate lauatory was for the preistes to washe in. And he made ten candelsticks of gold (according to the paterne that was geuen of them,) & put thē in the temple: fyue on the right hand: & fiue on the left. And he made also ten tables, & put them in the temple: v. on the right side, & fiue on the lefte. And he made an hundred basens of golde: And he made the courte of the Preystes, and the greate court and dores to it: and ouerlayde the dores of theym wyth brasse. And he set C the greate Lauatory on the ryghte side of the East ende, ouer agaynste the South. And Hyram made pottes, shouelles, and basens, and fynyshed the worcke that he was appoynted to make, for kynge Salomon in the house of God. The two pylleres, the couerynges, or two heades, on the toppes of the pylleres: and the two wrethes to couer the two scalpes or heades that were on the toppes of the pylleres: and foure hundred pomegranates on the two wrethes, two rowes of pomegranates on one wrethe, to couer the two toppes, or heades that were on the pylleres. And he made two bottomes, and lauers made hypon the bottomes: the greate Lauatorye, and twelue oxen vnto it: Pottes also and shouelles, flesshokes, and all these vesselles dyd Hyram (hys father) make to kynge Salomon, for the house of the LORD, of bryghte brasse. In the playne of Jordan D dyd the kynge caste them, euen in the claye grounde that is betwene Socoth and Zaredatha. And Salomon made all these vesselles in greate aboundaunce, for the weyghte of brasse coulde not be rekened.

And Salomon made all the vesselles that were for the house of God: the golden aulter also, and the tables to set the shewbread vpon. Moreouer, the candelsticles wyth their lampes (to burne after the maner before the quere) and that of precyous golde: and the floures and the lampes, & that perfect golde:
and the dressynge knyues, basens, spones, and censers of pure golde. And (he made) the dore of the temple, and the inner dores within the place most holye, and the inner dores of the temple wer gylted. And so was al the worcke that Salomon made for the house of the Lord fynished.

3. Re. 7. 8 AND so all the worke that Salomon Dauid: whiche is Sion. Wherefore, all the men of Israell resorted vnto the kynge in the feaste, euen in the seuenth moneth.

26 And all the elders of Israell came, and the Leuites toke vp the arke. And the priestes and the Leuites broughte away the arke & the tabernacle of wytnesse, and all the holy vesselles that were in the tabernacle, & they bare them. And kynge Salomon, and all the congregacion of Israel that were assembled vnto him before the arke, offred shepe, and oxen, so many, that they coulde not be tolde nor numbred for multitude. And the priestes broughte the arke of the appoyntement of the Lorde vnto his place, euen into the quere of the Temple, wythin the place most holy, & set it vnder the wynges of the Cherubs, that the Cherubs stretched oute their wynges ouer the place of the Arcke, and the Cherubs couered bothe the Arcke and her barres aboue on hye. And the barres of the arke were so longe, that the hea-des of the barres were sene wythoute the Arcke within the quere, but not wythout. C And ther the Arcke remayned vnto thys were come oute of the holy place (the sanc-tuarye was fylled wyth smoke) for all the priestes that were present, were sanctyfy-ed, and dyd not then wayte by course, that both the Leuites, and the syngers vnder D Asaph, Heman and Jeduthun, were appoin ted to sundrye offices, with their children & brethren, and were arayed in fyne whyte, hauyng Symbales, Psalteryes, & harpes, and stode at the East ende of the alter: and by them an hundred and twentye priestes, blowyng with trompettes. And the trom-pet blowers & the syngers so agreed, that it semed but one voice in praising & thanking the Lord. And when they lift vp their voyce with the trompettes, symbales, and other instrumentes of musycke: and when they praysed the Lord, (and sayde: Howe that he is good, and that his mercy laseth euer: the house of God was fylled wyth a cloude: so that the priestes coulde not endure to minister, by the reason of the cloud.

For the Maiestie of the Lord had filled the house of God.

AND * when Salomon had made an ende of prayinge, there cãe downe fire frõ heuẽ & cõsumed the * burnt offrynge & the sacrifyces. And the house was fylled with the glory of the Lord, and the priestes coulde not go into the house of the Lorde, because the glorye of the Lorde had fylled the Lordes house. And when * I the children of Jsrael sawe howe the fyre, and the glory of the LORD came downe vpon the house, they fell downe flat vpon theyr faces to the earth, vpõ the pauem ẽt and worshipped & confessed vnto the Lord that he is gracious, and that his mercy la-B steth euer. And the kynge and all the people offered sacrifices before the Lorde. And kynge Salomon offered a sacrifice of. xxii. thousande oxen, and an hundred & twentye thousande shepe. And so the kynge and all the people dedicated the house of GOD.

And the priestes wayted on their offices, and the Leuites had the instrumentes of musike of the Lord, whyche kynge Dauid had made to confesse vnto the Lorde, that his mercy lasteth euer: playinge a Psalme of Dauid with their hande. And the priestes blewe with trompettes before them, and all they of Jsraell stode. Moreouer, Salomon halowed the myddle of the courte, that was before the LORDE, for there he offered burnt offrynges, & the fat of the peaceoffringes, because the brasen altare which Salomon had made, was not able to receyue the burnteoffrynges & the meatoffringe & the fat. And when the Quene of Saba had ſene the wiſedome of Salomon: & the houſe that he had builte, and the meate of hys table: the ſytetynge of hys ſeruauntes, and the ſtandynge of hys wayters, their apparel, hys butlars, theyr apparell, hys goynge vp, by the whyche he wente into the houſe of the LORDE, there was no mooze ſpirite in her. And ſhe ſayde to the kynge: The ſayinge, whyche I hearde in myne owne lande of thyne actes, and of thy wyſedome is true.
18 I beleued not the wordes of them, tyll I came, and myne eyes had ſene it. And beholde, the one halfe of thy wyſedome was not tolde me: for thou exceadest the fame that I hearde. Happy are thy men, & happy are these thy seruauntes which stande before the alwaye, and heare thy wysedome. Blessed be the Lorde thy God, whiche had lust to the, to set the kinge on his seat, that thou myghtest be kynge: ordeyned by the Lorde thy God. Because thy God louyth Israell, and hathe delyte to make them continue euer: therfore made he the kynge ouer them: to do ryghte and equitie. And she gaue the kinge an hundred and.xx. talentes of golde, and of spyces exceadynge greate abundaunce and precious stones, neyther was there anye more suche spyce, as the Quene of Saba gaue kynge Salomon. And the seruauntes of Hiram and the seruauntes of Salomō which brought golde from Ophir brought also algume wood and precious stones. And the kynge made of the Algume wood steyres in the house of the Lorde, and in the kynges palace, and harpes and psalteries for syngers. An there was no suche wood sene before in the lande of Juda. And kynge Salomon gaue to the Quene of Saba euerye pleasaunte thynge that she asked, but not so muche as she brought vnto the kynge. And so she turned and went away to her owne lande wyth her seruauntes.

The weyghte of golde that came to Salomon in one yere, was sixe hundred. lxbi. talentes of golde, beside that whyche chapmen and marchauntes brought, and all the kynges of Arabia and rulers of that countrye brought golde and syluer to Salomon. And kynge Salomon made two hundred buckelers of beaten golde, and syxe hundred sycles of beaten golde were spent vpon one buckler, and thre hundred shyldes made he of beaten golde and one shylde coste thre hundred peces of golde: & the kynge put them in the house that was in the forest of Libanon. And the kynge made a greate seate of Iuorye: and ouerlayed it with pure golde. And there were syxe steppes to the seate, wyth a fote stole of golde fastened to the seate: and pommelles on eche syde of the sittinge place, and two Lyons stand ynge by the pomels. And. xii. lyons stode on the one syde and on the other vpon the syxe steppes, so that there was no suche worcke made in anye kyngedome. And all the drinkynge vessels of kynge Salomon were of golde, and all the vessels of the house that was in the forest of Libanon were of precyous golde: for syluer was counted nothynge worthe, in the dayes of Salomon. For the kynges shyppes wente to Tharsis wyth the seruauntes of Hyram: euery thre yere ones came the shyppes to Tharsis, and broughte golde, syluer, Iuory, and apes, and pecockes. * And kynge Salomō passed al the kynges of the earthe, in richesse and wysedome. And all the kynges of the earthe sought the presence of Salomon, to heare hys wysedome that GOD had put in his hearte. And they broughte euery mā hys presente, vessels of syluer, and vessels of golde, raymente, harnesses, spices, horses, and mules, and whatsoeuer might be gotten, yere by yere. * And Salomon had foure thousande stalles for horses, and charettes, and twelue thousande horsemē, whome he bestowed in the charet cyteyes, and some were wyth the kynge at Jerusalem. And he raygned ouer all the kynges that were from Euphrates vnto the lande of the Philistines: and to the border of Egypte. * And the kynge made syluer in Jerusalem as plēteous as stones, and Cedar trees as plenteous as the mulberye trees that grow in the valleyes: & they brought vnto Salomon horses out of Egypt, and oute of all landes. * The reste of the actes of kynge Salomon fyrste and laste, are they not wrytten in the sayinges of Nathan the prophete, and in the prophecye of Ahiab the Silonite, and in the vysyons of Jddo the sear of visions againste Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat? And Salomon raygned in Jerusalem vpon al Israel fourtye yeres. And Salomon slepte with his fathers, and they buryed him in the cytye of Dauid hys father: and Rehoboam his sonne raygned in his steade.

ANd * Rehoboam wente to Sichem: for to Sichem were all Israel come together to make him kynge. And when Jeroboā the sonne of Nabat (whych * was fled into Egypt from the presence of Salomon the kynge) harde it, he returned out of Egipt. And they sēt and called him. And so Jeroboam & all they of Israel came and communed wyth Rehoboam, sayinge: Thy father laid a greuouse yocke vpō vs: nowe therfore, remit thou somwhat of the greuouse seruice of thy father, and of hys heuy yocke that he put vpon vs: and we wyll serue the. And he sayd to them: come agayne vnto me after thre dayes. And the people departed. And kynge Rehoboam counsayled wyth the elders that had stāde before Salomon his father, whyle he yet lyued, and he sayde: what counsayle geue ye me, to answere this people agayne? And they tolde him, saying: If thou be kynde to this people, and shewe thy selfe lowelye to them, and speake louynge wordes to the,

And he sayde vnto them: what aduyse gyue ye, that we maye answere this people, which haue communed with me, sayinge: Abate somewhat of the yocke whyche thy father dyd put vpon vs. And the yonge men that wer growē vp with him, spake vnto him, sayinge: Thus shalte thou answere the people that spake to the, sayinge: Thy father made oure yocke heuye: but make thou it somewhat lyghter for vs. Thus shalte thou say vnto them: my lytle fynger shal be heuyer then my fathers loines.

Then kynge Rehoboam also sent Hadurā that was ruler ouer the trybute, and the childzen of Israell stoned hym wyth stones that he dyed. But kynge Rehoboam made spede to get hym vp to his charret, to flye to Jerusalem. And they of Israel rebelled agaynst the house of Dauid vnto this daye.

3.re.xii.e And whan Rehoboam was come to Jerusalē, * he gathered of the house of Juda and Bē Jamin, myne score thousande chosen men of warre to fyghte against Israel, and to bryng the kyngedōe agayne to Rehoboā. And the worde of the lorde came to Semeiahu the mā of god, sayinge: speake vnto Rehoboam the sonne of Salomon, kynge of Juda, and to all them of Israel that are in Juda & Ben Jamin, & say: thus sayeth the lorde. Ye shal not go vp nor fighte against youre brethren: returne euery man to his house, for this thynge is done of me. And they obeyed the wordes of the Lorde, and returned frō going against Ieroboam. And Rehoboam dwelte in Jerusalem, and builte stronge cities in Juda. He buylded vp Bethlehem, and Etham, and Theko: Bethzur, Socho, and Adullām Gath, and Maresa: and ziph, Adurahim, Lachis and Aseca: zorea, Aialon, and Hebzon, whiche is in Juda and Ben Jamin, stronge cities. And he repayred the stroge holdes, and put captaynes in them, & store of bitayle, and wyne and oyle. And in al cities he put shyldes and speares, & made them exceadynge stroge, hauing Juda and Ben Jamin on hys syde. And the priestes and the Leuites that were in all Israell, resorted to him out of all theyr coastes. For the Leuites lefte theyr suburbes and their possession, and came to Juda & Jerusalem: * for Ieroboam and hys sonnes had 2 pa.13.b caste them out from ministrynge vnto the Lorde. * And he ordeyned hym priestes 3.re.12.g for the hylaultares, for the deuyles & for the calues whyche he had made, and after the Leuites there wente of all the trybes of Israel, suche as submytted their hertes to seke the Lorde god of Israell, and came to Jerusalem, to offer vnto the Lord God of their fathers. And so they strengthed the kyngedome of Juda, and made Rehoboam the sonne of Salomon, mighty thre yere longe, for three yeare they walked in the waye of Dauid and Salomon. And Rehoboā toke him Mahalath the doughter Jerimoth, the sonne of Dauid to wyfe, & Abiahil, the doughter of Eliab the sone of Isai, which bare him childzē Jeus, Samaria, and zaha. And after her he toke * Maaca, the doughter of Absolon whiche bare him Abia, Aethai, ziza, and Selomith 3.re.15.g And Rehoboam loued Maacah the doughter of Absalon aboue al his wiues and cōcubines, for he toke. xviii. wyues and three score concubines, and begat. xxviii. sonnes and. xl. doughters. And Rehoboam made Abiah the sonne of Maacah the chiefe ruler amonge his brethren, and to haue the ouerlight of the kingdome. And he played wisely, and scatered all hys childzen throwoute all the countrees of Juda, & Benjamin, vnto euery stronge cytye. And he gaue them aboundaunce of bytayle, and obtayned many wynes.

And they toke the stroge cyties in Juda, & came to Jerusalē. Then came Semeia, the prophete to Rehoboā and to the Lordes of Juda, that were gathered together within Jerusalē for Sesac and sayd vnto them: thus sayeth the Lord:

A Mat. i. b. SO Abia slepte wyth hys fathers, and they buried hym in the citie of Dauid, and * Asa his son raigned in his stede. In whose dayes the land was in quietnes

And * Asa dyd that was good and ryghte in the eyes of the Lord his God: for he toke away straunge aulters, & the hylaulters, & brake downe the ymages, & cut downe the groues, & commaunded Juda to seke the Lord God of theyr fathers, and to do accordynge to the lawe and cõmaundement. And he put away out of al the cities of Juda, the hylaulters & the ymages: and the kyngdome was quiet before hym. And he builte strong cyties in Juda: because the lande was in rest, & he had no war in those

B yeares. For the Lorde had geuen hym rest. Therfore he sayd vnto Juda: let vs builde these cyties, and make about them walles, towers, gates, and barres, for the lande is yet in rest before vs, because we haue sought the Lord our God: we haue sought hym, and he hath geuen vs rest on euery syde: and so they builte, & it prospered with them. And Asa had an armie of menne that bare shyldes and speares, out of Juda, thre hundred thousande: and out of Benjamin that bare shildes, and drue bowes, two hũdred and foure shore thousande, all these were valeaunte men. And there came oute C agaynst them Zarah the blacke Mozian, * with an hoost of .x. hundred thousande, & 2. pa. 16 c three hundred charettes, and came as farre as Maresa. And Asa went out before hym, and they ioyned the battayle in the valley of Zephata beside Maresa. And Asa and the people that was with hym, folowed after them vnto Gerar. And the blacke Mozes hoofte was ouerthrowne, that there was none of them left, but were destroyed before the Lord and before hys hoofte. And they caryed awaye a mightie great praye. And they smote all the cyteyes rounde aboute Gerar. For the feare of the Lorde came vpon them. And they spoyled all the cyties, and there was exceadynge muche spoyle in them. They smote also the tentes of catel, and caryed awaye plentie of shepe and camels, and returned to Jerusalem.

The Lorde is wyth you, while ye be with hym, and when ye seke hym, he wyll be founde of you: and agayne, when ye forsake hym, he also wyll forsake you. And truely for a lõge season in Jsraell no man sought the true God, no mã regarded the priest that taught them, no man cared for the law. And when any man in his trouble did turne vnto the Lorde God of Jsraell, and sought hym, he was founde of them. And in that time there was no peace to him, that dyd go oute and in: but great sedicion was there among all the inhabiters of the earth. And nacõ was destroyed of nacion: and cytie of cytie: for God did moue all aduersitie among them. Play ye therfore the men, and let not your handes slacke, for your worcke shall be rewarded. And he gathered all Juda and Ben Jamin, and the straungers with them out of Ephraim, Manasse, and Simeō. For there fell many to him out of Israel, when they saw that the Lord his God was with him. So they assembled at Jerusalem, the thyrde moneth, the.xb. yeare of the raigne of Asa. And they offred vnto the Lorde the same tyme of the spoyle whiche they hadde brought. vii. C. Oxen. & .vii. And wholoeuer would not seke the Lorde God of Israell, shoulde dye for it: whether he were small or greate, man or woman. And they sware vnto the Lorde with a lowde voyce, shoutynge and blowyng with trompettes and chawmes. D And all they of Juda reioysed at the othe, for they had sworne vnto the Lorde with all theyr hearte, and soughte him with all theyr luste, and he was found of them. And the Lorde gaue theym reste rounde about on euerye syde. And kynge Asa put Maacha his mother oute of auctoryte, because she had made an abhominable ydoll (of Priapus) in a groue: and Asa brake downe her ydol, and stamped it, and burnt it at the broke Cedron. But all the hilaulters were not taken awaye oute of Israell, though the herte of Asa was perfect all his dayes. And he broughte into the house of God, the thinges that his father had dedicate, and that he him selfe had dedicate: euē syluer, and golde, and Jewelles. And there was no more warre vnto the. * xxxb. yeare Jud.3.b. of the raygne of Asa.

A In the. xxxbi. yeare of the raygne of Asa, 2.Ch.15.c came * Baasa kyng of Israell vp against Juda, and buylte Rama, to the entente that he wold let none passe out or in (safely) to Asa, kynge of Juda. And Asa fette oute golde and syluer, oute of the treasures of the house of the Lorde, and of the kynges house, and sente to Benhadad kynge of Syria, that dwelt at Darmesec, & sayde: There is a confederacyon betwene me and the, betwene my father and thine. Beholde, I haue sente the syluer and gold, that thou B wylte come and breake thyne appoyntmēt with Baasa, kynge of Israell, that he may departe from me. And Benhadad graunted vnto kynge Asa, and sente to the Captaynes of his armye, to the cities of Israel. And they smote Jion, Dan, and Abelmain, and the stronge cyties of Nephthali. And when Baasa hearde thys, he lefte buyldynge of Rama, and let hys worcke cease. And then Asa the kynge toke all Juda, and caryed awaye the stones and timbre of Rama, wherwith Baasa was a buylding, and he buylte therwith Geba and Maspa. At that tyme, Hanani the sear came to Asa C kyng of Juda: and sayd vnto hym: because thou hast trusted in the kyng of Syria, and not rather put thy trust in the Lorde thy God, therefore is the hoost of the kynge of Syria, escaped out of thyne hande. * Had 2 pa.144 not the blacke Moxes, and Lubim, an exceadinge great hoost, with many charettes and horsemē? And yet because thou trustedest in the Lorde, he deliuered theym into thyne hande. And Asa was D wroth with the sear, & put him into a prison house, for he was displeased with hym, because of this thynge. And Asa destroyed certayne of the people the same season. And behold, these dedes of Asa, first, and last, are wrytten in the boke of the kynges of Juda and Israel. And Asa in the. xxxix. yeare of his raigne, fel sicke in his fete, and that dysease contynued verye longe. And * in Ecc.38.a hys sycknes, he sought not the Lorde, but physicyons. And Asa slept with his fathers, and dyed in the. xli. yeare of his raygne. And they buryed hym in hys owne sepulchre, which he had made for him selfe, in the cyte of Dauid. and layed him in the bedde which he had fylled with diuerse kindes of spices, & swete odours, made by the craft of the potecaries. And they burnt very much spyce aboute him.

AND * Jehosaphat his sonne raigned A in his steade, and prenayled against mat.f.V. Israel. And he put souldiers in all the strong cities of Juda, & set rulers in the lande of Juda, & in the cytes of Ephraim, which Asa his father had wonne. And the Lorde was wyth Jehosaphat, because he walcked in the old wayes of his father Dauid, & sought not Baalim. But sought the Lord God of his father, & walcked in hys commaūdementes: & not after the doynges of Israell. And the Lorde stablysched the kyngedome in hys hande, and al they that were in Juda, broughte hym presentes, so that he had aboundaunce of riches and honoure. And he lyfte vp hys hearte vnto the B wayes of the Lorde, and he put downe yet moze of the hilaulters, and groues oute of Juda. In the thirde yeare of hys raygne he sente

And they taughte in Juda, and had the booke of the lawe of GOD wyth them, and wente aboute throwout all the cities of Juda, and taughte the people. And the feare of the Lorde fell vpon all the kyngdomes of the landes that were rounde about Juda, and they fought not agaynste Iehosaphat. And some of the Philistines brought Iehosaphat gyftes, & tribut siluer, & therto the Arabiās brought him catell: euē. vii. M. & vii. C. rammes, & vii. M. and. vii. C. he goates. And so Iehosaphat prospered, and grue vp an hye. ¶ The. xviii. Chapter.

A AND Iehosaphat had aboūdāce of ryches, and honoure, and ioyned affinite with Ahab. And after certaine yeres, he wēt doune to Ahab to Samaria. And Ahab slue manye shepe & oxen for him, & for the people that he had with him, & entreated him to go vp with him vn to Ramoth in Gilead. And Ahab kynge of Jsraell sayde vnto Iehosaphat kynge of Juda: Wylte thou goe with me to Ramoth in Gilead? And he aunswered him: I wyll be as thou, and my people shall be as thyne, & we wyl goe with the to the warre And Iehosaphat sayde vnto the kynge of Jsraell: aske councell I praye the, at the worde of the Lorde, thys same daye. Therfore the kynge of Jsraell gathered together of the prophetes. iiii. C. mē & sayd vnto them: shall we go to Ramoth in Gilead to fyghte, or shoulde I cease? And they sayd: go vp, & God shal delyuer it into the kynges hand. But Iehosaphat sayde: is there yet here neuer a prophete mooze of the lordes, that we myghte aske of hym? And the kynge of Jsraell sayde vnto Iehosaphat: there is yet one man, by whome we maye aske the Lorde. But I hate him: for he neuer prophecieth me good, but alway euel, & the same is Michea the sonne of Jimla. And Iehosaphat sayde: let not the kynge saye so. And the kynge of Jsraell called one of hys chamberlaynes, and sayde: fetch hether quickely Michea the son of Jimla. And the kynge of Jsrael, and Iehosaphat kynge of Juda sate eyther of them on hys seate in their apparell, in a threshing flour beside the gate of Samaria, & all the prophetes prophecied before thē. And one Zedekia the sonne of Chanana had made hym hoznes of yron, and sayde: thus sayeth the Lorde: with these shalte thou ouerthrowe Syria, vntyll they be brought to noughte. And all the prophetes prophecied euen so, sayinge: Goe vp to Ramoth in Gilead, and it shall prospere wyth thee: For the Lorde shall delyuer it into the hande of the kynge. And the messenger that wente to call Michea, spake to him, sayinge: beholde, the wordes of the prophetes speake good to the kyng with one assent, let thy wordes therfore be like one of theirs, that thou speake that whyche is pleasaunte. And Michea sayde: as truly as the Lorde lyueth: Euen what my God sayth, that wyl I speake. And when he was come to the kynge, the kynge sayde vnto him: Michea, shoulde we go to Ramoth in Gilead to fyght, or leaue of? And he sayde: Goe vp, and all shall be well: And they shalbe delyuered into your hande. And the kyng sayde to hym: So and so many times do I charge the, that thou say nothing but the truth to me, in the name of the Lorde. Then he sayd: I dyd see all them of Jsraell scatred in the mountaynes, as shepe that haue no shepehearde. And the Lord sayd: these haue no mayster, let them retourne euery man therfore to hys house in peace. And the kynge of Jsraell sayde vnto Iehosaphat: dyd I not tel the, that he wold not prophecie good vnto me: but euel? Wt he sayde agayne: therfore heare ye the woorde of the LORD: I sawe the LORDE sytte vpon hys seate, and all the companye of heauen stode on hys ryght hande, and on hys lefte. And the Lorde sayde: who shall receiue Ahab kig of Jsrael, that he may go vp, & be ouerthrowē at Ramoth in Gilead? & he said: one saith this, another that. And ther came oute a spyrite, & stode before the

AFter this also, it fortuned that the childrē of Moab, and the childrē

Ammonites cāe against Jehosaphat to ba-

Lorde, and proclaymed fastyng throwout all Juda. And they that were in Juda, gathered thē selues together, to aske counsel of the Lorde. And they came oute of all the cities of Juda to make intercession to the Lorde. And Jehosaphat stode betwene the congregation of Juda and Jerusalem in the house of the LORDE before the newe courte, and sayde: O Lorde God of oure fathers, arte not thou GOD in heauen, and raygnest not thou on all the kyngdomes of the heathen? And in thyne hande is power & myght, & ther is no man that is able to withstande the. Art not thou oure God, which diddest cast out the inhabiters of this lande before thy people Israell, and gauest it to the sede of Abrahā thy louer for euere? 2 par. 6. f And they dwelt therin, and haue built the a tēple therein for thy name, sayinge: If euel come vpon vs, as the swerde of iudgement, pestilēce, or hōgre: thē, if we stād before this house in thy presēce, for thy name is in thys house, and crye vnto the in oure tribulatiō, heare thou, and helpe. And now beholde, the children of Ammon & Moab, and mounte Seir, by whom thou wouldest not let them of Israel goe, when they came out of the lande of Egypt: but they departed from them, and destroyed thē not. Se, howe they rewarde vs, to come for to caste vs out of thy possession, whiche thou haste geuē vs to inherit. O oure God, wylt thou not iudge them? For we haue no myght agaynst thys greate companye that cometh agaynste vs. Neyther wot we what to doe: but oure eyes be vnto thee. And all Juda stode before the Lorde with their younge ones, their wyues, and their children: And there was Jehasiel the sonne of Zacharia, the sonne of Banaia, the sonne of Jehiell, the sonne of Mathania, a Leuite of the sonnes of Asaph. and vpon hym came the spirite of the Lorde, euen in the myddes of the congregation. And he sayde, herken all Juda, and ye enhabiters of Jerusalē, and thou kyng Jehosaphat: Thus sayeth the Lorde vnto you: be not afrayd, nor fayntе hearted by reason of thys greate multitude: for the batel is not yours but Goddes. To morow go ye downe against them: for they come vp at Tiz, and ye shall finde thē at the ende of the broke before the wyldernes of Jeruell. ye shall not nede to fyghte in thys battel: but steppe forth and stande, and beholde, the helpe of the Lorde whych is with you: feare not, nor let youre hearтes fayle you. O ye of Juda, and of Jerusalem. To morow go out against them: for the Lorde wilbe with you. And Jehosaphat bowed his face to the earth, and all Juda, and the enhabiters of Jerusalē fell before the Lord, worshyppinge the Lord. And the Leuites of the children of the Cahathites, and of the children of the Corathites stode vp, to prayse the Lorde God of Israel, with a loude voyce on hye. And when they arose early in the morynge, they gate them out vnto the wylderneſſe of Thekoa. And as they went out, Jehosaphat stode, and sayd: heare me, O Juda, and ye enhabyters of Jerusalē. Put your truſt in the Lord your God, that ye maye be fōde fayethfull. Geue credence to hys prophetes, and so shall ye prospere. And he gaue the people counsel, & set some to singe vnto the Lorde, and to prayse him in the bewtie of holynes, and to go out before the armye, as they wente and to saye: prayse the Lord, for his mercy lasteth euer. And what tyme as they begāne to laude and prayse, then the Lorde stired vp certayne of the children of Ammon and Moab, which layed wayte for thē that were of mounte Seir, whyche were come agaynste Juda. And they were ouerthrowen with strockes amonge them selues. For the childrē of Ammō & Moab, rose agaynste the enhabiters of mounte Seir. And they slewe and destroyed them. And when they hadde made an ende of the enhabiters of Seir, euerye one helped to destroye another amonge them selues. And when Juda came to the edge of the wyldernes, they loked vnto the multitude. And beholde, they were deade carcalles fallen to the erth, & none escaped. And whē Jehosaphat and his people came to take awaye the spoyle of them, they fōde among them aboundaūce of goodes, raiment, & pleasaūt Jewels, whiche they toke for them selues, more then they coulde carye awaye: so that they were thre dayes in gatheryng of the spoyle, it was so much. And the fourth day they assēbled in the valley of blessynge: for there they blessed the Lorde. And therefore they called the name of the same place, the valleye of blessynge vnto thys daye. And so all the men of Juda and Jerusalem, returned with Jehosaphat their heade, for to go agayne to Jerusalem with gladnes: for the Lord had made thē to reioyce ouer their enemyes. And they came to Jerusalē with plaisters & harpes, and shawmes, euen vnto the house of the Lorde. And the feere of God fell on the kyngdomes of all landes, whē they had heard that the Lord foughte agaynste the enemyes of Israell. And they made the shyppes in Esion, Gaber.
